within Section 47 and a separate suit is barred. In the case mentioned in illustration 2 above, G having purchased the interest of R, is his representative, and the question raised by him is one relating to the execution of the decree. Section 47 therefore applies and the suit is barred. So far, the case of a stranger purchaser has been dealt with. Where, however, the decree-holder himself becomes the purchaser in execution of a decree obtained by him, it has been held by the High Courts of Madras<sup>12</sup> and Calcutta,<sup>13</sup> the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>14</sup> and the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of Nagpur<sup>15</sup> and Sind,<sup>16a</sup> that he retains his character of a party to the suit and does not divest himself of his character as such by reason of his having become the purchaser. A question therefore arising between the decree-holder-purchaser and the judgment-debtor in respect of the purchase, is, according to this view, one "between the parties to the suit." On the other hand, the High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>16</sup> Bombay,<sup>17</sup> Lahore<sup>18</sup> and Patna<sup>19</sup> hold that there is no distinction between a decree-holder-purchaser and a stranger purchaser and that the fact of his being a party to the suit is only an accident which will not have the effect of making his position better or worse than that of a stranger purchaser. The observations of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the undermentioned case<sup>20</sup> seem to support the view of the Madras and Calcutta High Courts though it is not clear from the report of the decision that this aspect of the question was before their Lordships' mind. But, where the representative character of the decree-holder-purchaser comes in question in a distinct proceeding, his character as decree-holder in one execution proceeding can have no effect on his position in another and he will be in the same position as that of a stranger purchaser.<sup>21</sup>

Note 19

In applying the principles stated above to cases of disputes between the auction-purchaser and the judgment-debtor arising in proceedings relating to delivery of possession, two questions may arise—

- (1) whether an appeal will lie from an order in such an enquiry, and
- (2) whether the dispute can be agitated in a separate suit.

The answer to the questions depends upon whether the question is one "between the parties," and, secondly, whether it relates to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. All the Courts are agreed that, where the purchaser is a stranger, he can, apart from the summary remedy provided by O. 21 Rr. 95-102, agitate the matter in a separate suit and that if he avails himself of such summary remedy, no appeal would lie from an order passed in such proceedings.<sup>33</sup> The reason is that if the purchaser is not at all a representative of the judgment-debtor (as has been held in some decisions referred to above), the question is not one between the parties, and, even if he is a representative of the judgment-debtor, still, the question is only one between the judgment-debtor and his representatives, and consequently, is not one "between the parties." See Note 7. But when the decree-holder is the purchaser, the question is one "between the parties." Further, according to the High Courts of Madras<sup>23</sup> and Calcutta<sup>24</sup> and the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of

Nagpur,<sup>25</sup> Sind<sup>26</sup> and Peshawar<sup>26a</sup> a question relating to delivery of possession is one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. They proceed on the view that, so far as the decree-holder is concerned, his decree cannot be said to be satisfied until he has either obtained the sale proceeds or possession of the property which represent the money for which he obtained his decree. The High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>27</sup> Bombay,<sup>28</sup> Patna,<sup>29</sup> Lahore<sup>30</sup> and Rangoon<sup>31</sup> and the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>32</sup> hold, on the other hand, that, upon the judgment-debtor's property being sold and the amount due under the decree being realised, the decree is fully executed, discharged and satisfied, and no question relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree remains to be considered, and, that, whether or not the auction-purchaser obtains possession of the property sold, is wholly immaterial for the purposes of the decree. The result is that, according to the former view, where a decree-holder purchases the property in court-auction, his remedy for recovery of possession from the judgment-debtor is only by way of an application under O. 21, R. 95, and a separate suit would be barred. Also, an order passed in execution upon a question relating to delivery of possession between himself and the judgment-debtor would be appealable as a decree under Section 96 read with Section 2 clause (2). According to the latter view, the purchaser has an additional remedy by way of suit and no appeal would lie from an order passed in execution proceedings with respect to a dispute between the purchaser and the judgment-debtor either on the view that it is not a question relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of a decree or on the view that the matter is not one between the parties or their representatives. Notes 19-21

dispossessed again by the judgment-debtor, a suit for possession by the decree-holder is not barred under this Section, inasmuch as the matter in dispute in such a case arises after the satisfaction of the decree and does not relate to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree.<sup>33</sup> A dispute between the decree-holder purchaser and a third party in possession will not come within this Section.<sup>34</sup>

As to cases in which the auction-purchaser is interested in a dispute between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, see Note 49, infra.

20. Transferee from auction-purchaser. — The High Courts of Calcutta<sup>1</sup> and Madras<sup>2</sup> have held that a transferee from a decree-holder purchaser is a representative of the decree-holder. A contrary view has been held by the Chief Court of Lower Burma.<sup>3</sup> The High Court of Madras has also held in the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> that the purchaser from a decree-holder purchaser under a money decree is the representative of the judgment-debtor for the purpose of an enquiry into a question relating to the execution of a distinct decree affecting the same property.

21. Transferee from a party. — The term 'representative' includes, as has been seen already in Note 17 above, the transferee of the interest of a party who, so far as such interest is concerned is bound by the decree. A transferee from a party may be bound by the decree against such party, on any of the following grounds and will consequently be his representative within the meaning of Section 47 —

- (1) Where the suit is one in which any right to immovable property is directly and specifically in question and the transferee gets a transfer of such property pendente lite.<sup>1</sup> See Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. It was, however, held by Mr. Justice Oldfield in the undermentioned case,<sup>1a</sup> that where it is found in the suit that the transferor had no title at all which he could transfer, the transferee pendente lite is not his representative. Mr. Justice Ramesam dissented from this view. It is submitted that the view of Mr. Justice Oldfield cannot be supported on principle. It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that a transferee pendente lite cannot be a representative of the transferor within the meaning of Section 47 for the purpose of attacking the decree-holder's right to sue.<sup>1b</sup>

deposits the value of the portion sold in Court under Section 6 of the Tenancy Act and obtains possession. G is not the representative of S in respect of a decree obtained by M against S and others in respect of his mortgage, inasmuch as, on the deposit under the Tenancy Act, the mortgage attaches to the deposited amount and not to the property transferred.<sup>8</sup>

22. Purchaser from party to suit in which injunction has been granted affecting such property. — A purchaser of property from a party to a suit in which an injunction has been granted affecting such property is not the representative of that party inasmuch as the injunction does not run with the land and the purchaser cannot claim the benefit of the order of injunction.<sup>1</sup>

23. Official Assignee or Official Receiver. — The Official Assignee or Official Receiver, claiming property on behalf of the creditors of an insolvent judgment-debtor is not a "representative" of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of the Section.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 58 to Section 11.

A receiver in insolvency may represent both the creditors and the insolvent according to the circumstances of the case.<sup>1a</sup>

23a. Liquidator of company. — The liquidator of a co-operative society claiming priority over a mortgagee of the judgment-debtor who has obtained a decree on the mortgage and is seeking to execute the decree is not a representative of the judgment-debtor and an order of the executing Court allowing the claim of such liquidator is not one under this Section.<sup>1</sup>

24. Transferee of decree. — Under O. 21 R. 16, the transferee of a decree, by assignment in writing, or by operation of law, may apply to execute the decree and the decree may be executed in the same manner as if the application were made by the decree-holder. The transferee in such a case is a representative of the decree-holder within the meaning of Section 47.<sup>1</sup> So is a transferee from such a transferee.<sup>3</sup> A mere transfer of a portion of the property comprised in a decree for possession is, however, not equivalent to the transfer of the decree and the transferee is therefore not the representative of the decree-holder.<sup>3</sup> The expression "transferee of a decree" includes a transferee of a portion of the decree also.<sup>4</sup> A collusive transfer of the decree is no transfer at all and the transferee in such a case cannot be regarded as the representative of the decree-holder.<sup>5</sup> Similarly the transfer of a right of the plaintiff during the pendency of the suit in which he subsequently obtains a decree, is not the transfer of the decree, and the transferee is not the representative of the decree-holder within the meaning of Section 47.<sup>6</sup>

Notes 24-27

25. Attaching creditor. — Under O. 21 R. 53, clause 3, the holder of a decree, sought to be executed by the attachment of another decree, shall be deemed to be the representative of the holder of the attached decree and to be entitled to execute such attached decree in any manner lawful for the holder thereof. Such an attaching creditor will therefore be a representative of the decree-holder within the meaning of Section 47.<sup>1</sup>

25a. Judgment-debtor under attached decree. — Where in execution of a decree obtained by A against B, a decree obtained by B against C is attached, C cannot be considered a representative of B. An objection therefore by C to A's application for sale of the attached decree is not within this Section.<sup>1</sup>

26. Surety for the performance of a decree. — A person who has not rendered himself personally liable for the performance of a decree is neither a party nor the representative of a party within the meaning of Section 47.<sup>1</sup> See Note 9, ante and Section 145.

27. Question as to who is the representative must be determined by the Court — Clause (3). — It has been seen in Note 16 that the question as to who is a party to the suit or whether a person is such a party is to be determined by the Court in execution. O. 22 R. 5 enacts that where a question arises as to whether any person is or is not the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff or a deceased defendant, such question shall be determined by the Court. Clause 3 of this Section provides that where a question arises as to whether a person is, or is not, the representative of a party, such question shall for the purposes of this Section, be determined by the Court. Under the old Code it was competent to the Court either to stay execution of the decree and refer the parties to have the question determined by a separate suit or to itself determine the question.<sup>1</sup> The present Section makes it obligatory upon the executing Court to determine the question for itself.<sup>2</sup> The words "for the purposes of this Section" in sub-section (3) clearly show that sub-section (3) is not independent of, but is ancillary to sub-section (1) and therefore comes into operation only when there is a question arising between the parties to the suit or their representatives relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. It does not, therefore, apply to a case in which the question is between rival representatives of one party, the other party not having any interest in the question.<sup>2a</sup>

A transferee of the decree being a representative of the decree-holder,<sup>2b</sup> the question whether there has been a transfer of the decree,<sup>3</sup> or whether such transfer is benami for another,<sup>4</sup> or is a valid transfer,<sup>4a</sup> can be decided by the executing Court for the purpose of deciding as to whether the alleged transferee is the representative of the decree-holder or as to who is the real representative.

28. Question must relate to execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. — The expression 'relating to the execution' has not been defined by the Legislature probably with the intention of leaving it flexible; it is comprehensive enough to include any question, the order in respect of which furtherers or hinders or affects the manner of the carrying out of the execution of the decree.<sup>1</sup> It would apply

Where there are several judgment-debtors under a decree and execution is taken out against some of them as regards their shares in the property, there being no question as to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree as between the decree-holder and the other judgment-debtors, any objection raised by the latter to the execution will not be covered by this Section.<sup>3</sup>

Note 30

30. Question as to the existence of the decree. — It has been seen in Note 8 to Section 38 ante, that a question of territorial or pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court which passed the decree cannot be allowed to be raised in execution proceedings,<sup>1a</sup> but that a question as to jurisdiction of the Court in other matters rendering the decree a nullity can be entertained even by the executing Court. Thus, a question whether a decree is a nullity and not in existence by reason of the fact that it was passed by a Court without jurisdiction<sup>1</sup> or that it was passed against a dead person,<sup>2-3</sup> is a question which can be entertained in execution. Similarly, the executing Court can see whether the decree to be executed is a subsisting and operative decree capable of execution.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, again, the executing Court can, in a case where a decree is lost or destroyed, find out what are the terms of the decree or whether the decree was in existence.<sup>5</sup> See Note 8 to Section 38 ante for a full discussion.

It has been held that the want of proper representation of a minor against whom a decree has been passed cannot be gone into by the Court executing such decree,<sup>5a</sup> the reason being that the decree is not a nullity in such cases.

But, though the executing Court can go into the question of jurisdiction or of the existence of the decree, the question cannot be regarded as one "relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction, of the decree" within the meaning of Section 47 and the refusal of the executing Court to execute the decree on the ground of want of jurisdiction will not bar a separate suit by the aggrieved party or operate as res judicata.<sup>6</sup>

31. Pre-decree matters.— There is a conflict of opinion on the question whether a Court executing a decree can, under this Section, entertain an objection to the execution of the decree, based on an arrangement between the parties prior to the date of the decree. The High Courts of Calcutta,<sup>1</sup> Lahore<sup>2</sup> and Rangoon<sup>3</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur<sup>4</sup> have held that it cannot. The High Courts of Allahabad<sup>5</sup> and Bombay<sup>6</sup> have held broadly that it can. The High Court of Madras has expressed divergent views on the question. One group of cases hold that an agreement postponing the execution of a decree for a time is a matter that can be gone into in execution, notwithstanding the fact that the effect of postponing execution will be virtually to vary the terms of the decree.<sup>7</sup> This view is based mainly on the long course of decisions in the Madras Presidency to that effect. Another group of cases hold that except in cases of agreements relating to execution,<sup>7a</sup> a pre-decree arrangement which attacks the decree itself cannot be gone into in execution on the broad ground that it would be most dangerous to allow the decree itself to be attacked in execution.<sup>8</sup> It is submitted with respect that the first of the two views of the Madras High Court is not correct on principle. If an executing Court cannot go behind the decree, i.e., cannot vary, add to or alter its terms, but must execute the decree as it stands, then it cannot deal with a pre-decree arrangement as to its execution, etc., which must necessarily have the effect of varying the decree to some extent. Further, Section 47 speaks of questions relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree. The words "the decree" refer to the decree passed by the Court and of which the decree-holder is seeking execution and not any decree as agreed to by parties.

Section 47 Note 33

33. Decree incapable of execution.—As has been seen in Note 2 ante, this Section bars a suit to enforce an executable judgment. But to admit of an application under the Section, the decree must not only be subsisting or in course of execution but also be one capable of being executed<sup>1</sup> and the question whether a decree is capable or incapable of execution is, as has been seen in Note 30 ante, pre-eminently one coming under this Section<sup>2</sup> and a decision on such a question is a decree.<sup>3</sup> A decree which merely declares the rights of parties and does not direct any act to be done, in other words, a decree in which no definite order is made which the Court contemplates enforcing by execution, is merely a declaratory decree which is incapable of being executed and only a separate suit and not an application under this Section will lie to enforce the rights so declared by the decree.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, a decree which does not provide for a certain relief though it declares a right to such relief is one not capable of being executed.<sup>5</sup> Thus, a partition decree without actually allotting shares or a decree for joint possession is incapable of being executed; a suit, and not an application under Section 47, is the proper remedy to obtain a partition by metes and bounds.<sup>6</sup> So also, where a relief could not be obtained,<sup>7</sup> or an objection could not have been taken<sup>8</sup> in execution, or where the decree is vague and indefinite,<sup>9</sup> or where the decree becomes incapable of execution by events subsequent to the decree,<sup>10</sup> or where the decree is fully executed,<sup>11</sup> or where a fresh suit is ordered,<sup>12</sup> the remedy is only by way of suit and not an application under this Section, the decree in all these cases being incapable of execution. Scheme-decrees under Section 92, Civil Procedure Code, generally are declaratory, but it cannot be laid down as a general rule that all scheme-decrees are always declaratory and can never be executable. The question whether a decree framing a scheme is executable or not depends upon the language and on the scope of the decree or of that particular part of the decree in respect of which the question arises. Such a decree may, in part, be declaratory, and, in part, be directory.<sup>13</sup> Directions in such a decree are matters intended to be enforced in execution.<sup>14</sup> Otherwise, where it is merely declaratory, it cannot be enforced under Section 47 in execution.<sup>15</sup>

34. Questions arising between the preliminary and final decrees.—Where provision is made under the Code, as in suits on mortgage or for partition or for administration of an estate, for the passing of preliminary and final decrees, matters arising after, and out of, the preliminary decree, but before the final decree, are not matters relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of any decree, inasmuch as the matters in controversy in the suit are not completely disposed of, the only decree finally determining the suit and as such executable being the final decree. Thus, an order directing accounts to be taken in an administration suit,<sup>1</sup> or an order appointing or refusing to appoint a commissioner for effecting a partition in a partition suit,<sup>2</sup> or an order on an application for final decree,<sup>3</sup> or for making absolute a decree nisi for sale, foreclosure or redemption of a mortgage,<sup>4</sup> is an order passed in the suit itself and does not come under this Section. Where a preliminary decree for redemption in a mortgage suit is passed and allowed to be barred by time without the decree being made final, the Section is no bar to a fresh suit for redemption.<sup>5</sup> decree,<sup>2</sup> is sold to or taken possession of by the decree-holder, the proper remedy for the judgment-debtor to recover the whole or the excess land is by an application under this Section and not by a separate suit, as the matter is one in execution between the parties to the suit. Where, however, such possession is taken by the decree-holder, not through the officer of the Court but by his own act, the judgment-debtor is not barred by Section 47 from bringing a suit to recover land thus wrongly taken as the possession could not be said to have been taken in execution of a decree.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, where monies are improperly realised by a third party in defiance of an order of injunction, the question is not one between the parties and is not within the Section.<sup>4</sup> But monies unduly or wrongly realised by the decree-holder as due under a decree,<sup>5</sup> or surplus sale-proceeds or jewels wrongly seized,<sup>6</sup> or moveables misappropriated,<sup>7</sup> are recoverable only under this Section and not by a separate suit. Similarly, where the decree-holder, who has realised smaller sums in full satisfaction owing to mistake or the misrepresentation of the judgment-debtor, wants to claim the balance, the question as to the deficient execution is one relating to the execution of the decree, and a separate suit in respect thereof is barred.<sup>8</sup>

Section 47 A suit for damages for fraudulent execution of a decree will similarly not be barred
Notes 36-40 by Section 47.<sup>3</sup>

37. Question as to seizure of wrong property. — On the same principle as that mentioned in Note 36 ante, the question of the liability of the plaintiff for loss sustained by wrongful seizure of property in execution is not within the Section.<sup>1</sup>

38. Question of mesne profits. — As observed in Note 1 above, one of the changes in the Section is the omission of the provisions relating to mesne profits contained in clauses (a) and (b) of Section 244 of the old Code. Under that Code, where the decree awarded mesne profits, the amount had to be ascertained only in execution proceedings and not in suit,<sup>1</sup> a suit for such ascertainment being maintainable only where the decree was silent as to the mesne profits.<sup>2</sup> Under the present Code, however, the amount must be ascertained under O. 20 R. 12 by the decree itself and not in execution.<sup>2a</sup> An enquiry as to mesne profits, therefore, under the present Code, is not a proceeding in execution but a proceeding in continuation of the original suit,<sup>3</sup> except in those cases where the decree for mesne profits was passed under the old Code. In the latter case, the application as to mesne profits is a proceeding in execution and not in the suit itself even though it was filed after the new Code had come into force.<sup>4</sup>

39. Question of restitution of property taken in execution, when the decree is amended, varied or reversed. — See Notes 3 to 6 and 30 to Section 144, infra.

40. Question of adjustment of decree. — The question whether a decree has been adjusted or not is one relating to the discharge of the decree and therefore one falling under this Section.<sup>1</sup> An application that adjustment of a decree be recorded as certified,<sup>2</sup> or for refund of money paid out of Court in adjustment of a decree,<sup>3</sup> or a question whether an adjustment of decree out of Court is fraudulent,<sup>4</sup> must all be dealt with under this Section. But, it was held in the undermentioned case<sup>4a</sup> that the question whether a petition of adjustment and the order thereon correctly represented the intention of the parties does not fall within this Section.

The Court executing the decree cannot, under O. 21 R. 2, recognise an adjustment of the decree out of Court which had not been recorded as certified within the time allowed by law, and therefore a plea of such adjustment, though it is one relating to the satisfaction of the decree, cannot be dealt with under this Section,<sup>5</sup> nor will a regular suit lie for a declaration that the decree has been satisfied and for an injunction restraining the decree-holder from executing the decree, inasmuch as such a matter is one relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree.<sup>6</sup> Similarly, a separate suit does not lie to set aside a sale in execution of a decree on the ground that the decree had been adjusted out of Court when such an adjustment had not been certified as required within the time.<sup>7</sup> But where a decree has been executed, a suit will lie to recover the money paid out of Court in adjustment of the decree but not recognised by the executing Court,<sup>8</sup> or for damages for breach of an agreement against execution,<sup>9</sup> or of a contract to enter up satisfaction of the decree.<sup>10</sup>

See O. 21 R. 2 for a full discussion of the whole matter.

41. Agreement against execution of decree.—In Note 31 above, agreements against execution entered into before the passing of the decree have been dealt with. Where, after the passing of the decree, the parties enter into an agreement against execution of the decree, the question whether such an agreement can be pleaded as a bar to execution depends upon the nature of the agreement and the intention of the parties. If it is clearly the intention of the parties to abandon the decree and to enter into a new and different contract in supersession of the decree, the contract may form the basis of a subsequent suit and the Section is no bar.<sup>1</sup> Where, however, the agreement does not so supersede the decree but is merely pleaded as a bar to execution, the executing Court can inquire into and decide the matter under the Section,<sup>2</sup> subject to the provisions of O. 21 R. 2, where such an agreement amounts to an adjustment of the decree.<sup>3</sup> In Oudh Commercial Bank Ltd. v. Bind Basni Kuer,<sup>4</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"If it appears to the Court acting under Section 47 that the true effect of the agreement was to discharge the decree forthwith in consideration of certain promises by the debtor, then no doubt the Court will not have occasion to enforce the agreement in execution proceedings, but will leave the creditor to bring a separate suit upon the contract. If, on the other hand, the agreement is intended to govern the liability of the debtor under the decree and to have effect upon the time or manner of its enforcement, it is a matter to be dealt with under Section 47. In such a case, to say that the creditor may, perhaps, have a separate suit, is to misread the Code, which, by requiring all such matters to be dealt with in execution discloses a broader view of the scope and functions of an executing Court."

42. Contribution among judgment-debtors. — Where one of two or more judgment-debtors purchases the decree in full<sup>1</sup> or in part,<sup>2</sup> or is compelled to pay the whole of the decree amount himself in execution,<sup>3</sup> a suit by such judgment-debtor against others for contribution and recovery of his share of the common debt is not barred, as such a question cannot be said to relate to matters in execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree between the parties to the suit within the meaning of the Section. As regards the general right to sue for contribution of costs paid under a decree, see Note 34 to Section 35 ante.

43. Maladministration of estate of deceased judgment-debtor. — Where a decree-holder, unable to realise the decree amount out of the estate of a deceased judgment-debtor, raises a question as to the maladministration of the estate by the executors, the matter is one which involves a much wider question than one merely relating to the execution of the decree and cannot be decided under this Section. A suit will, therefore, lie against the executors for the administration of the estate and for an account on the footing of maladministration.<sup>1</sup>

44. Stay of execution. — Under the old Code, there was a difference of opinion as to whether a question of stay of execution of a decree is one relating to the execution of the decree, one group of cases holding that it is,<sup>1</sup> and another, that it is not.<sup>2</sup> In order to remove this conflict, the words "or to the stay of execution thereof" were inserted in clause (c) of Section 244 by Act VII of 1888, after which, the trend of decisions was uniform in holding that such questions are within the Section.<sup>3</sup> The words "or to the stay of execution thereof" were, however, omitted from Section 47 of this Code and the omission has again created a conflict of views in the various High Courts. Three such different views, at least, have been expressed —

(1) That the question of stay of execution is clearly a matter relating to the execution of the decree and that the decision on such a question is a decree and is therefore appealable.<sup>4</sup>

(2) That such a question is one relating to execution but that the decision thereon cannot be said to be one "on the rights of the parties" and consequently cannot amount to a decree and is therefore not appealable.<sup>5</sup>

(3) The question does not relate to execution at all within the meaning of this Section.<sup>6</sup>

The first two views proceed on the assumption that omission of the words in Section 47 by the Legislature was by reason of their being considered superfluous and a surplusage.<sup>7</sup> The last view proceeds on the assumption that the omission was deliberate and intended to show that they should not be considered to be within the Section. It is submitted with respect that the last view is not correct. Reference to the history of the enactment is not a legitimate method of interpreting a Section where there is no ambiguity of any kind and there is nothing in the language of the Section itself that a stay of execution is not a matter relating to execution.

It has been held by the High Court of Madras that it is only where the order in question as to stay of execution is passed by the Court executing the decree that the matter will come under Section 47. An order for stay by the Appellate Court in an appeal from the decree is not one within Section 47.<sup>8</sup>

48. Question of liability of certain property to attachment and sale. —

All objections to attachment and sale in execution of a decree raised between parties to the suit or their representatives on the ground that the properties are not liable to be attached,<sup>1</sup> or are not saleable in execution of that decree,<sup>2</sup> are matters coming ground that the property is his own and not that of the debtor,<sup>1</sup> or that he has a charge or lien thereon,<sup>2</sup> the question is one in execution of the decree between a party and a representative of the opposite party and is within the Section. Where, in execution of a mortgage decree, the mortgaged properties are brought to sale, and the legal representative of the judgment-debtor objects on the ground that the property is not that of the judgment-debtor or that it could not have been validly mortgaged by him, the objection is really one which attacks the decree itself which directs the sale of the properties. Such an objection, therefore, cannot be gone into by the executing Court, but should be raised in a separate suit.<sup>4</sup> But, where in execution of a mortgage decree, properties not mortgaged are brought to sale as part of the mortgaged properties, the objection of the legal representative that such properties are his own properties will fall under this Section.<sup>5</sup>

Similarly, the objection to the execution of the decree that the debts are tainted with immorality or illegality can be gone into in execution proceedings under this Section.<sup>3</sup> The question whether the property is ancestral or self-acquired in the hands of the sons to satisfy their father's debts is again one relating to the execution of the decree and the objection, therefore, that ancestral property has been sold as self-acquired or vice versa is one coming under the Section.<sup>4</sup>

But where a suit on a promissory note is filed against the eldest brother (in a joint Hindu family) as a personal claim and a decree is obtained, the question of the binding character of the debt as against the other members of the joint family who are not sons or descendants of the judgment-debtor cannot be gone into in execution proceedings.<sup>5</sup>

48. Question as to the transferability of the property proceeded against.

—Where application is made to execute a decree for money by the attachment and sale of an occupancy holding, the judgment-debtor is entitled under this Section to raise the question that the holding is not saleable according to custom or usage and to have that question determined in execution proceedings.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 45 above.

49. Question between decree-holder and judgment-debtor in which auction-purchaser is interested. — A question relating to execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree "between the parties" must be determined under this Section.<sup>1</sup> The fact that the auction-purchaser is interested in such a question does not take it out of the Section.<sup>2</sup> In Prosunna Kumar Sunyal v. Kalidas Sunyal,<sup>3</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"When a question has arisen as to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of a decree between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, the fact that the purchaser who is no party to the suit is interested in the result, has never been held a bar to the application of the Section."

As to what is a question between the parties, see Note 5, ante.

51. Setting aside sales in execution. — As between the judgment-debtor and a decree-holder an objection to the sale in execution of the decree or an application to set it aside is one in execution and must be determined in execution and not by a separate suit.<sup>1</sup> But the power to set aside the sale, in cases where the grounds for so setting it aside fall within O. 21 Rr. 89, 90 or 91, is circumscribed by those provisions. To hold otherwise would be to render those provisions superfluous so far as parties to the suit or their representatives are concerned. An application to set aside a sale on grounds not within the purview of those provisions must be dealt with under this Section independently of those provisions.<sup>2</sup>

52. Decree obtained by fraud. — A question whether a decree was obtained by fraud or collusion is not one which relates to the execution of the decree but one which affects its very subsistence and validity and such a question can only be raised by a separate suit.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 29 supra and Section 38 Note 8. Therefore, where not only the sale is impugned as being fraudulent, but the very decree in execution of which the sale took place is impeached as having been obtained by fraud, the Section is not a bar to a suit to set aside the sale thereunder.<sup>2</sup>

53. Fraud in execution proceedings. — Where a judgment-debtor impeaches the validity of an execution sale, not on the ground of fraud in the publishing and conducting of the sale, but on the ground of fraud in execution proceedings which preceded and led up to the sale, the question, as between the parties, is one falling within this Section and not under O. 21 R. 90.<sup>1</sup>

54. Fraud anterior to sale. — See Note 53 above.

55. Fraud in publishing and conducting the sale. — As has been seen in Note 51 ante, the question of setting aside an execution sale on any ground is, as between the parties, one falling under this Section. This would therefore include an application to set aside a sale for fraud in publishing and conducting the sale.<sup>1</sup> The question, however, whether such an application falls within the terms of O. 21 R. 90 is important because, if it does, the Court cannot, except under the conditions specified in that Rule, set aside the sale. (See Note 51.) It is also important for the purpose of determining whether it is a decree or only an appealable order. For, if it is one covered by O. 21 R. 90, it is only an appealable order though it may fall under Section 47 also, inasmuch as Section 2 clause (2) enacts that the word "decree" includes the determination of any question within Section 47 but does not include any adjudication from which appeal lies as an appeal from an order. The word "fraud" was absent in Section 311 of the old Code corresponding to O. 21 R. 90 of the present Code, and, in the absence thereof, it was held that an application to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud could only come under Section 244 (now Section 47) and not under Section 311.<sup>1a</sup> Under the present Code, however, O. 21 R. 90 covers such cases<sup>2</sup> though the provisions of the new Code cannot retrospectively affect the character of an order passed under the old Code and take it out of the Section.<sup>3</sup>

An application to set aside a sale on grounds not within O. 21 Rr. 90 and 91 falls, as has been seen in Note 51 ante, under Section 47 only and the order on such application is appealable as a decree.<sup>4</sup> See Notes under O. 21 R. 90, Note 10.

56. Other grounds for setting aside sale. — See Notes 57 to 71, infra.

57. Property not saleable. — See Note 45 above.

58. Reversal of decree. — As has been seen in Note 51 ante, the question between the parties of setting aside the sale on any ground (including the ground of reversal or variation of the decree) is one in execution falling within this Section. As to whether a claim for restitution of properties taken in execution of such a decree is one in execution of the decree or not, see Notes 30 and 33 of Section 144 infra.

59. Amendment of decree after sale. — See Notes 39 and 58 above and Notes 4, 13, 30 and 33 to Section 144 infra.

60. Ex parte decree set aside after sale. — Where a property is sold in execution of an ex parte decree and purchased by the decree-holder and the decree is subsequently set aside under O. 9 R. 13, an application under this Section and not a suit is the remedy to set aside the sale.<sup>1</sup> See Note 51 ante.

61. Want of notice under O. 21 R. 16, 22 and 66. — An objection against a sale in execution of a decree on the ground that no notice was served on the judgment-debtor under O. 21 R. 22,<sup>1</sup> or under Rule 66,<sup>2</sup> and an application to set it aside on that ground is one falling under the Section. Where, however, such notice is not necessary the question cannot be considered to be one under the Section.<sup>3</sup> The question of the irregularity or illegality of a notice under O. 21 R. 16, and its effect upon execution proceedings and sale is, as between the parties, one that must be determined under this Section.<sup>4</sup>

62. Purchase by decree-holder without permission. — A judgment-debtor seeking to set aside a sale of his land on the ground that the decree-holder has purchased it without permission to bid, must proceed only under this Section and not by a suit.<sup>1</sup>

63. Setting aside sale on deposit. — Under the old Code, an order under Section 310 A (O. 21 R. 89) was not appealable as an order and it was held that a question of setting aside a sale on deposit of the decree amount was, as between the parties, one under Section 244 (now Section 47) of the Code, and open to second appeal.<sup>1</sup> Under the present Code, however, such an order is only an appealable order and, though it may be one under Section 47 also, is not a decree open to second appeal.<sup>2</sup> See Note 55 above.

64. Judgment-debtor having no saleable interest. — Order 21 R. 91 enacts that a purchaser at the execution sale can apply to have the sale set aside on the ground that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property sold. Obviously, such an application is not one between parties to the suit and does not lie under Section 47.<sup>1</sup> A judgment-debtor seeking to set aside the sale on the ground that he had no saleable interest cannot do so under O. 21 R. 91. Nor can he, as against the auction-purchaser, do so under Section 47, as the question is not one between parties to the suit.<sup>2</sup> As against the decree-holder, however, such an application will clearly fall under Section 47 and a fresh suit will be barred in respect of such relief.<sup>3</sup> But where the sale is in execution of a mortgage decree, an objection that the judgment-debtor had no saleable interest in the property is really an attack on the decree itself and cannot be gone into by the executing Court.<sup>4</sup>

65. Sale in contravention of the Transfer of Property Act. — A sale of property in contravention of the provisions of Order 34 of this Code can be set aside, as between the parties to the suit, only by an application under this Section and not by a suit.<sup>1</sup>

66. Sale in contravention of stay order. — An application to set aside a sale held in contravention of a stay order is as between the parties to the suit one under this Section.<sup>1</sup> But where the original application for stay as well as the order for stay is without jurisdiction, as where an application was made to the original Court after the transfer of the decree to the Collector for execution under Section 68 of the Code, an application to set aside the sale on the ground of its being one in contravention of the stay order is not one under Section 47.<sup>2</sup>

67. Sale in contravention of injunction order. — Where a judgment-debtor seeks to set aside the sale on the ground that it was held during the pendency of a temporary injunction, his remedy, if any, is by an application under this Section and not by a separate suit.<sup>1</sup> It has been held that where a sale takes place in contravention of an express direction of the Court, the latter has an inherent power to set it aside suo motu.<sup>2</sup>

68. Sale not warranted by decree. — The proper procedure to set aside a sale on the ground that it is not warranted by the terms of the decree or that it was held in contravention of the directions contained therein is, as between the parties to the suit, by an application under this Section and not by a suit.<sup>1</sup>

69. Sale under time-barred decree. — A separate suit does not lie to set aside a sale in execution of a decree on the ground that at the time of execution it was barred by time; the remedy as between the parties to the suit is by an application under this Section.<sup>1</sup> See also Order 21 Rule 94.

70. Sale without jurisdiction.— Even where the sale is held without jurisdiction, as where, at the time of the sale the judgment-debtor is dead,<sup>1</sup> or the property is outside the territorial jurisdiction of the Court,<sup>2</sup> a party seeking to set aside the sale on that ground must do so under this Section. Section 47
Notes 70-71a

71. Other grounds for setting aside sale.— A judgment-debtor may seek to set aside an execution sale on grounds other than the ones set out above in Notes 54 to 70. The following are some of the cases in which only an application under this Section lies and not a separate suit—

(a) Where the receiver of an insolvent's estate seeks to set aside an execution sale on the ground of a prior adjudication of the debtor.<sup>1</sup>

(b) An objection by the judgment-debtor to the sale founded on a misdescription of the terms of the decree in the execution application.<sup>2</sup>

(c) An objection by the judgment-debtor that the execution sale was void on the ground that the auction-purchaser, the liquidator of the decree-holder company, was not competent to bid for, and purchase, any property as liquidator under law.<sup>3</sup>

(d) Where the decree-holder seeks to set aside a sale on the ground of material irregularity in that the permission granted to him to bid has been modified behind his back.<sup>4</sup>

(e) Where the sale is sought to be set aside on the ground of failure of the purchaser to make the deposit of 25 per cent. required under O. 21 R. 84.<sup>5</sup>

(f) Where it is sought to be set aside on the ground that the decree has been satisfied before the sale.<sup>6</sup>

(g) Where the decree-holder seeks to set aside the sale on the ground that the decree-holder's own property was sold by mistake instead of that of the judgment-debtor.<sup>7-8</sup> See also Note 6 to O. 21 R. 64.

(h) Where the sale is sought to be set aside on the ground that the petition to set aside the sale was compromised behind the applicant's back and in fraud of his rights,<sup>9</sup> or by the judgment-debtor's son without authority.<sup>10</sup>

(i) Where a receiver appointed under O. 40 R. 1 purchases the property in court-sale in the capacity of decree-holder without obtaining special leave for that purpose, even though he has obtained leave under O. 21 R. 72.<sup>11</sup>

72. "Shall be determined by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit." — All objections that can be raised in execution under this Section "shall be determined by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit."<sup>1</sup> The words "by a separate suit" have given rise to a conflict of decisions as to whether the bar of suit applies only where the questions are raised by a party as plaintiff in a suit, or whether it applies to such questions raised in defence to a suit as well. The High Court of Calcutta has held that the Section bars a plea in defence also on the ground that the words "shall be determined by the Court executing the decree" give exclusive jurisdiction over the matter to the Court executing the decree, and cannot be merely construed to mean that the executing Court must determine it if it is raised in the course of execution proceedings.<sup>2</sup> But it has been also held by that High Court that where the defendant has been kept out of knowledge of the execution proceedings, until after the suit has been brought, by the fraud of the decree-holder, he could raise such objections by way of defence to the suit.<sup>2a</sup>

The High Court of Madras has, on the other hand, held that the bar is not applicable to pleas in defence.<sup>3</sup> It has followed the undermentioned case of the Calcutta High Court<sup>4</sup> which held that the words "by a separate suit" cannot be taken to mean "in a separate suit." In view of the fact, however, that the said case of the Calcutta High Court has been overruled by a later Full Bench of that Court,<sup>5</sup> the Madras decisions will have to be reconsidered.

It has been held that a plea that a suit is barred under this Section cannot be raised for the first time in appeal when it has not been raised in the first Court.<sup>6</sup>

73. "Determined," meaning of. — The word "determined" shows that the questions contemplated by the Section are to be finally disposed of and the effect of the word is therefore to give the Court executing the decree jurisdiction to dispose of finally such questions by granting appropriate relief.<sup>1</sup>

74. "Court executing the decree," meaning of. — "The Court executing the decree" means only the Court executing the decree at the time when the application is made. Therefore, it does not include the Court which has executed the decree and has thereby become functus officio,<sup>1</sup> or an Appellate Court.<sup>2</sup> A Collector executing a decree transferred to him is not a "Court executing a decree" within the meaning of this Section.<sup>3</sup> The Court which sends the decree to the Collector remains "the Court executing the decree" and hence a question coming under this Section can be entertained by such Court even after the decree has been transferred to the Collector for execution.<sup>4</sup> The words "the Court executing the decree" do not restrict the applicability of the Section to proceedings initiated by the decree-holder. The Section also applies to proceedings initiated by the judgment-debtor.<sup>5</sup> See also Note 2 to Section 70, infra.

Section 47

75. Powers of the executing Court. — See Notes to Section 38 generally.

76. Power to construe decree. — Where there is no ambiguity in the terms of a decree the Court is bound to interpret it according to its plain meaning and cannot ignore its terms or assume mistake on the part of the parties.<sup>1</sup> Where, however, there is any ambiguity in the decree, the executing Court may, and should, construe the decree in order to ascertain its precise meaning<sup>2</sup> and, for this purpose, it may refer to the judgment and the pleadings in the case.<sup>3</sup> In construing an appellate decree, the pleadings and the decree of the trial Court may be referred to,<sup>4</sup> but not the statements in the judgment of the first Court which are not based on pleadings.<sup>5</sup> See also Note 9 to Section 38, ante.

77. Rules of construction of decree. — There is no general rule for construing decrees; each case depends on itself.<sup>1</sup> The following general principles may, however, be found useful in interpreting decrees —

1. A decree should be construed in accordance with law.<sup>2</sup> Where, therefore, the judgment admits of two meanings, it is wrong to construe it in a way which violates both law and equity.<sup>3</sup>

2. Where the decree is consistent with either of two inconsistent views, that interpretation which is in conformity with the judgment should be adopted.<sup>4</sup>

3. A construction which may, in future, result in a multiplicity of suits, should be avoided.<sup>5</sup>

4. A decree must be construed in a fair and reasonable way so as to accelerate its execution<sup>6</sup> and the benefit of the doubt ought to go to the judgment-debtor.<sup>7</sup>

5. In cases of conflicting descriptions of property in the decree, applicable to two different sets of facts, that which is certain, stable, and the least likely to have been mistaken, must prevail.<sup>8</sup>

6. The interpretation to be put upon a consent decree ought to be the same as that to be placed on the original agreement between the parties.<sup>9</sup>

6a. Similarly a decree passed on the basis of an award should be construed in the light of the award.<sup>9a</sup>

7. Where a decree is passed in favour of A conditional on his paying into Court a certain sum of money "within 30 days of the decree becoming final," a payment made within the time extended by Section 12 of the Limitation Act, but after the expiry of 30 days from the decree, is within time.<sup>10</sup> Similarly, where the decree directs A to pay a certain sum to another within a certain time as a condition precedent to recovery of possession, the payment made within the same period from the date of the appellate decree is valid.<sup>11</sup>

8. A direction that the defendant "do pay a certain sum of money" imposes prima facie a personal liability on the defendant,<sup>12</sup> though, no doubt, the words are not conclusive of the question.<sup>12a</sup>

9. A decree must be construed as a whole.<sup>13</sup>

Section 47
Notes 79-82

79. Power to grant relief against forfeiture and penalty. — A compromise decree is like a contract between the parties, subject to the exercise of the powers of a Court of equity to relieve against forfeitures and penalties, such powers being exercisable just as if a contract between the parties had contained the provisions in respect of forfeiture or penalty.<sup>1</sup> In the case of such decrees, therefore, the executing Court can relieve against the forfeiture and penalty imposed by the decree.<sup>2</sup> The principle however will not apply where the decree is not based on any compromise. The effect of relieving against the penal clauses in such cases will be to attack the validity of the decree and cannot, therefore, be done by the Court executing the decree.<sup>3</sup> The High Court of Bombay has, however, held in the undermentioned cases<sup>4</sup> that the executing Court can give relief to a party to the decree against the consequences of his default in not observing the obligations imposed upon him by the decree.

An award is not a compromise or a contract and an executing Court cannot modify it on the ground of giving relief against a penalty imposed by it.<sup>5</sup>

80. Costs. — An objection to the execution of the decree as regards costs, on the ground that the objectors were not liable to pay the same under the decree, is one under Section 47.<sup>1</sup> See as to costs generally Note 28 to Section 35.

81. Interest. — The question of payment of interest by way of compensation in cases of restitution of money ordered to be refunded on an execution sale being set aside is one within the Section.<sup>1</sup> See also Section 34 generally and Note 23 to Section 144. Where a decree of Court which awards mesne profits under O. 20 R. 12 of the Code is silent as to interest, it is not open to the executing Court to fix the rate of interest and execute the decree allowing interest.<sup>2</sup>

82. Court may treat a proceeding as a suit or vice versa — Sub-section (2). — As has been observed in Note 1, this sub-section is new and gives legislative sanction to the practice followed under the old Code. A Court can, under this sub-section, treat a proceeding under the Section as a suit, or a suit as a proceeding.<sup>1</sup> The rule is intended to obviate the injustice that might be caused to the parties by

The power under this Section is discretionary and may be exercised according to the circumstances of each case.<sup>4</sup> But two essential conditions must be satisfied before the Court can exercise its discretion and treat a suit as an application —

2. the application should not have been barred by limitation at the date of the institution of the suit.<sup>6</sup>

The power exercisable under this sub-section may not only be exercised by the original Court, but also by the Appellate Court, subject, however, to the same two conditions, namely, that the original Court had jurisdiction to execute the decrees<sup>7</sup> and that the suit was filed within the limitation period prescribed for applying under this Section.<sup>8</sup>

The discretion given under this sub-section must be exercised when the plaint or application is filed, and after the procedure has once been determined at that stage (subject to the usual control of an appellate or revisional Court) it cannot thereafter be altered.<sup>8a</sup> Hence, it has been held that where a claim suit has been filed and has proceeded to its conclusion, a Court in which an application for execution is subsequently filed cannot treat such suit as an application to take a step-in-aid of execution for the purpose of saving limitation in respect of the subsequent execution application.<sup>8b</sup>

Where an application falling under this Section is dismissed on the merits and the applicant then brings a suit for the same relief, the suit cannot be converted into an application under this Section, on its being contended that such suit is barred by this Section. The remedy of the aggrieved party was to have appealed against the decision dismissing his prior application.<sup>8c</sup>

Where a proceeding in execution is treated, under this Section, as a suit, the judgment-debtor who objects to the execution of the decree is in the position of a plaintiff and therefore he has to pay the court-fee due to the Government in respect of the suit.<sup>9</sup>

83. Objection as to limitation, when to be considered. — An objection as to limitation may be taken at any stage of the execution proceedings if the facts upon which the objection is based are patent upon the face of the record.<sup>1</sup>

See also Note 23 to Section 11.

84. Appeal. — Where an order amounts to a determination of a question between the parties and relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, it will be a decree within the meaning of Section 2 cl. (2) and is appealable as such under Section 96.<sup>1</sup> As to whether every such order is appealable, see Note 86, infra. The question of the right to appeal under this Section does not depend upon who may happen to be the appellant but upon the question whether or not the case is within the Section; thus, if the conditions of the Section are satisfied, the auction-purchaser also will have a right to appeal.<sup>3</sup>

Where a decree of a Small Cause Court is sent for execution to a Court exercising original jurisdiction and an order is passed under this Section, such an order is appealable.<sup>3</sup> But no second appeal will lie against an order in execution under this Section, where the suit is of a nature cognisable by a Court of Small Causes.<sup>4</sup> In the case of arbitration proceedings, the award must be considered to be a decree in a suit and therefore an appeal would lie against an order in execution of an award.<sup>5</sup> Where a decree is obtained in a suit brought under Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act and an order is passed in proceedings in execution of that decree, no appeal lies against that order.<sup>5a</sup> The reason is that Section 9 of that Act provides that "no appeal shall lie from any order or decree passed in any suit under this Section" and applications for execution of decrees are proceedings in suit.

Where a judgment-debtor or a party to the suit objects to the attachment and sale of his properties in execution, or in other words prefers a claim, an order deciding such a claim falls within this Section and is appealable as a decree under Section 96 read with Section 2 clause (2).<sup>6</sup> The words 'as if he was a party to the suit' in O. 21, R. 58 show that a claim by a party to the suit is not within the scope of that Rule. Even if the matter comes within O. 21 R. 58, still a right of appeal under Section 96 cannot be taken away by any provision, such as O. 21 R. 63, which is not contained in the body of the Code. (Compare the words "provided in the body of this Code" in Section 96 with the words "provided in this Code" in Sections 141, 146 and 148.)

Section 2 clause (2) excludes from the definition of decree any adjudication from which an appeal lies as an appeal from an order. Thus an order appointing a receiver in execution under O. 40 R. 1 is appealable under O. 43 R. 1 (s) and is not a decree appealable under Section 96.<sup>7</sup> As to appeals from orders passed under O. 21, Rr. 89, 90 and 91, see those Rules.

Appeals from orders under this Section are expressly excepted from the provisions of Article 1 of Schedule I of the Court-fees Act by notifications of the various Local Governments under Section 35 of the Court-fees Act and consequently ad valorem fee is not payable in respect of such appeals.<sup>8</sup> It has been held that an order under O. 21 R. 50 clauses 2 and 3 is not an order under this Section and that on an appeal from such an order ad valorem court-fee is payable.<sup>8a</sup> The Court can require a person appealing from an order under this Section to give security for the costs of the appeal.<sup>9</sup>

See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>10</sup>

85. Forum of appeal.—The value of the original suit in which the execution is taken out determines the forum of appeal in respect of an order passed in execution proceedings. The actual value of the subject-matter in dispute involved in the order is not the criterion.<sup>1</sup> See Note 18 to Section 96 as to the value of appeal for the purposes of jurisdiction.

86. Interlocutory orders in execution proceedings.—The phrase “determination of any question within Section 47” in Section 2 cl. (2) does not make every decision of any question within this Section, a decree. In order to be appealable as a decree, the decision must also have the essential characteristics of a decree as defined in that Section, that is, it must also be the formal expression of an adjudication conclusively determining the rights of the parties. If not, the order is merely an interlocutory one and is not appealable as a decree.<sup>1</sup> Otherwise “every interlocutory order in an execution proceeding, such as an order granting or refusing process for the examination of witnesses, would be appealable; and far greater latitude would be given of appealing against orders in such proceedings than is allowed as against orders made in suits before decree—a thing which could hardly have been intended.”<sup>3</sup> But though an order may be interlocutory, if it is one which in substance determines a question relating to execution between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor as, for instance, where it has the effect of reviving an application for execution which was dismissed for default of the decree-holder, especially when a fresh application would be barred by limitation, it will be appealable as a decree.<sup>3</sup> The decision that the executing Court had power to hear the objection application of the judgment-debtor under Section 47 is an order which determines a very important and substantial right and hence is appealable as a decree.<sup>4</sup> As regards the appealability of an order fixing the value of property for the purposes of sale, see O. 21 R. 66. As regards appeals against orders granting or refusing stay of execution, see Note 44, ante.

88. Limitation. — Since the wording of Article 166 of the Limitation Act of 1908 is wide and general in terms, any application under this Code to set aside a sale, whether it falls under this Section or not, must be made within thirty days from the date of the sale.<sup>1</sup> But where the sale is absolutely void for want of jurisdiction or is a nullity, then the application will be governed by the residuary Article 181 which provides for a period of three years from the date of the sale.<sup>2</sup> An application by a judgment-debtor for the restoration of immovable property sold or delivered in excess of the decree,<sup>3</sup> or an application to recover back money realised in excess of the decree,<sup>4</sup> is also governed by Article 181 of the Limitation Act, 1908. In such cases, if the applicant brings a suit under a bona fide mistake, he is entitled under Section 14 of the Limitation Act to deduct the time taken up in prosecuting the suit, in calculating the period for making an application under this Section for refund of the excess.<sup>5</sup>

Where an objection falling within the scope of the Section is raised in the course of execution proceedings, it is the duty of the Court to take notice of and decide such objection. There is no time limit for raising such objection so long as the Court is seised of the execution proceedings.<sup>6</sup> Thus, where a property is sold in execution of a decree, the objection that the property is not liable to attachment or sale under Section 60 infra, can be raised at any time before the confirmation of the sale.<sup>7</sup>

LIMIT OF TIME FOR EXECUTION

48. [S. 230, paras. 3 and 4.] (1) Where an application to execute a decree<sup>4</sup> not being a decree granting an injunction<sup>2</sup> has been made,<sup>5</sup> no order for the execution of the same decree shall be made upon any fresh application presented after the expiration of twelve years<sup>6</sup> from —

Execution barred in certain cases.

- (a) the date of the decree sought to be executed,<sup>10</sup> or,
- (b) where the decree or any subsequent order<sup>11</sup> directs any payment of money or the delivery of any property to be made at a certain date or at recurring periods,<sup>12</sup> the date of the default in making the payment or delivery in respect of which the applicant seeks to execute the decree.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed —

- (a) to preclude the Court from ordering the execution of a decree upon an application presented after the expiration of the said term of twelve years, where the judgment-debtor has, by fraud or force,<sup>15</sup> prevented the execution of the decree at some time within twelve years immediately before the date of the application : or
- (b) to limit or otherwise affect the operation of article 180 of the second Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877.<sup>2</sup>

1. Legislative changes. — This Section corresponds to paragraphs 3 and 4 of Section 230 of the Code of 1882 with the following alterations:—

- (i) The old Section applied only to decrees for payment of money or delivery of other property. The present Section is made applicable to all decrees of any kind whatsoever, except decrees granting injunction. See Note 2 below.
- (ii) The words "under the Section and granted" occurring after the word "made" in the old Section have been omitted, with the result that the present Section applies under whatever Code the previous application may have been made and whether such application was granted or not. See Note 2 below.
- (iii) For the words "no subsequent application to execute the same decree shall be granted after" have been substituted the words "no order for execution of the same decree shall be made upon any fresh application presented after." See Notes 6 and 7 below.
- (iv) The words "or of the decree in appeal (if any) affirming the same" have been omitted as superfluous and tending to confusion. See Note 10 below.
- (v) The words "or at recurring periods" have been newly added in sub-section (1) clause (b). See Note 12 below.
- (vi) Sub-section (2) clause (b) was newly added. See Note 9 below.

Article 180 of the second Schedule of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, corresponds to Article 183 of the Indian Limitation Act, IX of 1908, Schedule I.

2. Object, applicability and scope of the Section. — A decree-holder is entitled, as of right, to execute his decree and for that purpose may make any number of applications in succession.<sup>1</sup> He cannot be refused execution unless his application is barred by the principles of res judicata or by Article 182 of the Limitation Act, 1908. This Section imposes a further restriction on the rights of the decree-holder by fixing a maximum limit of time for execution and by enacting that no order for execution shall be made upon an application presented after the expiry of twelve years from certain specified dates.<sup>2</sup> The effect of the Section is not to supersede the law of limitation but only to fix the outside period after which, execution of a decree, though not barred by the Limitation Act, may not be granted.<sup>3</sup> The object of this Section is to prevent execution proceedings being kept pending indefinitely to the harassment of judgment-debtors and to require sufficient diligence on the part of the decree-holders.<sup>3a</sup>

Section 230 of the old Code referred only to decree for the payment of money or delivery of other property, and it was consequently held that it did not apply to mortgage decrees.<sup>4</sup> There was also a conflict of opinion as to the application of the Section to cases where a decree was passed personally against A for payment of money, and in default, for sale of B's (surety's) property.<sup>5</sup> The omission of the words, "for the payment of money or delivery of other property" in the present Section makes it clear that it applies to all decrees of any kind except a decree granting injunction.<sup>6</sup>

Before the execution of a decree can be held to be barred under the Section, it must be shown that the decree was, in all parts, ripe for execution on the date from which the twelve years' period is to be computed.<sup>6a</sup> Where a decree-holder applies for execution and a fresh application therefor in the future is likely to be barred under the provisions of this Section, the Court should allow the decree-holder to exhaust all lawful means of realising his decree in the pending application, before finally dismissing it.<sup>7</sup> But the salutary rule enacted in this Section should not be permitted to be evaded as, for example, by striking off an execution petition and continuing the attachment so as to enable the decree-holder to apply for execution after the twelve years' period under the pretext of continuing a pending application.<sup>8</sup>

The Section only requires that the application should be presented within twelve years. The order on such application may be made even after the expiry of the specified period.<sup>9</sup>

This Section does not apply to decrees of Presidency Small Cause Courts and such decrees, though transferred for execution to the City Civil Court, are nonetheless not governed by the Section.<sup>10</sup>

The Section bars only the execution of the decree after the specified period. The rights of the decree-holder in other respects are not in any way affected by its provisions.<sup>11</sup>

3. Retrospective operation of the Section. — It has already been observed in Note 3 to the Preamble that no one has a vested right in procedure. The right to execute a decree is only a right of procedure and not a vested right<sup>1</sup> and the law governing an application to execute a decree will be the law of procedure in force at the time of the application and not the law in force when the decree was passed.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where a mortgage decree is passed under the old Code but an application is presented for execution of that decree more than twelve years after the date of the decree and after the present Code came into force, the application will be barred though Section 230 of the old Code did not apply to mortgage decrees.<sup>3</sup>

4. "Application to execute a decree." — An application to execute a decree means an application under O. 21 R. 11 or otherwise by "which proceedings in execution are commenced and not merely an incidental application."<sup>1</sup> It should be an application in accordance with law, asking for a relief granted by the decree and for obtaining it in the mode admitted by law.<sup>2</sup> An application to the Court passing a decree to transfer it for execution to another Court is not such an application.<sup>3</sup> But where a decree gives reliefs of different characters, there is nothing in the Code preventing separate and successive applications for execution as regards each of such reliefs.<sup>4</sup>

5. "Has been made." — As to the distinction between the present Section and old Section 230 in this respect, see Note 2 above. The words "under this Section and granted" which occurred after the word "made" in the old Section gave rise to conflicting decisions, firstly, as to the applicability of the Section where the previous application was not made under the Section,<sup>1</sup> and secondly, as to when the previous application can be said to have been granted.<sup>2</sup> The said words having been omitted in the present Section, these rulings are no longer good law and the Section is applicable under whatever Code the previous application may have been made and whether it has been granted or not.

6. Fresh application presented after the expiration of twelve years. — As has already been seen in Note 2 above, the requirements of the Section are satisfied if the application is presented within twelve years of the specified dates. The Section does not prohibit the Court from making an order for execution after the expiration of twelve years, if the fresh application had been presented within the period. This was the principle laid down even under the old Section 230.<sup>1</sup> The words of the present Section adopt the said principle. As to the meaning of the words "fresh application," see Note 7 below.

7. "Fresh application" as contra-distinguished from "continuation of previous application." — The words "fresh application" have been substituted for the words "subsequent application" which occurred in the old Section. Even under the old Section the words "application to execute a decree" had been held to mean an application under O. 21 R. 11 or otherwise, by which proceedings in execution were commenced and not to include incidental applications made in pending execution proceedings.<sup>1</sup> The present substitution was made in accordance with the above view. Therefore, under the present Section also the expression "fresh application" means a substantive application for execution and not merely an ancillary one made with the object of moving the Court to proceed in the matter of a substantive application already on file.<sup>2</sup>

The question whether an application is only ancillary to a previous application or is a "fresh application" depends upon the circumstances of each case<sup>3</sup> and is to be decided with reference to the antecedent proceedings and the orders passed thereon.<sup>4</sup>

within the meaning of this Section.<sup>6</sup> Similarly, where the proceedings under the prior application have come to an end, the second application cannot be taken to be one in continuation of the prior application.<sup>6a</sup>

Where an application made within twelve years of the specified date is found to be defective, an amendment thereof after twelve years is not necessarily ultra vires of the powers of the Court. But a decree-holder who is not diligent should not in the absence of special and sufficient grounds be allowed to circumvent the provisions of this Section by way of amendment. Where the decree-holder applied on the last day of limitation for the arrest and attachment of moveable property of the judgment-debtor and thereafter sought to amend it by adding a prayer for the attachment of immovable property, it was held that the result of allowing the amendment would be to circumvent the provisions of this Section and that it should not therefore be allowed.<sup>6b</sup> Where an amendment is allowed, the question whether it will operate so as to make the application a proper one for the purposes of the Section on the date on which it was made, depends upon the circumstances of each case.<sup>7</sup> If the defect is not a fundamental one, it will have such operation.<sup>8</sup> If it is a fundamental one, the amendment will not operate to save limitation under this Section.<sup>9</sup>

A Court executing a decree, while rejecting an application for execution, is not competent to order that a fresh application may be filed within a certain time when such an application would be barred by the Section.<sup>10</sup>

8. Successive applications for execution of decrees of Courts other than Chartered High Courts.—See Note 2 above. As has been observed in that Note, this Section only fixes the maximum limit of time for execution of a decree and subject to such outside limit, a final order on a previous execution application or an application to take some step-in-aid of execution will afford a fresh starting point of limitation.<sup>1</sup>

Notes 8-9

9. Applicability of the Section to Chartered High Courts—Sub-section 2 (b) — Sub-section 2 (b) is new. It was held under the old Code that, in view of the provision in Article 180 of the Limitation Act, 1877, for a revivor of the decrees of Chartered High Courts in the exercise of ordinary original civil jurisdiction and of orders of His Majesty in Council, Section 230 did not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of ordinary original civil jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup> Sub-section 2 (b) has been added to give legislative recognition to that view. In the case of such decrees and orders, therefore, any number of applications for execution can be made and cannot be refused<sup>2</sup> unless they are barred on the principle of res judicata<sup>3</sup> or under Article 183 of the Limitation Act, 1908. Article 183 of the Limitation Act, 1908, does not however apply to decrees of Chartered High Courts in the exercise of appellate jurisdiction.<sup>4</sup>

Note 10

10. "Date of the decree sought to be executed."—In the absence of the circumstances specified in sub-section 1 (b) and in the absence of anything postponing the period of execution, the period of twelve years is to be computed from the date of the decree.<sup>1</sup> The date of the decree is the date which it ought to bear under O. 20 R. 7 and not the date when it is actually prepared and signed by the Judge.<sup>2</sup>

Where there is a preliminary and a final decree in a suit, the two must, for the purposes of this Section, be taken to be a single and indivisible decree and the date from which the time is computed is the date of the final decree.<sup>3</sup> Where a decree is amended, the date of the amendment will not give a fresh starting point of limitation under this Section.<sup>4</sup> In the case of a combined mortgage decree which provides that if the nett proceeds of the sale are not sufficient to satisfy the mortgagee's claim the balance be realised from the person and other properties of the mortgagor, the period will run from the date of the decree in respect of both remedies.<sup>5</sup> If, however, after the sale of the mortgaged properties a personal decree for the balance is passed under O. 34 R. 6, time will run in respect of the personal decree from the date thereof.<sup>6</sup> Where a redemption decree does not mention any date for the payment of the mortgage debt, it must be taken as payable on the date of the decree itself.<sup>7</sup>

The words "or of the decree in appeal confirming the same" have been omitted in this Section as being a mere surplusage. Where there has been an appeal from the original decree, the period under the Section is to be computed from the date of the appellate decree even though the appeal was only from a portion of the original decree<sup>8</sup> and even if the original decree is confirmed in appeal<sup>9</sup> or is dismissed as not pressed.<sup>9a</sup> The same principle applies to cases of appeals to the Privy Council.<sup>10</sup> Where, however, an appeal is preferred where no appeal lies,<sup>11</sup> or where an appeal is withdrawn<sup>12</sup> or is dismissed for default,<sup>13</sup> or is rejected for insufficiency of stamp,<sup>14</sup> time will run only from the original decree. Where a decree is passed severally against two or more defendants and one of the defendants appeals, the period of twelve years as against the other defendants runs from the date of the original decree.<sup>15</sup> In the light of the decision in A.I.R. 1932 Privy Council 165, the above view might require reconsideration.

Where an application to set aside an ex parte decree has been rejected, the period for the execution of the ex parte decree runs from the date of the decree notwithstanding the pendency of the application.<sup>16</sup>

It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>17</sup> that this Section obviously refers to a decree which is capable of execution and that in the case of a decree which is not capable of execution except on the happening of a particular contingency, time will not begin to run until that contingency occurs.

11. Subsequent order, meaning of. — Where a subsequent order directs payment of money or delivery of property at a future date, the period of twelve years will run from such date.<sup>1</sup> Thus, an order under O. 20 R. 11 (2) will be a subsequent order within the meaning of this Section.<sup>2</sup> According to the High Courts of Allahabad<sup>3</sup> and Patna<sup>4</sup> and the Chief Court of Oudh,<sup>4a</sup> a subsequent order must be one passed by the Court which passed a decree as such Court and not an order of an executing Court. The Bombay High Court<sup>5</sup> has, on the other hand, held that the order may be of any competent Court including a Court of execution. The Calcutta<sup>6</sup> and Lahore<sup>7</sup> High Courts and the Courts of the Judicial Commissioner of Nagpur<sup>8-9</sup> and Sind<sup>9a</sup> are also inclined to this latter view.

12. "At a certain date or at recurring periods." — Where a decree does not fix a definite date the question whether a sum is payable by a certain date should be ascertained by construction of the decree and if so ascertainable, time runs from that date.<sup>1</sup> An order merely directing a compromise petition for payment by instalments to be filed, is not an order directing payments to be made at a particular date.<sup>2</sup>

Decrees for payment in instalments, annual or monthly,<sup>3</sup> and decrees for future maintenance,<sup>4</sup> are decrees for payment "at recurring periods." Time in the case of such decrees and of decrees for the payment of money at a particular date, runs from the date of default or the expiry of the period as the case may be.<sup>5</sup> Where an instalment decree provides for the payment of the whole sum in default of any one instalment and either no option is given to the decree-holder or an option is given and exercised by him, time for the execution of the whole decree runs from the date of the first default.<sup>6</sup>

In the undermentioned case,<sup>6a</sup> an instalment decree provided that in default of payment of any instalment, the decree-holder was entitled to realise the whole amount of the decree at once. It was held that such a decree could not be considered to be a decree payable "at a certain date" within the meaning of this Section, and that therefore, after 12 years from the date of the default, only that instalment will be barred in respect of which the default was made.

Where a decree is for delivery of possession of immovable property contingent on the non-payment of annuity, the decree-holder is not bound to execute for

Section 48
Notes 12-14

Where a decree directs that money be recoverable from a party only on failure to recover the same from another, the period of 12 years runs from the date of decree and not from the time of the failure of the other to make the payment.<sup>8</sup>

13. Exclusion of time during minority or other disability of decree-holder. — See Section 6 Note 21 of the Authors' Commentaries on the Limitation Act.

14. Deduction of time for other causes. — Where the period of twelve years expires on a day when the Court is closed, the application can be presented on the next re-opening day on the broad principle that where the parties are prevented from doing a thing by the act of the Court they are entitled to do it at the first subsequent opportunity.<sup>1</sup>

As to whether the Sections of the Limitation Act extending the period of limitation "prescribed" apply to the period of twelve years under this Section, see the Authors' Commentaries on the Limitation Act<sup>2</sup> and the undermentioned cases.<sup>2a</sup>

In cases of intervening insolvency of the judgment-debtor the period during which the adjudication lasts will be excluded in computing the period of twelve years under this Section.<sup>3</sup>

By virtue of Section 48 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879, the time spent in obtaining the conciliator's certificate can be deducted in computing the period of limitation under this Section.<sup>4</sup>

Where property is under the management of the Collector under Schedule III of the Code, the period of such management can be excluded under Para. 11 (3) of Schedule III in calculating the "period of limitation" applicable to the execution of any decree in respect of any remedy of which the decree-holder has been temporarily deprived. The expression "period of limitation" has been interpreted as including the period fixed by Section 48.<sup>5</sup> But Para. 11 (3) only applies when the decree has been transferred to the Collector for execution<sup>6</sup> and only in respect of any remedy of which the decree-holder is temporarily deprived.<sup>7</sup>

The pendency of an appeal by the judgment-debtor is not a ground of suspension of the period prescribed by this Section in the absence of fraud or force.<sup>8</sup> When a decree is conditional on the redemption of a prior mortgage and the decree-holder redeemed the prior mortgage after twelve years from the date of his decree, the period up to the date of the redemption is not excluded, as nothing prevented him from redeeming it earlier and applying for execution within time.<sup>9</sup>

Note 15

15. "By fraud or force." — Sub-section (2) (a) of this Section permits the execution of a decree at any time within twelve years after the date on which the judgment-debtor has by fraud or force prevented the execution of a decree in an application properly made for execution. In other words, fraud or force which prevents execution gives a fresh period of twelve years within which the decree may be executed.<sup>1</sup> In order to get the benefit of this sub-section it must be proved that —

- (1) there was fraud or force on the part of the judgment-debtor,<sup>2</sup> and
- (2) the decree-holder was thereby prevented from executing the decree.<sup>3</sup>

The fraud however need not be such as to have continued to prevent execution up to the expiry of the twelve years.<sup>4</sup> There is a conflict of opinion on the question whether the Court has any discretion to refuse execution even when fraud or force on the part of the judgment-debtor preventing execution is established within twelve years of the application. According to the Calcutta High Court<sup>5</sup> the Court has such discretion which will be exercised in favour of the decree-holder if he had been diligent in proceeding with the execution of the decree from the date of the decree. The Madras High Court is, on the other hand, inclined to the view that no such discretion exists under the Section.<sup>6</sup> The Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court has held<sup>7</sup> that even in the view of the Calcutta High Court stated above, the due diligence required is nothing more than keeping the decree alive under the provisions of the Code. It is submitted with respect that the Madras view is correct. The language of the sub-section makes it clear that sub-section (1) which precludes the Court from ordering execution in the cases specified does not bar an application made after the specified period if the conditions mentioned in sub-section (2) are satisfied. There is nothing to show that the Court has any discretion in the matter.

The term "fraud" in the Section should be interpreted in a very liberal sense.<sup>8</sup> Any improper means resorted to by the judgment-debtor to prevent execution of the decree would amount to such fraud.<sup>9</sup> The term includes not merely deceit but also circumvention.<sup>10</sup> But mere objections by the judgment-debtor cannot be taken advantage of as "fraud" within the meaning of this Section.<sup>11</sup> In the case noted below<sup>11a</sup> an objection raised to the jurisdiction of the Court was held not to amount to fraud.

But raising a plea based on a false statement would be fraudulent.<sup>11b</sup> Where there are frequent futile and false objections raised by the judgment-debtor accompanied by his keeping out of the way when warrants of arrest are issued, his conduct may be taken to amount to fraud.<sup>12</sup> In the following instances the conduct of the judgment-debtor has been held to amount to fraud within the meaning of the Section —

- (1) Where he raised frivolous objections in order to delay execution of the decree against him.<sup>13-14</sup>
- (2) Where he wilfully evaded the arrest warrant.<sup>15</sup>
- (3) Where, knowing that a warrant of attachment was issued against his moveable property, he locked up his house and so prevented the moveable property therein being attached.<sup>16</sup>
- (4) Where he or his heirs made fictitious and fraudulent alienation of property which was subsequently set aside in a regular suit.<sup>17</sup>
- (5) Where he kept out of British India so that the decree-holder was not in a position to take out execution against his person.<sup>18</sup>

Where the Court merely refused to permit execution against properties of the judgment-debtor in the hands of a receiver but it was open to the decree-holder to proceed against the person and other properties of the judgment-debtor or of the surety and he did not do so within the twelve years, it was held that Section 48 (2) was of no help to the decree-holder.<sup>19</sup>

Fraud or force of one judgment-debtor will not extend the time against a co-judgment-debtor who did not resort to it.<sup>20</sup>

16. Appeal from orders under the Section. — An order granting or refusing execution of a decree under the Section is, it is conceived, a final order amounting to a decree under Section 47 and is therefore appealable.

17. Plea of bar under the Section, when to be raised. — Where notice of petition for attachment in execution is duly served on the judgment-debtor who allows orders to be passed ex parte, he cannot ask for a review of the order, nor can he in appeal raise the plea that the execution application is barred by the expiry of the

Where an executing Court decides that the execution of a decree is not barred, notwithstanding the provisions of this Section, it is merely an erroneous decision and not an illegal exercise of jurisdiction. Therefore, so long as the order is not set aside in appeal or revision, it cannot be attacked in any collateral proceeding on the ground of want of jurisdiction in the executing Court.<sup>2</sup>

TRANSFEREES AND LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES

Section 49

Transferee.

49. [S. 233.] Every transferee of a decree shall hold the same subject to the equities (if any) which the judgment-debtor might have enforced against the original decree-holder.

[1877, S. 233. See O. 21 R. 16.]

Synopsis

1. Scope and object of the Section.
2. Equity of the judgment-debtor to set off cross-decree.
3. Transferee during pendency of suit by judgment-debtor takes it subject to the result of the suit.
4. Other equities enforceable against the assignee.
5. Assignee's want of knowledge of equity, if affects rule.

Other Topics

Assignment before or during appeal. See Note 3.

Assignee bound by S. 99, T. P. Act. See Note 4.

1. Scope and object of the Section. — This Section may be compared with Section 132 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, which is based on the same principle,<sup>1</sup> namely, that the assignee of a claim stands in no better position than the assignor as regards equities existing between the assignor and his debtor at the time of the assignment.<sup>1a</sup> An attaching decree-holder is an "assignee" of the attached decree within the meaning of O. 21 R. 16 and is, under this Section, subject to the same equities that the judgment-debtor in attached decree had against his decree-holder.<sup>2</sup> The equity, to which a transfer of a decree is subject, must, however, be one available against the original decree-holder and not one available against others.<sup>3</sup> A mere claim for restitution made by the judgment-debtor against the original decree-holder is not an equity which can be availed of against an assignee from the decree-holder.<sup>4</sup> The equity which the judgment-debtor seeks to enforce against the transferee must have been existent at the date of the assignment.<sup>5</sup>

Section 49 — Note 1

1. Section 132 of the Transfer of Property Act runs as follows: "The transferee of an actionable claim shall take it subject to all the liabilities and equities to which the transferor was subject in respect thereof at the date of transfer."

5. ('38) AIR 1938 Bom 253 (255, 256); 1 L R (1938) Bom 263.

2. Equity of the judgment-debtor to set off cross-decree. — A right to set off a cross-decree or cross-claim under O. 21 Rr. 18 and 19 is an equity which can be enforced against the transferee of the decree;<sup>1</sup> but the decree against which the set-off is asked for must be before the Court for execution<sup>2</sup> and it is that Court that should consider whether the assigned decree is subject to any equities.<sup>3</sup> A right to set off a cross-decree is not affected when the assignment of one of them has been found to be fraudulent.<sup>4</sup>

3. Transferee during pendency of suit by judgment-debtor takes it subject to the result of the suit. — An assignee of a decree which, subsequent to the assignment, is confirmed on appeal without the assignee being brought on the record, is nevertheless an "assignee" within O. 21 R. 16 who can execute the appellate decree<sup>1</sup> but a satisfaction entered on the decree under O. 21 R. 18 is binding on him though made subsequent to the assignment to him and before his name is brought on the record.<sup>2</sup> The right of a judgment-debtor to ask for a stay under O. 21 R. 29, infra is an equity which will bind an assignee of the decree.<sup>3</sup> Hence, where the decree is assigned during the pendency of a suit by the judgment-debtor against the decree-holder and a decree is passed subsequently in the later suit in favour of the judgment-debtor, the latter will be entitled to a set-off in respect of such decree against the transferee of the decree in the prior suit.<sup>4</sup>

4. Other equities enforceable against the assignee. — In cases coming under Section 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, a mortgagee who had also a money decree against the mortgagor could not, in execution of the money decree, bring the equity of redemption to sale. It was held by the Bombay, Calcutta and Madras High Courts that the assignee of such money decree could not also bring the equity of redemption to sale and thus deprive the mortgagor of his equitable right.<sup>1</sup> The Allahabad High Court, however, held a contrary view.<sup>2</sup> Section 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, has now been repealed and re-enacted in O. 34 R. 14 of the Code but with this difference, namely, that the equity of redemption could not be sold now in execution of decrees for the payment of money in satisfaction of such claims only as arise under the mortgage. The cases cited above are, therefore, now no longer law.

See Notes to Order 34 Rule 14, infra.

Legal representative. passed it to execute the same against the legal representative<sup>4</sup> of the deceased.

(2) Where the decree is executed against such legal representative, he shall be liable only to the extent<sup>6</sup> of the property of the deceased<sup>8</sup> which has come to his hands and has not been duly disposed of; and, for the purpose of ascertaining such liability, the Court executing the decree may, of its own motion or on the application of the decree-holder, compel such legal representative to produce such accounts as it thinks fit.

1. Legislative changes. — Besides some verbal changes, the words "fully satisfied" have been substituted for the words "fully executed" in clause (1) of this Section. See Note 12 below.

2. Scope of the Section. — This Section and Sections 52 and 53 may be usefully read together. Section 52 contemplates cases where the debtor dies before the decree and the decree itself has been passed against the legal representative. This will also include cases where the debtor dies before suit and the suit itself is instituted against the legal representative. This Section provides for the execution of decrees against the legal representatives of a judgment-debtor who dies before the decree has been fully satisfied. Normally, it applies to cases where judgment-debtor dies after the decree. But the Section is wide enough to include the case where the judgment-debtor dies before decree, provided the decree is valid in spite of his death, e.g., where under O. 22 R. 6 death occurs after hearing but before judgment, or in the case of Privy Council appeals.<sup>1</sup> Section 53 extends the scope of Sections 50 and 52 to ancestral property in the hands of a descendant which is liable under the Hindu law for payment of debts of the ancestor.

3. "Holder of the decree." — For the definition of "decree-holder," see Section 2 sub-section (3). A person who appears upon the face of the decree as the person in whose favour the decree is passed is entitled to execute it, unless it is shown that some other person has taken his place.<sup>1</sup> The Code does not provide that execution abates by death of decree-holder.<sup>2</sup> See also O. 22 R. 12 infra. For purposes of limitation, an application for execution by any person who, for the time being, is recognised as the proprietor of the estate of a deceased decree-holder is held to be good, though later on it is found that he had no title.<sup>3</sup>

4. "Legal representative." — See Order 22 Rule 3.

5. Appeal against order determining legal representative. — An order determining the question whether a person is the legal representative of a deceased party is within Section 47 and is appealable as a decree. See Section 47 sub-section (3), and Note 26 to that Section. If, however, the Court does not decide the question, the mere placing of the legal representative on the record is not appealable.<sup>1</sup>

Where a legal representative is brought on the record in the place of a deceased party, he becomes a party to the suit<sup>2</sup> and all further questions in execution between him and the opposite party must be decided in execution and not by a separate suit and an appeal will lie from such a decision.<sup>3</sup>

6. Extent of liability of legal representative. — See Note 13 to Section 52.

7. Legal representative bound by what the deceased judgment-debtor himself would have been bound by. — The liability of the legal representative is co-extensive with that of the deceased judgment-debtor himself, subject, however, to the condition that it does not extend beyond the assets actually received by him and which have not been duly disposed of. Thus, where the property could not be proceeded against even when in the hands of the judgment-debtor, as where it is governed by the special provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, it cannot be proceeded against when it comes into the hands of the legal representative.<sup>1</sup> On the other hand, the legal representative will be bound by the decree passed or the previous proceedings taken, against the judgment-debtor himself.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where the properties had been attached or charged or mortgaged, or directed to be sold by the decree, in the lifetime of the judgment-debtor, they continue to be liable in the hands of the legal representatives.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, where the judgment-debtor was impleaded in the suit as a subsequent mortgagee but did not plead his rights of marshalling, it is not open to his legal representatives, when substituted in execution proceedings, to raise the question again.<sup>4</sup> A Hindu son or a descendant of a Hindu is liable just like other legal representatives, and cannot question the validity of the decree against the ancestor,<sup>5</sup> except in one respect, namely, that the decree debt is of an illegal or immoral nature so as not to bind him or his share in the joint family property under the Hindu law. See Section 53, Notes 1 and 3, infra.

8. "Property of the deceased." — See Section 52 Note 9 and Section 53, Note 6.

9. Official Assignee. — See Note 10 below.

10. "Where a judgment-debtor dies." — This Section applies only where the judgment-debtor dies.<sup>1</sup> The word "dies" is used in its natural meaning and does not include a civil death.<sup>1a</sup> Consequently, the Section has no application where the judgment-debtor only becomes an insolvent or has only alienated or gifted away his property, or where, in his lifetime, there is a transfer or devolution by operation of law. After property vests in the Official Assignee, no proceedings can affect the property of the deceased insolvent in his hands unless he has been impleaded in the matter adjudicated upon.<sup>2</sup> Since attachment does not create any interest in the property and prevents only a private alienation, it does not prevail against the Official Assignee or Official Receiver and the decree-holder cannot claim payment of the money realised,<sup>3</sup> much more so if the attachment is only prior to judgment.<sup>4</sup>

11. Decree against deceased defendant. — See Note 8 to Section 52.

12. "Before the decree has been fully satisfied." — The word "satisfied" has been substituted in this Code for the word "executed" in the previous Codes. Prior to this Code, there was a conflict of views amongst the High Courts as to the meaning of the word "executed." The High Court of Allahabad held that once attachment was effected and execution proceedings commenced and were progressing, the decree was fully executed and the property of the judgment-debtor passed into the hands of the law; further proceedings do not abate on the subsequent death of the judgment-debtor and it was not necessary that the legal representatives should be impleaded. A sale without legal representatives being brought on the record was therefore held to be good.<sup>1</sup> On the other hand, the Madras High Court held the view that, till the sale was actually held, the decree could not be said to be "fully executed," so that, even after attachment, if the judgment-debtor died, his legal representatives had to be impleaded; otherwise, the sale was void.<sup>2</sup> The Bombay High Court took an intermediate view and held that the legal representatives should be impleaded even if the judgment-debtor died after attachment, but that the failure to do so was only a material irregularity making the sale liable to be set aside only if substantial injury is caused thereby.<sup>3</sup> And the Calcutta High Court agreed with the Allahabad view in one case<sup>4</sup> and adopted the Bombay view in at least two cases.<sup>4a</sup> The present Code gives legislative sanction to the Madras view, and hence the Allahabad view is no longer law.<sup>5</sup> It is, therefore, now necessary to implead the legal representatives of a judgment-debtor who dies after attachment.<sup>6</sup> There is, however, still a divergence of views as to whether the failure to implead the legal representatives of a judgment-debtor dying after attachment renders the sale void or voidable; one set of Courts holding it to be an illegality<sup>7</sup> and another set holding it to be a mere irregularity.<sup>8</sup>

But where all the steps necessary to be taken by the decree-holder have been taken and nothing more remains to be done by him, and it is only for the Court to execute its final order in execution, as, for instance, where an order for possession has been made and the judgment-debtor dies thereafter, it is not necessary to implead the legal representatives.<sup>9</sup>

The principle applies where the judgment-debtor becomes insolvent after the attachment, so that, a sale thereafter without impleading the Official Receiver and without due notice to him is inoperative and irregular.<sup>10</sup>

13. Application to execute against the legal representative. — In this Section the words "may apply" are equivalent to "shall apply" inasmuch as unless the decree-holder wishes to drop further proceedings in execution altogether, there is no option left to him but to follow the procedure laid down in the Section.<sup>1</sup>

This Section by cl. (1) enacts that the application is to be made to "the Court which passed the decree" while cl. (2) refers to "the Court executing decree" as having certain powers for the purposes of the Section. Now the executing Court may be the Court which passed the decree or it may be the Court to which it is sent for execution.<sup>2</sup> The application to execute the decree against the legal representative must under cl. (1) be made to the Court which passed the decree.<sup>3</sup> The Section, however, does not specify which Court has to pass orders thereon. At any rate the Court that passed the decree need only decide one point, viz., whether the decree is executable against the legal representative, and pass orders accordingly.<sup>4</sup> All further proceedings, inclusive of ordering notice of execution can, where the decree is sent to another Court for execution, be taken by the Court executing the decree.<sup>5</sup> As to the effect of non-compliance with the rule that the application for substitution should be made to the Court which passed the decree, see Section 42, Note 1 ante. See also the case cited below.<sup>5a</sup> The execution proceedings once commenced can be continued after the death of the judgment-debtor by substitution of the name of his legal representative in place of his name in the application for execution. No fresh or substantive application under O. 21 R. 11 is necessary.<sup>6</sup>

An application under this Section is necessary only when further execution is needed or asked for. A separate application merely for substituting a legal representative is not necessary<sup>7</sup> and no limitation is prescribed for such substitution in execution proceedings which do not abate merely by the death of the parties.<sup>8</sup> See O. 22 R. 12.

It is not incumbent on a party, to be entitled to apply under O. 9 R. 13 of the Code as the legal representative of the deceased defendant, to be first brought on record under Section 50 before filing an application to set aside the ex parte decree.<sup>9</sup>

14. Execution against wrong legal representative or without the legal representative. — It has been seen in Note 63b to Section 11, ante, that a decree against one of several representatives will, in the absence of fraud or collusion, bind all the representatives, but that a decree against a wrong person as the legal representative does not bind the real representatives. The same principles will apply to execution proceedings taken against legal representatives. Thus, a proceeding taken against one of several representatives who prima facie is entitled to represent the estate of the deceased is binding on all the representatives.<sup>1</sup> But if it is taken against a wrong person as such legal representative, it will as a general rule not bind the actual or real legal representatives.<sup>2</sup> (See also Note 6 to Section 52.) Where, however, in such a case the real representative stands by and allows the proceedings to be taken or continued against a wrong person who is allowed to be in possession of the estate of the deceased, he and persons claiming through him will not be allowed to challenge the proceedings subsequently.<sup>3</sup>

Similarly, where a wrong person is impleaded as a legal representative but the Court decides that he is the true heir and orders execution to proceed, such proceedings cannot be said to be void for want of jurisdiction.<sup>4</sup>

Another class of cases may be noted in this connexion, namely, cases where one person is competent, in law, to represent the interest of others in the estate, as for instance, a Hindu father or manager of a joint Hindu family, or the guardian of a minor, or a Hindu widow; in all these cases the proceedings taken against such persons in their representative capacity are binding on all persons who are represented by the person against whom such proceedings are taken.<sup>5</sup> But if the proceedings are taken against them in their personal and individual capacity, only they and their personal heirs will be bound thereby and not others interested in the estate.<sup>6</sup>

The mere fact that the name of the legal representative is wrongly given does not invalidate the execution petition.<sup>7</sup> The rule that the proceeding taken against a person prima facie entitled to represent the estate is binding on the other persons entitled to the estate has no application where the judgment-debtor becomes an insolvent and his estate vests in the Official Receiver or Official Assignee, inasmuch as the latter alone represents the whole estate and has to be impleaded in any view.<sup>8</sup> Where execution proceedings are taken or continued after the death of the judgment-debtor on record without getting any of his legal representatives substituted, the proceedings are void and are of no legal effect.<sup>9</sup>

15. Decree-holder, if can proceed against property in the possession of third party. — A creditor of a deceased person cannot proceed against properties in the possession of third parties and held by them in their own right and not on behalf of the estate of the deceased.<sup>1</sup> Nor can he follow the property of the deceased in the hands of a bona fide purchaser for value<sup>2</sup> except where the doctrine of lis pendens is applicable.<sup>3</sup> Where, however, it is shown that the purchaser knew that there were debts of the ancestor or testator left unsatisfied and that the heir or devisee to whom he paid his purchase money intended to apply it otherwise than in the payment of such debts, the creditor may follow his debtor's property in the hands of the purchaser.<sup>4</sup> But the mere fact that the purchaser from a Mahomedan heir has notice of other debts will not enable the creditor to proceed against the purchased properties, if it is not shown that the assets in the hands of the heirs-at-law were not sufficient to satisfy the debt.<sup>5</sup>

Notes 15-18

This Section applies only where the judgment-debtor dies and his legal representatives alienate his properties. It has no application where the interests of the judgment-debtor devolve on another by purchase or otherwise subsequent to institution of suit.<sup>7</sup>

16. Limitation for substitution of legal representative. — Order 22 R. 12 provides that the provisions as to abatement by death do not apply to execution proceedings. And there is no provision in the Code as to abatement of execution by the death of parties.<sup>1</sup> Execution proceedings do not, therefore, abate by the death of the judgment-debtor.<sup>2</sup> It has been seen in Note 13 ante that no separate application for substitution of legal representatives is necessary and that such substitution can be asked for and made in the execution petition itself.<sup>3</sup> There is no special period of limitation for substitution in execution, the only thing necessary being that the execution petition itself is in time.<sup>4</sup> The High Court of Patna, without deciding the question whether Article 181 applies or not, has expressed a view that the decree-holder should have at least six months on the analogy of Article 177 of the Limitation Act and O. 22 R. 4 of the Code, and that, in any view, S. 5 of the Limitation Act can be invoked to excuse any delay in the substitution of legal representatives.<sup>5</sup>

17. Successive deaths of judgment-debtor and legal representative. — If a judgment-debtor dies and his legal representative in possession of his assets is substituted in his place, and thereafter the legal representative himself dies, the assets continue as such even in the hands of the legal representatives of the legal representative who died subsequent to such substitution.<sup>1</sup>

18. Decree for injunction. — As has been seen in Note 21 to Section 47, an injunction does not run with the land and cannot be enforced under the Section against a purchaser of the property from the defendant<sup>1</sup> or against a person who is not his legal representative.<sup>2</sup> Under the specific provisions of this Section, however, a decree for injunction against the judgment-debtor can be executed against his legal representatives.<sup>3</sup> Where the properties of the judgment-debtor are purchased during the pendency of proceedings in execution of a decree for injunction, the purchaser

enforce execution.

51. Subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed, the Court may, on the application of the decree-holder, order execution of the decree —

- (a) by delivery of any property specifically decreed;
- (b) by attachment and sale or by sale without attachment of any property;
- (c) by arrest and detention in prison;
- (d) by appointing a receiver; or
- (e) in such other manner as the nature of the relief granted may require:

**Provided that, where the decree is for the payment of money, execution by detention in prison shall not be ordered unless, after giving the judgment-debtor an opportunity of showing cause why he should not be committed to prison, the Court, for reasons recorded in writing, is satisfied, —*

- (a) that the judgment-debtor, with the object or effect of obstructing or delaying the execution of the decree, —
  - (i) is likely to abscond or leave the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, or
  - (ii) has, after the institution of the suit in which the decree was passed, dishonestly transferred, concealed, or removed any part of his property, or committed any other act of bad faith in relation to his property; or
- (b) that the judgment-debtor has, or has had since the date of the decree, the means to pay the amount of the decree or some substantial part thereof and refuses or neglects or has refused or neglected to pay the same, or

1. Scope of the Section. — This Section was newly inserted in the Code on the suggestion of the Advocate-General of Madras.<sup>1</sup> It enumerates in general terms the various modes<sup>2</sup> in which the Court may, in its discretion, order the execution of a decree according as the nature of the relief granted may require. In the Notes on Clauses the Select Committee observe as follows: "This clause states generally the powers of the Court in regard to execution leaving the details to be determined by rules. It will be observed that the power to direct immediate execution is no longer restricted to one class of suits but that it is now general in terms. Any limitation that may be found necessary will be imposed by rules." The Section accordingly is made to operate "subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed."

1a. "Subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed." — This Section merely enumerates the different modes of execution in general terms while the conditions and limitations under which alone the respective modes can be availed of are prescribed further on by different provisions. As observed by Sulaiman, C. J., in Anadilal v. Ram Sarup,<sup>1</sup> "The Legislature has taken care to preface the Section with the words 'subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed.' It is obvious that there is no wide and unrestricted jurisdiction to order execution in every case in all the ways indicated therein. The jurisdiction has to be exercised subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed by the rules in the following schedule . . . Obviously, all the various modes mentioned in Section 51 are not open to an executing Court in every case; it is to be guided by the procedure laid down in the schedule, and must resort to the method appropriate to each case."

"Prescribed" under Section 2 (16) means "prescribed by rules", and "rules," under Section 2 (18) means "rules and forms" contained in the First Schedule of the Code or framed by the respective superior Courts in different Provinces under Section 122 or Section 125.

2. Powers of the Court in execution. — It is for the judgment-creditor to decide in which of the several modes mentioned in the Section he will execute his decree; and the Court has no authority except under the circumstances mentioned in the proviso, to refuse to order execution of the decree in the mode asked for on the ground that the decree-holder should, in the first instance, proceed by another mode.<sup>1</sup> On the same principle, a Court passing a decree against a defendant should not ordinarily place any limitation as to the mode in which it is to be executed.<sup>2</sup> In fact, a decree may, under the provisions of O. 21 R. 30, be executed simultaneously against both the person and the property of the judgment-debtor,<sup>2a</sup> though the Court has, under O. 21 R. 21, a judicial discretion to refuse to order such simultaneous execution in proper cases. The reason is that, as their Lordships of the Privy Council pointed out in the undermentioned case,<sup>3</sup> "the difficulties of a litigant in India begin when he has obtained a decree" and that far too many obstacles are placed in the way of a decree-holder who seeks to execute his decree against the property of the judgment-debtor. It is also an important principle of law that rules of procedure are only handmaids of justice and ought not to be used for obstructing justice. It is accordingly the duty of the Court executing the decree to aid the decree-holder in realising the amount due under his decree, and it should therefore offer him all possible and reasonable facilities for realising the decretal amount in as short a time as possible.<sup>4</sup> As to simultaneous executions generally, see Note 10 to Section 38 and O. 21 Rr. 21 and 30.

Ordinarily there can be only complete execution<sup>4a</sup> but where it is ineffectual and invalid, another execution, valid in law, can be ordered.<sup>4b</sup> Thus, where a delivery of possession was made after an unconditional order of stay of execution had been passed by the Appellate Court, and consequently became ineffectual, the decree-holder can, after the dismissal of the appeal by the judgment-debtor, again apply for delivery of possession.<sup>5</sup>

3. "By delivery of any property specifically decreed." — As to the mode of execution of a decree for specific moveable property, see O. 21 R. 31 and that for specific immovable property, see O. 21 Rr. 35 and 36. As to whether, in an order for delivery of any property decreed, the Court can grant an alternative relief by way of damages in default of such delivery, see Note 7 below.

4. "By attachment and sale or by sale without attachment of any property"—Clause (b). — Where the decree itself directs the sale of properties, as in the case of mortgage decrees, it is clear that no attachment is necessary for bringing the properties to sale in execution of that decree.<sup>1</sup> But, is an attachment an essential pre-requisite for the validity of sale of property in execution of a money decree? In order to answer this question it is necessary to read this Section, which enables a Court to order a sale without attachment, along with O. 21 R. 30, which provides that a money decree may be executed by attachment and sale of the judgment-debtor's property, and along with O. 21 R. 64, which provides that the Court may order that any property attached by it shall be sold. Under the old Code which contained no provision corresponding to the present Section, there was a conflict of opinion, one class of cases holding that the object of an attachment is to bring the property under the control of the Court with a view to prevent the judgment-debtor from alienating it, and that the absence of attachment is nothing more than an irregularity and does not ipso facto vitiate the sale;<sup>2</sup> and another class of cases holding that an attachment is an essential preliminary to sales in execution of simple decrees for money, and that the absence of attachment makes the sale de facto void.<sup>3</sup>

The present Section 51 now makes it clear that a sale without attachment is not without jurisdiction though in view of O. 21 Rr. 30 and 64 it may amount to an irregularity. This is the view taken by the High Courts of Lahore,<sup>3a</sup> Patna,<sup>4</sup> Madras<sup>5</sup> and Rangoon.<sup>6</sup> The High Court of Calcutta<sup>7</sup> has, on the other hand, held, relying on certain observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Raja Thakur Barmha v. Jiban Ram Marwari,<sup>8</sup> that a sale without attachment is ipso facto void. The High Court of Bombay also has held in an earlier decision that a property cannot be sold without attachment.<sup>9</sup> Neither of these decisions, however, adverted to Section 51, nor, it is submitted, does the decision in Thakur Barmha's case support the view taken by them.<sup>9a</sup> The said decisions cannot be accepted as sound. The purpose of attachment being to prevent a judgment-debtor from placing any obstacles in the way of the Court selling the property, it cannot be that the want of it will vitiate a sale which has actually been effected without any such obstacles. In a recent decision of the Bombay High Court<sup>9b</sup> that Court also has held, dissenting from its earlier decision, that a sale in execution without an attachment is not a nullity.

Section 51 clause (b) empowering the Court, in general terms, to attach and sell in execution any property must be interpreted to mean that the Court has jurisdiction to attach and sell in execution any property which the decree-holder puts forward as the property of his judgment-debtor.<sup>10</sup> If the property does not belong to the judgment-debtor but to a stranger, the latter will not be bound by the sale in any way.<sup>11</sup> But it is not void as between the decree-holder, judgment-debtor and the auction-purchaser,<sup>12</sup> and the purchaser can only apply under O. 21 R. 91 to set aside the sale on the ground that the judgment-debtor has no saleable interest in the property sold. The property to be sold must, however, be saleable property under Section 60 of the Code.<sup>13</sup> Thus, lands inalienable according to the provisions of special enactments such as Section 3 of the Bengal Regulation III of 1872,<sup>14</sup> or Section 16 of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act,<sup>15</sup> cannot be sold in execution.

There is a difference of opinion on the question whether the Court can, under this clause, order a temporary alienation of property in execution, such as by mortgaging or leasing it out for a term. There is also a conflict of opinion on the question whether, where a sale is prohibited under a special or local Act, the Court can, by way of execution, grant a mortgage or a lease of the judgment-debtor's property. On the first question it has been held by the High Court of Lahore that Section 72 implies that the Court has authority to order a temporary alienation of the judgment-debtor's property. It has also held that the power to transfer the entire bundle of rights constituting ownership by way of sale includes the lesser power of transferring some of those rights.<sup>16</sup> The High Court of Allahabad has, on the other hand, dissented from the Lahore view and has held that a power to sell does not include a power to grant a lease. As regards Section 72, it has held that that Section circumscribes the Court's powers as regards the granting of leases to the conditions prescribed by it.<sup>17</sup> The Peshawar Judicial Commissioner's Court has held that the Court has power, apart from the provisions of Section 72, to order a temporary alienation of the judgment-debtor's property.<sup>17a</sup> The Nagpur High Court has held that the Court has no inherent power to order temporary alienation, apart from the provisions of Section 72.<sup>17b</sup>

On the second question, the High Court of Lahore holds that the prohibition of sale does not prevent the Court from mortgaging or leasing the property under this clause and that the provisions of Section 72 do not affect the powers of the Court in this respect.<sup>18</sup> According to the High Court of Allahabad, as has been seen already, the power to grant a lease arises only under Section 72 which applies only when a sale has been ordered, so that, where no sale can be ordered by reason of statutory prohibition, the Court has no power to grant a lease at all.<sup>19</sup>

According to the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Peshawar, when a sale is prohibited, all powers, such as those of mortgaging or leasing the property which are derived from the power to sell are also taken away.<sup>20</sup>

The Nagpur High Court has held that the Court cannot order the attachment of property for the purpose of temporary alienation when such property is not liable to be sold in execution.<sup>20a</sup>

Where not only a sale but also a temporary alienation is prohibited, it is of course clear that the Court cannot, by way of execution, make an order for temporary alienation.<sup>21</sup>

The word "sale" in the Section includes not only a sale in court auction but also a sale by a nominee of the parties under a consent decree.<sup>22</sup>

The fact that immovable property is attached before judgment and the attachment is continued after the decree will not disable the decree-holder from applying for the attachment and sale of the moveable property of the judgment-debtor.<sup>23</sup>

5. "By arrest and detention." — Under O. 21 R. 30 a decree for the payment of money, including a decree for the payment of money as an alternative to some other relief, may be executed by the detention in the civil prison of the judgment-debtor. Under O. 21 R. 31 (1) a decree for specific moveable property may be similarly executed by the arrest and detention of the judgment-debtor. But there are some exceptions to this rule. Thus, a decree cannot be executed by arrest and detention where the judgment-debtor is a woman (Section 56) or a minor or legal representative of a deceased person (Sections 50 and 52).<sup>1</sup>

As has been seen in Note 2 above, it is for the judgment-creditor to decide in which of the several modes he will execute his decree. Where, therefore, a decree-holder prays for the arrest of the judgment-debtor the Court cannot (except as provided for by the proviso) compel the decree-holder to proceed against his property<sup>1a</sup> or to accept payment by instalments.<sup>2</sup>

See also Sections 55 to 59 and O. 21 Rr. 30, 31 (1) and 37 to 40 infra which contain further provisions on this mode of execution.

5a. Proviso to the Section. — The proviso to the Section was inserted in the Code by the Code of Civil Procedure Amendment Act of 1936 (21 of 1936), Section 2. The proviso restricts the power of the Court to arrest the judgment-debtor in execution of a money decree and lays down that except in certain specified cases, the judgment-debtor shall not be arrested in execution of such a decree. See the under-mentioned cases<sup>1</sup> decided with reference to the proviso.

6. "By appointing a receiver"—Clause (d).—Execution by appointment of a receiver is known as equitable execution<sup>1</sup> and is entirely within the discretion of the Court.<sup>2</sup> It is thus an exception to the general rule stated in Note 2 above that it is for the decree-holder to choose the mode of execution and that the Court has no power to refuse to order execution in the mode asked for. This mode of execution was being adopted by Courts even under the old Code,<sup>3</sup> and this Section only gives legislative sanction to the exercise of such powers. The Section, however, does not confer a general power on the executing Court to appoint a receiver in every case. It merely prescribes a mode of execution of the decree by appointment of a receiver while the conditions and limitations under which such appointment is to be made are prescribed by O. 40 R. 1.<sup>3a</sup>

There is a difference of opinion as to whether a receiver may be appointed in respect of properties which cannot be attached and sold. According to the High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>3b</sup> Calcutta,<sup>4</sup> and Lahore<sup>4a</sup> and the Judicial Commissioners' Courts of Nagpur,<sup>5</sup> and Peshawar,<sup>5a</sup> such an appointment can be made, the Nagpur Court taking the view that the appointment of a receiver does not amount to attachment. The High Court of Patna has, on the other hand, held that such an appointment amounts to an equitable attachment and that therefore no such appointment can be made in respect of properties not liable to be attached and sold under Section 60.<sup>6</sup> The Allahabad High Court has held in a recent decision that where the law prohibits the dispossession of the judgment-debtor from certain property, a receiver cannot be appointed in respect of such property.<sup>6a</sup> No receiver can be appointed in respect of a mere right to future maintenance inasmuch as such a right is not property at all.<sup>7</sup> But where the maintenance is charged on property or is to come out of specified properties, it has been held by the Privy Council that a receiver may be appointed for realising the rents and profits of the properties and for applying them towards the maintenance of the debtor and the balance towards the discharge of the decree debt.<sup>8</sup>

A receiver may be appointed to realise a decree or debt which has been attached in execution proceedings,<sup>9</sup> or to collect the future rents and profits accruing due from attached properties,<sup>10</sup> or from the estate of a deceased debtor in the hands of his heirs,<sup>11</sup> or even in respect of property situate outside the Court's jurisdiction,<sup>11a</sup> or for realisation of property by prosecuting causes of action arising outside jurisdiction.<sup>12</sup>

Where a receiver has been appointed at the instance of one decree-holder, it is not necessary that every decree-holder should also have a receiver appointed in his own suit in respect of the same property,<sup>13</sup> though it does not disable him from asking for such relief in proper cases. Thus, a mortgagee decree-holder can ask for the appointment of a receiver though a receiver has already been appointed in a partition suit.<sup>14</sup>

O. 21 R. 34. — Execution of decree for execution of a document or endorsement of a negotiable instrument.

O. 21 R. 53. — Attachment of decrees.

O. 21 R. 56. — Delivery of attached coins or currency notes to the party entitled under the decree.

This clause does not enable a Court to add to, or subtract from, the terms of the decree itself inasmuch as it is a general principle of law that an executing Court cannot go behind the decree but must execute it as it stands.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where a decree in a redemption suit directs delivery of title deeds without any alternative provision for payment of damages in default of doing so, the executing Court cannot award such damages, though a separate suit may lie therefor.<sup>2</sup>

As to adjustments or agreements of parties out of Court as to the mode of execution of the decree, see O. 21 R. 2.

8. "On the application of the decree-holder." — The Section requires that the Court can act only on the application of the decree-holder. The reason for this requirement is that it concerns the parties alone and that the Courts need execute their decrees only if the parties entitled thereto want it.<sup>1</sup> But the application need not necessarily be in writing; it may be oral.<sup>2</sup> Nor need the mode of execution be specifically expressed in such application; it may be inferred from the act of the Court executing the decree.<sup>3</sup> As regards the appointment of a receiver, it has been held by the High Court of Rangoon that even without an application, the Court can suo motu order the appointment of a receiver under Section 94 (d) and O. 40 R. 1.<sup>4</sup> This view is correct. The requirement as to the application in this Section is subject to the conditions and limitations prescribed by the rules—in this case O. 40 R. 1—under which the Court can act suo motu.

This Section requires that the application must be made by the decree-holder. A stranger to the suit or decree cannot apply for execution though there may be a benefit conferred on him by the decree.<sup>5</sup> Nor can the judgment-debtor apply under this Section, e. g., for the appointment of a receiver.<sup>6</sup>

For definition of "decree-holder," vide Section 2 clause (3).

9. Appeal. — This Section must be read with O. 40 R. 1, and an order appointing a receiver in execution, if it falls under O. 40 R. 1, is appealable as an order under O. 43 R. 1 (s).<sup>1</sup> But if the order of appointment is only a conditional one on the furnishing of security and security is not furnished, the order does not take effect at all and no appeal lies.<sup>2</sup> An order refusing to discharge a receiver is one relating to the legal representatives. It also includes cases where the debtor dies before suit and the suit itself is instituted against the legal representatives.

Where a limited liability company goes into voluntary liquidation and another company takes over its assets and liabilities, and a decree is passed against the latter company for the liability and the liability is expressed in the form adopted in decrees against legal representatives of deceased persons, the mode of execution of such a decree is not different in principle from that applicable to a decree passed against the legal representatives of a person who has died a natural death. The latter company having all the assets and liabilities of the former company, is to all intents and purposes a representative in interest of the former company and the principle of sub-section 2 of this Section extends to such a case even though under the Companies Act the transferee company cannot be said to be the legal representative of the transferor company.<sup>1</sup>

The award of the Registrar of Co-operative Societies under the Co-operative Societies Act against the legal representative of a deceased person in respect of a debt due by such person can be executed by attachment and sale of the property of the deceased in the hands of the legal representative.<sup>2</sup>

3. "Legal representative." — See also Order 22 Rule 3.

Where a suit is brought against the representative it is not necessary to state expressly that he is being sued as a representative. It is enough if the plaint contains an allegation that he is such representative.<sup>1</sup> See also Section 53 Note 1 infra.

4. Decree against legal representative, when and how to be passed and its effect. — The High Courts of Bombay, Allahabad, Rangoon and Nagpur have held that, in a suit by a creditor against the heirs of the deceased debtor, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree against the defendants on proof of the debt, whether the deceased left any property or not.<sup>1</sup> The only result in a case where he has not left any property would be that the decree could not be executed against them. But the Lahore High Court holds that in such a case the plaintiff has no cause of action against the heirs.<sup>2</sup> It is submitted that the former view is the correct one. It is not necessary that the plaintiff should prove that the assets of the deceased have come into the hands of the legal representatives; it is sufficient if there are assets of which they may become possessed.<sup>3</sup> The question whether the heirs have got assets of the deceased in their hands must be determined in execution and not in the suit,<sup>4</sup> except when the suit is based on the allegation that the defendants are in possession of the assets.<sup>5</sup>

Section 52
Notes 4-8

In an early decision of the Calcutta High Court, it was held that where there are several legal representatives of the deceased it is not necessary that their shares should be defined; it is enough if a joint decree is passed against all of them.<sup>6</sup> But it has been recently held by the Privy Council that in a suit against the heirs of a deceased Mahomedan for a dower debt due by the deceased, the proper form of decree is against each of the heirs of the deceased for that proportion of the plaintiff's joint claim which corresponds to the share of each heir in the estate of the deceased.<sup>6a</sup> The decree against a legal representative under this Section should direct the defendant to pay the decree debt out of the assets of the deceased in his hands.<sup>7</sup> A decree which does not make such a direction is an erroneous decree.<sup>8</sup>

The decree passed under this Section is a mere money decree and does not create a charge on the assets of the deceased. The Section only states the extent to which and the manner in which the debt can be recovered, and in no way provides for reservation of property to satisfy the debt.<sup>9</sup> Where a person is sued as a representative, a decree cannot be passed against him on the ground that he is a partner since it would alter the nature of the suit.<sup>10</sup>

In order that the provisions of this Section may apply, the decree must be against a person and not merely against something which is not a person. Thus, a decree merely against the assets of a deceased person without mentioning the name of the legal representative is inexecutable.<sup>11</sup>

Where a decree is passed against several heirs of a deceased person and the decree-holder realises the entire decretal amount from some of the heirs alone, the latter can sue the other heirs for contribution.<sup>12</sup>

5. Decree against some of several legal representatives — Validity and legal effect. — As has been already mentioned in Note 63b to Section 11, a decree obtained against some only of several heirs of a deceased person is binding on the estate in the absence of fraud or collusion, on the principle of substantial representation.<sup>1a</sup> This principle will not, however, apply where all the heirs are impleaded and some of them are subsequently exempted by the plaintiffs from the array of defendants. In such a case the defendant exempted cannot be considered to have been represented by the other defendants.<sup>1b</sup> (See also Section 50 Note 14.) In the case of co-administrators or two or more legatees, it has been held that a decree against one only will not bind the estate.<sup>3</sup>

6. Decree against wrong legal representative — Effect. — Where a creditor selects from among several rival claimants to the estate of his deceased debtor any one whom he bona fide believes to have the best prima facie title as legal representative and obtains a decree against him, the decree and the consequent execution sale will bind the true heir in the absence of fraud or collusion.<sup>1</sup> This is an exception to the general principle of law that a decree will bind only the parties to it or those claiming through them. But the true legal representative cannot, after the decree, be brought on record for the purpose of execution and the deceased debtor's property in his hands cannot be attached and sold in that same suit.<sup>2</sup> If a person who has no sort of right to represent the deceased is made a party to the suit and a decree is obtained against him as representing the deceased, such decree cannot bind the true heir.<sup>3</sup> In such a case it cannot be said that the suit was a bona fide one.

7. Decree against executor who has not proved the will — Effect. — An executor appointed by will does not represent the deceased by virtue of the will until he has obtained probate. Therefore, a suit against him by the creditor is not maintainable unless the executor has intermeddled with the estate.<sup>1</sup> In order that the just claims of the creditor in such cases may not be defeated by the executor not taking out probate, the persons who take possession of the estate of the deceased will be treated as the representatives of the deceased. Even if the decree obtained against them cannot be executed against the estate in the hands of the executor when he has taken out probate, it is sufficient to enable the plaintiff to bring a suit against the executor in order to have the decree satisfied.<sup>2</sup>

8. Decree against dead person—Effect. — A suit against a dead person is not maintainable.<sup>1</sup> If a decree is obtained against a dead person without impleading the legal representative, the decree is a nullity and cannot be executed.<sup>2</sup> But the decree is not invalid if the defendant dies after the conclusion of the hearing but before the pronouncing of the judgment.<sup>3</sup> See O. 22 R. 6. So also a decree passed by the Privy Council against a respondent who dies pending the appeal is not a nullity.<sup>4</sup>

the assets of a deceased person in the hands of his heir, the rents and profits accruing since his death form part of his assets.<sup>4</sup> But in the case of lands attached to a hereditary office and which are inalienable, the income is not liable to attachment under this Section.<sup>5</sup> A right to a share of offerings in a temple which has been inherited by a person forms part of the assets of the deceased for the purpose of this Section.<sup>5a</sup>

Where a decree is passed against the assets of the deceased in the hands of the representative and the representative himself dies thereafter, the property in the hands of his heir or legal representative does not cease to be assets of the deceased debtor.<sup>6</sup>

10. Property in the hands of a third party. — When a person is sued as the legal representative of a deceased person for the recovery of a debt due by the deceased, and a decree is passed for money to be paid out of the assets of the deceased in the hands of the representative, the decree is nonetheless a decree against the legal representative. It refers to him as the judgment-debtor, and it follows that such a decree can be executed only against the representative who was made a defendant in the suit or his or her representatives.<sup>1</sup> As has been already mentioned in Section 50, Note 15, a judgment-creditor cannot in execution of his decree follow the assets of the deceased in the hands of transferees in good faith and for valuable consideration,<sup>2</sup> unless the transfers are affected by the doctrine of lis pendens<sup>3</sup> or the transferees knew that there were unpaid debts and that the transferor did not intend to apply the sale proceeds to pay them.<sup>4</sup> Even in such a contingency, the transfer not being a void

one, the property in the hands of the transferee is liable only if the decree-holder shows that there are no other assets of the deceased in the hands of the representative out of which he might seek satisfaction of his decree.<sup>5</sup> Probably, the procedure under this Section is intended to be confined to property remaining in the hands of the representative, leaving the creditors to follow the property alienated by a separate suit,<sup>6</sup> e. g., under Section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act. Where, however, the alienation is void the property in the hands of the alienee can be pursued by the decree-holder.<sup>7</sup>

11. Insolvency of heirs after decree — Effect. — It has been already mentioned in Note 4 above that a decree passed under this Section creates no charge or lien upon the estate of the deceased. Hence, upon the insolvency of the heirs of the deceased after decree, the estate of the deceased vests in the Official Assignee and consequently the creditor can only prove the decree debt in insolvency.<sup>1</sup> Further, even though the creditors of an ancestor have a general lien upon the assets of the ancestor for the payment of their debts and can follow such assets into the hands of the heirs, they cannot follow such assets into the hands of other persons. If the heir has disposed of the assets to other persons who took the property without notice of the creditors' claims, then the creditors' right to follow the property is lost. The right cannot be revived to them by the fact that the heir is adjudicated insolvent and that his transfer is set aside under the insolvency laws so that the assets now become available for distribution among his creditors.<sup>1a</sup> It has been held in the undermentioned cases<sup>2</sup> that where the debtor dies an undischarged insolvent the creditor cannot sue the Official Assignee as the representative of the deceased debtor. The suit must be filed against those persons who would ordinarily be his legal representatives. For, the Official Assignee is not accountable for any assets vested in him as such except to the Insolvency Court.

12. Decree for payment of money. — Order 22, which provides for cases of death after suit and before decree, is not confined to decrees on claims for payment of money alone. Though this Section provides only for the case of money decrees, where a plaintiff sues a deceased person's heir for return of account-books, papers, etc., which have come into his hands, a decree can, under general principles, be passed against the heir for return of those articles or in the alternative for money by way of damages.<sup>1</sup>

13. Liability of legal representative under the Section. — As has been seen in Note 2 to Section 50 ante, the liability of the legal representative is the same, whether he is impleaded before decree under this Section or after decree under Section 50. In either case, it extends only to the extent of the property of the deceased which has come to his hands and has not been duly disposed of.<sup>1</sup> property of the deceased is in the possession of the judgment-debtor.<sup>5</sup> If payments are not made by the heir rateably to all the creditors, it does not follow that he has failed to apply the assets duly. Every payment on account of a debt is perfectly lawful, irrespective of its effect upon the other creditors.<sup>6</sup> In such cases the analogy of Section 323 of the Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925) governing executors and administrators does not apply. Where payments are made by the legal representative to the extent of the full value of the property of the deceased which has come into his hands, the decree cannot be executed even though he may still have in his possession property which originally belonged to the deceased.<sup>7</sup> This Section does not provide that the representative shall be made answerable as well for what, with diligence on his part, would have come to his hands as for what actually has come to his hands.<sup>8</sup> In such a case, the creditor may have a remedy by an administration suit or other regular action.<sup>9</sup>

14. Manner of execution. — See Note 13 Foot-notes 1 to 5.

Where the heir pleads in answer to execution that the property attached is his own private property or is otherwise one which is not liable to be proceeded against in execution, the question should be decided in execution and not referred to a separate suit.<sup>1</sup> The decree-holder is entitled to attach and sell any property of the deceased in the possession of his heirs independently of the fact whether the property in such possession is more than his share or not.<sup>2</sup> He cannot be delayed till the legal representatives are able to ascertain all the creditors and the extent of their debts or till they effect a partition among themselves or settle their disputes inter se, or till probate is obtained, or till the assets are reduced to possession.<sup>2a</sup>

The words "attached and sold" should be taken distributively; so that where income from property in the hands of the legal representative is attached, it is unnecessary to sell it.<sup>3</sup> A decree-holder is entitled to have the whole of his decree satisfied

1. Scope, applicability and object of the Section. — This Section is new. It was introduced for the first time in the Code in 1908. Under the Hindu law, an undivided son or other descendant who succeeds to the joint family property on the death of the ancestor, does so by right of survivorship and takes the property in his own right and not as heir of the ancestor.<sup>1</sup> He is not a legal representative of the deceased ancestor as defined in Section 2 clause (11).<sup>2</sup> But he is liable under the Hindu law by reason of his pious obligation, to pay the debts of his deceased ancestor, to the extent of the joint family properties in his hands. Under the old Code, the term "legal representative" was not defined, and there was a conflict of decisions as to whether a Hindu undivided son or other descendant could, so far as the ancestral property was concerned, be regarded as the legal representative of the deceased ancestor and whether the said liability could be enforced in execution, or only by a separate suit, inasmuch as the liability was quite distinct from, and independent of, the contractual liability of the ancestor<sup>3</sup> or of the liability of a legal representative to pay the debts of the deceased out of the property of the deceased in his hands.<sup>4</sup> The High Courts of Madras<sup>5</sup> and Allahabad<sup>6</sup> held that the liability could be enforced only by way of a separate suit. The other High Courts held that it could be enforced in execution.<sup>7</sup> It is in order to settle this conflict of views in the procedure to be adopted for enforcing the said liability under Hindu law that this Section has been enacted.<sup>8</sup>

This Section is an explanation to Sections 50 and 52. The latter Sections provide for the remedies of a creditor against the properties of his deceased debtor in the hands of his legal representative. This Section explains the meaning of the words "property of the deceased." It also extends the meaning of the term "legal representative" as defined in Section 2 clause (11) by expressly making the son or other descendant of a Hindu, his legal representative in respect of the joint family property in his hands which is liable under Hindu law, for the satisfaction of the debt of the deceased ancestor.<sup>9</sup> Reading these Sections together, it is now clear that ancestral property in the hands of a son or other descendant can be proceeded against in execution as assets of the deceased in the hands of such descendant.<sup>10</sup> The descendant can, in such proceedings, show that in fact no pious obligation exists in view of the illegality or immorality or the non-existence of the debt.<sup>11</sup> In fact, a separate suit will be barred in respect of that matter by virtue of Section 47.<sup>12</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad that this Section, being only a matter of procedure, can be applied even to pending cases, and that an order passed under the old Code can be reversed by the Appellate Court on the ground that Section 53 has been enacted in the meantime.<sup>13</sup> The Madras High Court has, on the other hand, taken a contrary view.<sup>14</sup> Where, however, in a prior order the decree has been construed to be restricted to the assets of the deceased in the restricted sense of the old Code, it becomes res judicata, and, thereafter, the present Section cannot be availed of, to increase the liability and attach it to the ancestral property in the hands of the descendant.<sup>15</sup>

There is nothing in this Section to justify the view that a suit for administration will lie where a Hindu father dies leaving no property of his own except his share in joint family property.<sup>16</sup>

See also Notes 3 and 4 below.

2. "Property in the hands of a son or other descendant." — The Section applies only where the joint family property passes by survivorship to a son or other descendant who is liable, under the Hindu law, to pay the ancestor's debts.<sup>1</sup> The only persons who, under the Hindu law, are under a pious obligation to pay their ancestor's debts are the son, the grandson and the great-grandson<sup>1a</sup> and none else. Hence, the Section has no application where the property has passed into the hands of persons other than the ancestor's sons, grandsons and great-grandsons,<sup>1b</sup> e.g., a brother,<sup>1c</sup> father,<sup>2</sup> uncle<sup>3</sup> or nephew.<sup>4</sup> But if the property of the deceased passes into the hands of a son or other descendant, it does not cease to be liable for the debt even though the son or other descendant dies and even though the property has passed to his heirs.<sup>5</sup> Nor does it cease to be liable where it has passed to the son or other descendant jointly with other persons such as a grandfather or uncle; the reason is that the expression "in the hands of a son" does not necessarily mean property which is exclusively in the hands of a son or other descendant without any partner or coparcener. The expression stands for property belonging to the son or property in which he has a proprietary interest and which may be in his actual or constructive possession joint or exclusive.<sup>6</sup>

See also Note 6, infra.

3. "Which is liable under Hindu law for the payment of the debt of a deceased ancestor." — In order to ascertain the liability of property in the hands of a son or other descendant for the debts of an ancestor, primarily the Hindu law itself and the decisions on the point should be referred.<sup>1</sup> A few broad aspects may, however, be mentioned here.

Under the Hindu law, a son or other descendant (son or grandson or great-grandson) is under a pious obligation to pay his ancestor's debt, but only to the extent of the joint family property in his hands, and provided that such a debt is not 'avyavaharika,' that is, neither illegal nor immoral.<sup>2</sup> The descendant is therefore entitled to show that he has received no joint family property from his ancestor, that the debt was one for which he was not liable under the Hindu law, or that such debt was non-existent.<sup>3</sup> The mere fact, however, that the debt was a personal one and not for the benefit of the family will not absolve him from the liability.<sup>4</sup> Nor will the liability cease by the fact that the descendant was not impleaded in the suit in which the decree was passed,<sup>5</sup> or that after being impleaded in the suit he was exonerated or the suit withdrawn or dismissed against him.<sup>6</sup>

A and B constitute a joint Hindu family. A dies and afterwards, a decree is passed against C, A's son in respect of a debt due by A. B then dies and the entire family property comes to be vested in C. It was held that the share of B which devolves on C by survivorship is not liable to be proceeded against in execution of the decree, the reason being that the share of a paternal uncle to which a person succeeds by survivorship is not property which under the Hindu law is liable to satisfy a debt of the father of such person.<sup>6a</sup> Where the son's liability under the Hindu law to pay his ancestor's debts is established, the whole of the ancestral property in his hands is liable and not merely the share of the deceased ancestor.<sup>7</sup> And the son cannot even claim that the father's share should be sold first.<sup>9</sup>

This Section does not affect the rule of Hindu law that the property of a coparcener which has been attached in execution of a decree in his lifetime<sup>9</sup> or which has been validly mortgaged by him<sup>10</sup> can be proceeded against even subsequent to his death. Nor does it affect the provision of Hindu law by which the whole of the family property can be sold in execution of a decree against the father or manager where the latter was sued in a representative capacity.<sup>11</sup> Nor again can the holder of a decree against the legal representative take advantage of S. 53 and attach ancestral property in the hands of the legal representative where the decree directs that it shall be realised from such property only as belonged to the deceased personally.<sup>12</sup>

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether in the case of Hindu impartible zamindari estates, the debts of a deceased zamindar are enforceable against the estate in the hands of the successor. See the undormentioned cases.<sup>13</sup>

The Jats and other tribes in the Punjab have power, under the customary law applicable to them, to alienate their properties during their lifetime for necessity; but if they die without exercising such power or before the property is attached in execution, the estate ceases to be liable in the hands of their sons.<sup>14</sup> They can attack the decree not only on the ground of the illegality or the immorality of the debt, but also on the ground of want of necessity; and this question can be raised even in execution as it relates to the liability of the judgment-debtor's property for the decree.<sup>15</sup>

Under Section 5 of the Bombay Hereditary Offices Act (3 of 1874) watan property is not saleable to non-watandars. Hence watan property in the hands of a descendant is not saleable for debt of the deceased ancestor.<sup>16</sup>

4. "Deceased ancestor."—The pious obligation of the son or other descendant under the Hindu law exists whether the ancestor is alive or dead.<sup>1</sup> This Section, however, deals with the obligation after the death of the ancestor, and cannot be extended to a case where the ancestor is living.<sup>2</sup> But, independently of this Section, on general principles, if the family continues to be joint at the time when execution is sought, the son's share also in the joint family property can be proceeded against in execution of the decree against the father, even during the lifetime of the father.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that in such a case, the son's share will be property which the father can transfer to pay off his own debts. But, where at the time when execution is sought, partition has taken place between the father and the sons, the shares allotted to the sons at such partition cannot be proceeded against in execution during the lifetime of the father,<sup>4</sup> as in such a case, the father will not have any power of alienation over the share of the sons.

There is a conflict of decisions as to whether in a case where partition has taken place but the father is dead at the time of execution, the shares allotted to the sons at such partition can be proceeded against in execution under this Section. One view is that under this Section, such share can be proceeded against in execution,<sup>5</sup> while the other view is that such share cannot be so proceeded against in execution.<sup>6</sup>

5. "Decree." — For definition of "decree," see Section 2 clause (2) ante.

The Section applies only if there is a decree in respect of the debt sought to be realised out of the property of the deceased.<sup>1</sup> It has been held by the High Court of Madras that the word "decree" in the Section is not limited to money decrees passed against the ancestor, but also includes decrees against property. Thus, according to that Court, a decree passed in respect of joint family properties against the father can be executed against the sons after the father's death.<sup>2</sup> The reason seems to be that, where a descendant has received property which, under Hindu law, would be liable to satisfy the ancestor's debts, if any, the descendant becomes a legal representative of the ancestor for all purposes and that every decree got against the ancestor, whether money decree or not, can be executed against him. The High Court of Bombay has, on the other hand, held that a decree for injunction against an ancestor could not be executed against the descendants on the ground that they were not the legal representatives of the ancestor and that the object of the Section is not merely descriptive but also limitative.<sup>3</sup> The Section has no application to the execution, against legal representatives, of mortgage decrees obtained against the ancestor. Where, therefore, a decree passed under Order 34 determines unconditionally that certain property is chargeable and shall be sold, the legal representatives of the judgment-debtor cannot, in execution, raise the plea that the mortgage debt was immoral or illegal.<sup>3a</sup>

The Section only applies where the decree sought to be executed against a person is binding on such person. Thus, where a suit is brought against the sons and grandsons of a deceased Hindu for the recovery of a debt due by the deceased but the suit is dismissed against the grandsons and is decreed only against the sons, the decree will not bind the grandsons and the interest of the latter in the joint family cannot be proceeded against in execution of such decree.<sup>3b</sup>

A decree passed by the Privy Council against a respondent (who is a Hindu) who dies pending the appeal is not a nullity (See O. 22 R. 4, Note 19) and can be executed against the property coming into the hands of his sons under this Section.<sup>3c</sup>

A decree against a son or other descendant is not a personal decree against him but is only one against the assets in his hands.<sup>4</sup>

6. "Property of the deceased." — The words "property of the deceased" do not include the self-acquisitions of the son or other descendant himself.

Illustration

A and his son B form members of a joint Hindu family. B has got his own self-acquired or separate property over which A has no control. A dies. The separate property of B cannot be proceeded against in execution of a decree against A as "the property of the deceased."<sup>1</sup>

The word "property" is used in this Section in its ordinary and general sense. Thus, although lands inherited by the son of an agriculturist cannot be attached under certain special Acts such as the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act and the Bombay proceeded against in execution (Per Mohammad Noor and Agarwala JJ. — Per Wort J. contra.)]

1. Legislative changes. — The words "or any gazetted subordinate of the Collector deputed by him in this behalf" are new. Other alterations are merely verbal.

2. Scope, object and applicability of the Section. — This Section deals with a case in which a Civil Court can pass a decree but cannot itself execute it. That has to be effected by the Collector. Sections 68 to 72, infra deal with another class of cases in which also the decrees passed by the Civil Court have to be executed only by the Collector. The reason for the provision in this Section restricting the ordinary powers of the Civil Courts to execute their own decrees is two-fold: firstly the Revenue Authorities are more conversant, and better qualified to deal with such matters than the Civil Court<sup>1</sup> and secondly the interests of the Government with regard to the revenue assessed on the assets would be better safeguarded by the Collector executing the decree than by the Court.<sup>2</sup> The Section does not apply to decrees other than decrees for partition, or separate possession of a share of an undivided revenue paying estate.<sup>3</sup> Nor does it apply even to decrees for partition or separate possession of such estates, save where as a result of partition the revenue might be affected.<sup>4</sup> Where, therefore, no separate allotment of the revenue is asked for and the joint liability of the shares for revenue in respect of the whole estate is left unaffected, this Section has no application.<sup>5</sup> But where a prayer is made for division of revenue in the suit, the Section becomes applicable though the prayer is made, not by the plaintiff, but by a defendant.<sup>6</sup>

The Section applies only to a case where the decree contemplates the partition of the whole of the estate paying revenue to Government. It does not apply where the decree is for separate possession of a share of a portion of an undivided estate.<sup>7</sup>

be used in other Acts.<sup>2</sup> There is a conflict of opinion as to whether the Section applies to temporarily settled estates or only to permanently settled estates. The High Court of Madras has held that it applies only to permanently settled estates and not to property temporarily settled, such as property held on ryotwari tenure.<sup>3</sup> A contrary view has been taken by the Bombay High Court. According to it, the Section applies even to property temporarily settled, such as sheri lands or lands held under a lease from Government for a fixed period.<sup>4</sup> According to the Rangoon High Court, the Section is meant to be applied only to estates assessed to revenue in one lump sum for the whole estate and not to estates like the ordinary paddy lands in Burma which are assessed at acre rates.<sup>5</sup> According to the Allahabad High Court the word "estate" cannot be taken to mean isolated plots of land which fall short of being the share of a co-sharer of a mahal.<sup>6</sup> Where a land is an estate to which the Section applies, the crops attached to the land<sup>7</sup> and trees growing thereon<sup>8</sup> will go with the land and can be dealt with by the Collector in the same way as he can deal with the land.

4. Partition decree, meaning of. — A decree for the partition of an undivided estate assessed to the payment of revenue must be drawn up as provided by O. 20 R. 18 clause (1); that is, it should declare rights of the several parties interested in the property but should direct the actual partition to be done by the Collector or gazetted subordinate of the Collector deputed by him in that behalf. It is a joint declaration of the rights of persons interested in the property sought to be partitioned and is a decree, when properly drawn up in favour of each share-holder or set of share-holders having a distinct share.<sup>1</sup> It has been held by the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court that where the decree gives no such directions as are required by O. 20 R. 18 clause (1), it is incumbent on the plaintiff to have it corrected within the time allowed by law, and if this is not done, he cannot ask the Court to transfer the proceedings to the Collector.<sup>1a</sup> The partition contemplated by this Section is not confined to a mere division of the lands but includes also the delivery of the shares to the respective allottees, thus completely carrying out the partition.<sup>2</sup>

5. "Shall be made by the Collector." — As has been seen in Note 2, the Civil Courts have, under this Section, jurisdiction to try and decide suits for partition or separate possession of estates of the kind contemplated by the Section but have no power to execute the decrees passed in such suits.<sup>1</sup> Even the initial application for an order for execution will have to be made in the Civil Courts but the actual execution by partition and delivery of possession is to be made only by the Collector.<sup>3</sup> The Civil Court has no power to do this<sup>3</sup> even if the parties agree to its being so done.<sup>4</sup>

The Collector cannot refuse to carry out a decree passed under this Section<sup>5</sup> nor can he contravene the terms thereof or the decretal command or transgress the law.<sup>6</sup> See also foot-notes 5, 6 and 8 of Note 7.

6. In accordance with law relating to partition.—The partition to be made by the Collector must be made not only in accordance with the terms of the decree, but also in accordance with various Rent and Revenue Acts and Regulations and Standing Orders of the Boards of Revenue of the various Provinces.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where a local Act prescribes that only recorded co-sharers can apply to the Revenue Authorities for partition, the Civil Court must direct the parties so to apply.<sup>2</sup>

7. Remedies against the Collector's action.—The Collector, no doubt, acts ministerially in executing the decree of the Civil Court, but a certain discretion is allowed to him and, so long as he keeps within the bounds prescribed, the Court has no right to replace his discretion by its own,<sup>1</sup> inasmuch as the Legislature has preferred the execution by the Collector, to that by the Court as being a better qualified and superior agency.<sup>2</sup> But this does not deprive the Court of the judicial control of its decree.<sup>8</sup> Thus, the Court can entertain an application to expedite and authorise the Collector to revive and continue the execution proceedings already sent to, and pending before, him.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, where the Collector contravenes the decretal command of the Court<sup>5</sup> or transgresses the law<sup>6</sup> or otherwise acts ultra vires<sup>7</sup> or refuses to carry out the decree,<sup>8</sup> his action can be controlled and corrected by the Court which passed the decree. See also Note 5, foot-notes (5) and (6).

But can the Court interfere with the Collector's partition on the ground of inequality of the partition? According to the Bombay High Court it cannot.<sup>9</sup> The Madras High Court seems to take a different view.<sup>10</sup> But even in cases where the Civil Court will not interfere with the propriety of a partition made by the Collector so far as the parties thereto are concerned, it is bound to enquire into a complaint of a third party who alleges that he has been illegally dispossessed.<sup>10a</sup>

Where a partition is made by a Civil Court which does not affect the revenue and subsequently an application is made to the Collector to make a "perfect partition," that is, a partition accompanied by separate revenue liabilities, the Collector is not bound by the Civil Court partition. He should, however, follow the Civil Court partition as far as possible, but may depart therefrom if the safeguarding of the Government revenue makes it necessary.<sup>11</sup>

Where the Collector puts the party in possession of a wrong village<sup>12</sup> or where a decree is wrongly sent to the Collector and he executes it,<sup>13</sup> the Collector's action is a mere nullity and without jurisdiction.

A Collector making a partition under the Section can revise the same for mistake or other cause before he passes final orders and returns the proceedings to the Civil Court; and the remedy of a party aggrieved by the act of the Collector is to apply to the executing Court under Section 47 of the Civil Procedure Code and not to proceed by way of a separate suit.<sup>14</sup>

8. Appeals. — Under the various local Rent and Revenue Laws and Regulations in force relating to partition, appeals are provided for in respect of the several acts and orders of the Collector in making a partition,<sup>1</sup> some of the appeals lying to the Civil Court itself.<sup>2</sup> In respect of some orders and acts the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is expressly excluded.<sup>3</sup> As to the Civil Court's power to control the execution, by the Collector, of the decree passed under this Section, see Note 7 above.

9. Decree for partition, when and how may be passed.—For the form of decree to be passed under the Section, see O. 20 R. 18, clause (1).

Where a decree declaring a right to partition has not been given effect to and the decree has, by lapse of time or otherwise, become unenforceable, it is open to the parties, if they still continue joint, to sue afresh for partition.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, where a suit for partition is dismissed for default, a fresh suit for partition can be maintained notwithstanding O. 9 R. 8 of the Code.<sup>2</sup> The reason is that the right to enforce partition is a legal incident of a joint tenancy and as long as such tenancy exists, so long may any one of the joint tenants apply to the Court for partition of the joint property.<sup>3</sup> But where the shares have been separated as per the Civil Court's decree, the decree is final and cannot be re-opened by a fresh suit.<sup>4</sup>

All interests in estates such as subordinate tenures of a fractional share of an estate<sup>5</sup> or the estate of a Hindu widow<sup>6</sup> can be partitioned provided there is no inconvenience caused thereby to the other sharers or persons owning interests in that estate. But the partition should be complete, that is, should embrace all the properties in which the plaintiff is interested<sup>7</sup> and should be effected between all persons interested therein.<sup>8</sup> As has been seen already in Note 4 above, the decree under this Section is a joint decree in favour of all the sharers. It follows that for purposes of limitation steps taken by one of them will save limitation in favour of all.<sup>9</sup> There can, however, be no decree in favour of sharers who do not agree to, or ask for, a partition of their own shares.<sup>10</sup> Nor can there be a decree in favour of any sharer where the plaintiff's suit is itself dismissed.<sup>11</sup>

Where there is a decree in favour of the plaintiff and none in favour of the defendants, the latter's shares cannot be partitioned in execution of the decree.<sup>12</sup>

ARREST AND DETENTION

brought before the Court, and his detention may be in the civil prison of the district in which the Court ordering the detention is situate, or, where such civil prison does not afford suitable accommodation, in any other place which the Provincial Government may appoint<sup>6</sup> for the detention of persons ordered by the Courts of such district to be detained:

Provided, firstly, that, for the purpose of making an arrest under this section, no dwelling-house shall be entered after sunset and before sunrise:

Provided, secondly, that no outer door of a dwelling-house shall be broken open<sup>7</sup> unless such dwelling-house is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor and he refuses or in any way prevents access thereto, but when the officer authorized to make the arrest has duly gained access to any dwelling-house, he may break open the door of any room in which he has reason to believe the judgment-debtor is to be found:

Provided, thirdly, that if the room is in the actual occupancy of a woman who is not the judgment-debtor<sup>8</sup> and who according to the customs of the country does not appear in public, the officer authorized to make the arrest shall give notice to her that she is at liberty to withdraw, and, after allowing a reasonable time for her to withdraw and giving her reasonable facility for withdrawing, may enter the room for the purpose of making the arrest:

Provided, fourthly, that, where the decree in execution of which a judgment-debtor is arrested, is a decree for the payment of money and the judgment-debtor pays the amount of the decree and the costs of the arrest to the officer arresting him, such officer shall at once release him.

(2) The Provincial Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, declare that any person or class of persons whose arrest might be attended with danger or inconvenience<sup>9</sup> to the public shall not be liable to arrest in execution of a decree otherwise

Section 55 than in accordance with such procedure as may be prescribed by the Provincial Government in this behalf.

(3) Where a judgment-debtor is arrested in execution of a decree for the payment of money and brought before the Court, the Court shall inform him<sup>10</sup> that he may apply to be declared an insolvent, and that he may be discharged if he has not committed any act of bad faith regarding the subject of the application and if he complies with the provisions of the law of insolvency for the time being in force.

(4) Where a judgment-debtor expresses his intention to apply to be declared an insolvent and furnishes security,<sup>11</sup> to the satisfaction of the Court, that he will within one month so apply, and that he will appear, when called upon, in any proceeding upon the application or upon the decree in execution of which he was arrested, the Court may release him from arrest,<sup>14</sup> and, if he fails so to apply and to appear, the Court may either direct the security to be realised or commit him to the civil prison in execution of the decree.

 Small Cause Court debtors—Section applies. See Note 10 F-N (1).
 "Within one month"—No power to extend period. See Note 12 Pt. (6).

1. Changes introduced in 1908. — The following are the important changes introduced by the Section :—

- (1) Under Section 336 of the old Code, no outer door of a dwelling-house could be broken open under any circumstances. The present Section provides that "no outer door of a dwelling-house shall be broken open unless such dwelling-house is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor and he refuses or in any way prevents access thereto." See Note 7 below.
- (2) Under the old Code the surety was released from his obligation if the judgment-debtor applied to be declared an insolvent, even if he failed to appear according to the terms of the bond. The words "if he fails so to apply and to appear" in sub-section (4) make it clear that now a surety is liable if the judgment-debtor either failed to apply or to appear according to the terms of the bond. See Note 12 below.
- (3) Sub-section (2) empowers the Local Government [the Provincial Government, after amendment by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937] to exempt certain persons from arrest.
- (4) The provision for the mode of realisation of the security has been omitted in view of Section 145, infra.

2. Subsequent amendments. — By Act III of 1921 the word "may" has been substituted for the word "will" in sub-section (3) and for the word "shall" in sub-section (4). See Note 14 below.

By the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, the words "Local Government" and "Local Official Gazette" have been altered to "Provincial Government" and "Official Gazette."

3. "A judgment-debtor may be arrested." — Where a personal decree is passed against a judgment-debtor, the decree-holder can enforce his decree against the person or the property of the debtor.<sup>1</sup> The Court has, however, a discretion to allow or refuse execution against the person and property of the judgment-debtor at the same time.<sup>2</sup> The mere fact that a warrant for attachment of property has been issued may be a sufficient ground for refusing to issue warrant of arrest but when the judgment-debtor has evaded payment it would not be a sufficient ground to refuse warrant of arrest.<sup>3</sup>

Where a decree on a hypothecation bond decrees satisfaction from the hypothecated property and also from the judgment-debtor personally and contains no condition that execution shall first be enforced against the property, it is open to the creditor to execute his decree against the person or the property of the judgment-debtor, at his option.<sup>4</sup> Where, however, the decree provides for the satisfaction of the judgment-debt only out of the property mortgaged, the judgment-debtor cannot be arrested in execution of the decree.<sup>5</sup>

The officer arresting a judgment-debtor must have the warrant of arrest in his possession at the time of making the apprehension<sup>6</sup> but he need not show it to the judgment-debtor unless asked to do so.<sup>7</sup> An arrest is not accomplished unless the officer touches the person of the judgment-debtor.<sup>7a</sup>

Where a warrant of arrest has been executed by a person authorised to do so by Nazir, the fact that the endorsement was subsequently made irregularly by the Naib Nazir will not invalidate the arrest.<sup>8</sup>

4. "At any hour and on any day." — An arrest is not illegal because it was made on a Sunday<sup>1</sup> or on a day on which the Court was closed.<sup>2</sup>

5. "As soon as practicable." — It is the duty of the officer arresting a judgment-debtor to bring him before the Court "as soon as practicable." But this does not mean that, if the Court is closed for the vacation, he should take the judgment-debtor to the Court building or to the Judge of the Court at his private residence. The judgment-debtor should be produced at the next sitting of the Court, and in the meantime, the arresting officer is empowered to confine him even in the decree-holder's house.<sup>1</sup>

6. "In any other place which the Provincial Government may appoint." — The imprisonment of the arrested person must be either in the civil prison of the district in which the Court ordering the detention is situate, or in any other place which the Provincial Government may appoint. Where a debtor committed to a particular jail is handed over by the officer arresting him of his own motion, to the officer in charge of a different jail, the imprisonment is unlawful and the prisoner is entitled to be discharged.<sup>1</sup>

For a list of places appointed by the Provincial Government under this Section, see the undermentioned notifications.<sup>2</sup>

7. Breaking open of outer door. — Under Section 336 of the old Code no outer door of a dwelling-house could be broken open under any circumstances. Under the present Section, the outer door may be broken open if —

- (1) such a dwelling house is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor, and
- (2) he refuses or in any way prevents access thereto.

The object of this change in the law is to prevent vexatious forms of resistance to execution which constantly obstruct decree-holders in the execution of their decrees.<sup>1</sup>

8. Where room is in the occupancy of a woman, not a judgment-debtor. — The third proviso to sub-section (1) only applies where the room is in the occupancy of a woman who is not the judgment-debtor. If it is in the occupation of a woman who is herself the judgment-debtor against whom a warrant of arrest was issued, as, for instance, in execution of a decree for restitution of conjugal rights,<sup>1</sup> the

9. Exemption of persons whose arrest might be attended with danger or inconvenience. — This sub-section is new and is intended to cover the cases of certain persons or classes of persons whose summary arrest might, as in the case of railway servants, be attended with danger or inconvenience to the public.<sup>1</sup> But, where a suit is brought against such persons, the fact that they could not be arrested in execution is no ground for not passing a decree against them.<sup>2</sup>

10. Court's duty to inform judgment-debtor that he may apply to be declared insolvent. — Where a judgment-debtor is arrested and brought before the Court, it is the duty of the Court to inform him that he may apply to be declared insolvent.<sup>1</sup> This, however, is unnecessary where he has already applied in insolvency and the application is pending.<sup>2</sup> The Court has, in such a case, a discretionary power not to put the warrant in force if the judgment-debtor furnishes security for his appearance when called upon.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, in a case where the judgment-debtor has already applied in insolvency and his application has been dismissed by the Insolvency Court and he is re-arrested, the executing Court need not inform him that he may apply to be declared insolvent, or take the other steps indicated in sub-section (3). The reason is that until the order of dismissal of the insolvency application is set aside with the permission of the Insolvency Court the judgment-debtor cannot apply again to be declared an insolvent.<sup>4</sup>

The provisions of sub-section (3) or the mere fact of arrest will not, however, entitle the debtor to be adjudged an insolvent except in conformity with the provisions of the insolvency law.<sup>5</sup>

Under the Codes of 1877 and 1882, the provisions corresponding to this sub-section did not apply to the presidency towns<sup>6</sup> nor to Provinces which were not notified by the Local Governments.<sup>7</sup>

11. Security bond to be given by the judgment-debtor. — This Section applies only where the judgment-debtor is under arrest. Where he is already committed to jail, he can only be discharged under Section 58, infra.<sup>1</sup>

The judgment-debtor brought under arrest must furnish security —

1. that he will, within one month, apply to be declared insolvent, and

2. that he will appear, when called upon, in any proceeding upon the application or upon the decree in execution of which he was arrested.<sup>3</sup>

Where he has already been adjudged an insolvent, and produces the adjudication order when brought under arrest before the Court, it is still the duty of the Court to require him to give security that he will appear, when called upon, in any proceeding upon the application or upon the decree in execution of which he was arrested.<sup>3</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad and the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court that no stipulations other than the two heads of covenants mentioned in the Section, are contemplated by the Section.<sup>3a</sup> Where besides the two covenants the bond contained other stipulations as to what would happen if the judgment-debtor's application for insolvency was dismissed, it was held that such stipulations could not be enforced in execution under Section 145.<sup>4</sup> The High Court of Madras has, however, in a recent case taken a contrary view.<sup>4a</sup> The same High Court has also held that where a surety undertook to produce the judgment-debtor whenever called upon until he was "adjudged and discharged," the surety was not discharged merely on the filing of the judgment-debtor's application for discharge in insolvency.<sup>4b</sup>

A suit will always lie to enforce any condition that may be incorporated in a surety bond.<sup>5</sup>

As to the general stamp fee and court-fee leviable on a security bond given under this Section, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>6</sup>

11a. Bond, if should be in writing. — This Section only requires that security to the satisfaction of the Court should be given. It does not provide that the surety will become effective only if a bond is formally executed. It is not, therefore, illegal for the Court to accept a person as surety in proceedings under this Section on oral statements made before it; nor is it obligatory to take a bond in writing.<sup>1</sup>

12. Liability and discharge of surety. — Under the old Code, the security had to be furnished for the judgment-debtor applying to be declared an insolvent and for his appearance, whenever called upon by the Court, but the surety became liable only if the judgment-debtor failed "so to apply." It was therefore held under the old Code that a surety was discharged if the judgment-debtor applied to be declared an insolvent, in time, though he failed to appear when called upon.<sup>1</sup> The substitution of the words "if he fails so to apply and to appear" in the present Section now makes it clear that the surety is not discharged by the mere filing of the insolvency application by the judgment-debtor, but that his liability continues until a final order is made on the petition in insolvency.<sup>2</sup>

The surety will be liable (1) if the judgment-debtor fails to apply in time to be declared an insolvent;<sup>2a</sup> or (2) if he fails to appear whenever called upon to do so.<sup>3</sup>

Application within one month to be declared an insolvent. — A surety is not discharged by a petition by the judgment-debtor to be declared an insolvent where it is not in proper form and not within the prescribed time.<sup>4</sup> Where a judgment-debtor presented an insolvency application not in a proper form and not accompanied with the necessary deposit, and the same was returned for amendment but was not re-presented thereafter, the surety was held not discharged from his liability.<sup>5</sup> Where, however, a surety bond is given undertaking that the judgment-debtor would "continue the insolvency proceeding," the liability continues only up to the adjudication. The fact that after adjudication it is annulled for the default of the insolvent will not render the surety liable under the bond.<sup>5a</sup> A Court has no jurisdiction to extend the period of one month fixed by the Section. The period being one fixed by law, Section 148 has no application to it.<sup>6</sup>

Appearance whenever called upon. — A security bond under this Section is in the nature of a continuing guarantee and the surety is entitled to produce the judgment-debtor before the Court and request it to absolve him from further liability under the bond.<sup>7</sup> But the production of the judgment-debtor at a time when it is impossible for the Court or the decree-holder to take any steps to have the judgment-debtor taken into custody does not amount to his appearance when called upon to appear and the surety will not be discharged thereby.<sup>8</sup> Where the judgment-debtor dies before breach of either of the conditions of the bond, the surety is discharged thereby.<sup>9</sup> But where he dies after the breach of any one of the conditions, as for instance where he fails to apply within one month and then dies, the liability of the surety continues and he is not discharged.<sup>10</sup>

Under the old Code, the security had to be "that he will appear when called upon" and it was held that this referred to the particular execution application in which the judgment-debtor was arrested, so that if that application was dismissed or struck off, the surety was discharged.<sup>11</sup> Under the present Section the security must be "that he will appear, when called upon in any proceeding upon the application or upon the decree in execution of which he was arrested." This makes it clear that a surety will not be released by the dismissal of the particular execution application<sup>12</sup> especially where a breach of the conditions of the bond had occurred before the dismissal.<sup>13</sup> But, where, after the execution of the security bond, the judgment-debtor applied to the Debt Conciliation Board to settle his debts including the debt due to the decree-holder and on production of the certificate showing that such application had been made, the execution case was struck off as infructuous and the order was accepted without protest by the decree-holder, it was held that both parties must be considered to have accepted the position that the execution proceedings had come to an end and that the matter would be dealt with, thenceforth, by the Debt Conciliation Board, i.e., in other words, that the surety bond was regarded as cancelled and it was not thereafter open to the decree-holder, when he had refused to accept the offer made by the judgment-debtor before the Debt Conciliation Board, to ask the Court to realise the security.<sup>13a</sup>

The non-production of the judgment-debtor owing to illness which renders his attendance physically impossible without risk to health or life is a valid excuse and does not render the surety liable on the bond.<sup>14</sup> Nor can he be proceeded against while the proceedings in insolvency filed by the judgment-debtor are pending and there is no other default.<sup>15</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>15a</sup>

A decree-holder has no cause of action against an attesting witness to a security bond for appearance of an insolvent judgment-debtor.<sup>16</sup>

Notes 12-14

13. Realisation of security. — A security bond under this Section is in favour of the Court and not the decree-holder.<sup>1</sup> Where, therefore, a condition of the bond is broken the option as to whether the security should be realized or the judgment-debtor committed to jail rests with the executing Court and not with the decree-holder.<sup>2</sup> The Court in a proper case can refuse in its discretion to execute the bond against the surety.<sup>3</sup> The creditor interested must, however, take the necessary steps to move the Court in the matter.<sup>4</sup> The Court cannot proceed both against the judgment-debtor and against the surety. It can only proceed against the one or the other.<sup>5</sup> But a mere issue of a warrant against the judgment-debtor will not bar the Court from proceeding against the surety if the warrant is unfruitful,<sup>6</sup> nor will an arrest without committal of the judgment-debtor have the effect of discharging the surety,<sup>6a</sup> though the surety will be automatically discharged if the judgment-debtor is committed to the civil prison.<sup>6b</sup>

From the fact that the bond is executed in favour of the Court and not of the decree-holder it also follows that the surety's liability is not extinguished under Section 135 of the Contract Act by the decree-holder granting time to the judgment-debtor.<sup>7</sup>

Moneys realised from the security cannot be forfeited to Government but should be utilised to satisfy the decree amount.<sup>8</sup> The decree-holder will not, however, be entitled to anything more than the amount due to him under the decree.<sup>9</sup> But subject to this condition, the Court has no power to reduce the amount for which the bond is executed.<sup>10</sup>

14. "The Court may release him from arrest." — Under the old Code a judgment-debtor expressing his intention to file a petition in insolvency and complying with the provisions of the Section was entitled to be discharged from custody.<sup>1</sup> The substitution of the word "may" for the word "shall" in sub-section (4) by Act III of 1921 makes the release depend upon the discretion of the Court.

A judgment-debtor who, when brought before the Court under arrest, has not expressed his intention to apply to be declared an insolvent, is not thereby precluded from so applying during his imprisonment, and get himself released under the insolvency laws.<sup>2</sup>

15. Damages for wrongful arrest. — In a suit for damages for wrongful arrest in execution of a decree, the plaintiff must show —

- (a) that the original action out of which the alleged injury arose was decided in his favour,
- (b) that the arrest was procured maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause, and
- (c) that he has suffered some collateral wrong.<sup>1</sup>

16. Insolvency, when a protection from arrest. — A judgment-debtor is not protected from arrest by the mere fact of his having applied in insolvency whether the debt for which he is sought to be arrested is mentioned in the schedule or not.<sup>1</sup> Even an order of adjudication will not protect the debtor in respect of debts not mentioned in the insolvency petition.<sup>2</sup> In respect of debts scheduled in the insolvency petition, there is, by the mere fact of adjudication, a qualified protection inasmuch as the debtor cannot be proceeded against without the leave of the Insolvency Court.<sup>3</sup> Where a protection order has been made in favour of the insolvent under Section 31 of the Insolvency Act, the debtor will have an unqualified protection against all proceedings in respect of the scheduled debts.<sup>4</sup>

17. Application for arrest, if a step-in-aid of execution. — An application for the arrest of the judgment-debtor will be an application for execution and will give a fresh starting point of limitation under Article 182 of the Limitation Act.<sup>1</sup> An application by the heirs of the decree-holder will also be a step-in-aid of execution within the meaning of the said Article 182 even though the heirs have not obtained a succession certificate and have not been placed on the record.<sup>2</sup>

18. Appeal and revision from orders under the Section. — An order against the judgment-debtor or against the surety under this Section is an order falling within Section 47 and is appealable as a decree.<sup>1</sup> So also is an order against a decree-holder refusing simultaneous execution against the person and property of the judgment-debtor.<sup>2</sup>

As mentioned in Note 13, when a condition of the bond is broken, the option of proceeding against the surety or the judgment-debtor lies with the Court. When the Judge exercises the option in favour of the surety, the matter cannot be subsequently re-opened before him. If he does so, and passes fresh orders, they are passed without jurisdiction and can be set aside in revision.<sup>3</sup>

 the Court shall not order the arrest or detention in the civil prison of a woman in execution of a decree for the payment of money.

Prohibition of arrest or detention of women in execution of decree for money.

1. Scope of Section. — Before the Code of 1908 was enacted, there was no rule prohibiting the arrest of women in execution of decrees and a purdanashin woman was held not exempt from arrest.<sup>1</sup> Under the present Section a Court cannot arrest a woman in execution of a money decree.<sup>2</sup> But, can a woman be arrested in execution of a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights? Under O. 21 R. 33 as it originally stood, such arrest was legal.<sup>3</sup> But after that Rule was amended by Act XXIX of 1923 a decree for the restitution of conjugal rights, whether against the husband or the wife, cannot be executed by the arrest of the judgment-debtor.

Although this Section exempts a woman from arrest in execution of a decree for money, yet where in a suit for money a woman is the plaintiff, she may be required under O. 25 R. 1 (3) to give security for the defendant's costs.

1. Legislative changes. — The following are the main changes effected :—

(1) Clauses (a) and (b) of sub-section (1) correspond to Section 342 of the old Code, but the phraseology has been changed with a view to make it clear that the Court has no power to fix shorter periods than those mentioned in the Section. See Note 6 below.

(2) The proviso to sub-section (1) and sub-section (2) correspond to Section 341 of the old Code, clauses (a) to (d).

2. "Subsistence allowance." — The cost of clothing, etc., of the judgment-debtor, required to be supplied by the decree-holder under Section 33 of the Prisons Act, is not "subsistence allowance" under Section 58 which includes only the monthly allowance fixed by scale under Section 57 of the Code.<sup>1</sup>

3. Omission to pay subsistence allowance will result in release of judgment-debtor. — On failure of the decree-holder to pay subsistence allowance the judgment-debtor should be released.<sup>1</sup> A payment cannot be considered to have been made to the officer in charge of the prison until it actually reaches his hands. Hence where, though the subsistence allowance has been sent by money-order to such officer sufficiently early to reach him in time, it does not actually reach him in time, there is as "omission to pay" within Section 58 (b) (iv).<sup>2</sup> Where a judgment-debtor is released on the application of the decree-holder the latter is entitled to a refund of the balance of the subsistence money advanced by him that remains in Court at the time of the debtor's release.<sup>3</sup>

4. Person released from detention under this Section cannot be re-arrested. — A judgment-debtor released from detention under this Section cannot be re-arrested in execution of the same decree.<sup>1</sup> Hence a judgment-debtor cannot, in execution of an instalment decree, be arrested and imprisoned separately for default in respect of each instalment.<sup>2</sup> But the immunity from re-arrest exists only when the judgment-debtor has been actually detained in prison<sup>2a</sup> and not where he has been merely arrested. Hence, where after arrest the judgment-debtor is released before actual imprisonment, he can be re-arrested in execution of the decree.<sup>3</sup> But where the warrant of commitment to jail has been made out, a discharge of the judgment-debtor whilst in confinement in the court-house is a release from "detention" within the meaning of this Section.<sup>4</sup> Another condition for the applicability of the immunity from re-arrest is that the release from detention must be under this Section. Thus, a debtor who has been released owing to a mistake of the jail authorities in sending the demand for clothing under Section 33 of the Prisons Act to a wrong address is not exempt from re-arrest under this Section.<sup>5</sup> See also Note 5. A Court cannot direct the re-arrest of a judgment-debtor without any petition or motion of the decree-holder.<sup>6</sup>

5. Interim protection order, effect of. — Where a judgment-debtor who has been arrested and imprisoned in execution of a decree applies to be adjudicated an insolvent and obtains an interim protection order and is released, is he liable to be re-arrested under the decree? On this question there is a conflict of decisions. The High Courts of Allahabad<sup>1</sup> and Bombay<sup>2</sup> take the view that the judgment-debtor is liable to be re-arrested in such a case as, according to them, the only cases in which the judgment-debtor is entitled to exemption from re-arrest are those enumerated in Section 58. But the Calcutta High Court has taken the opposite view and held that once the judgment-debtor is released from imprisonment in execution of a decree he cannot be re-arrested under the same decree.<sup>3</sup> It is submitted that the view taken in Bombay and Allahabad is more in consonance with the language of the Section.

Notes 6-10

6. Period of detention. — Under this Section, the Court has no power at its discretion to fix shorter periods of imprisonment than those prescribed in the Section.<sup>1</sup> Where the defendant is under imprisonment under O. 38 R. 4 of the Code, such imprisonment suffered after the date of the decree must be deemed as imprisonment in execution of the decree and the period of imprisonment after that date must be taken into consideration in calculating the period prescribed by Section 58.<sup>2</sup> Where a judgment-debtor is released, not under this Section, but under a mistake of the jail authorities and he is re-arrested, the period of imprisonment under the new warrant should include the period of imprisonment already suffered under the old warrant.<sup>3</sup>

7. Release does not discharge debtor from debt. — A release under this Section does not discharge the debtor from the debt. His property remains liable to attachment and sale<sup>1</sup> and he can also be adjudicated an insolvent for the debt.<sup>2</sup>

Under the Agra Tenancy Act,<sup>3</sup> where a judgment-debtor has been released from detention and the amount due under the decree does not exceed Rs. 100, the Court may declare him absolved from liability for payment of money, and such liability shall thereupon be extinguished except in regard to liability to ejectment.

8. Contempt of Court. — This Section does not apply to cases of imprisonment for contempt of Court,<sup>1</sup> the power of the Court to imprison for contempt being irrespective of the Code.<sup>2</sup>

9. Application for arrest, if saves limitation. — An application for the arrest of a judgment-debtor in contravention of this Section does not give a fresh starting point of limitation.<sup>1</sup>

10. Miscellaneous. — A Court will release a debtor where the jailor holds no warrant<sup>1</sup> but not where the warrant is only informal.<sup>2</sup>

A return to a writ of habeas corpus must be taken to be true and cannot be controverted by affidavit;<sup>3</sup> but where a debtor who is arrested and imprisoned under a warrant of the Presidency Small Cause Court is brought before the High Court on a writ of habeas corpus, he is entitled to show that he was privileged from arrest, the Presidency Small Cause Court not being a Court of co-ordinate jurisdiction with the High Court but subordinate to it.<sup>4</sup> Under the Oudh Rent Act<sup>5</sup> the imprisonment and attachment may, subject to the provisions of this Section, be continued until the party complies with the terms of the decree.

(2) Where a judgment-debtor has been arrested, the Court may release him if, in its opinion, he is not in a fit state of health to be detained in the civil prison.

(3) Where a judgment-debtor has been committed to the civil prison, he may be released therefrom —

(b) by the committing Court, or any Court to which that Court is subordinate, on the ground of his suffering from any serious illness.

Synopsis

1. Discretion of Court in issuing warrant.
2. On the ground of serious illness.

1. Discretion of Court in issuing warrant. — The provisions of this Section are based on humanitarian grounds and if a judgment-debtor is suffering from serious illness, the Court would be well advised in ordering his release so as to escape from the moral responsibility in case anything should happen to him on being sent to jail.<sup>1</sup> A Court is not bound in every case to issue a warrant for arrest and if it has reason to believe that the judgment-debtor is not in a fit state of health to undergo confinement, it would act wisely in issuing a notice to him to show cause in the first instance.<sup>1a</sup> The discretion exercised in issuing a warrant of arrest will not ordinarily be interfered with in appeal.<sup>2</sup>

2. On the ground of serious illness. — Asthma and indigestion do not constitute "serious illness" sufficient to enable the Court to cancel a warrant of arrest issued against the judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup>

ATTACHMENT

60. (1) The following property is liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree, namely, lands, houses or other buildings, goods, money, bank-notes, cheques, bills of exchange, hundis, promissory notes, Government securities, bonds or other securities for money, debts, shares in a corporation and, save as hereinafter mentioned, all other saleable property, moveable or immoveable, belonging to the judgment-debtor, or over which, or the profits of which, he has a disposing power which he may exercise for his own benefit, whether the same be held in the name of the judgment-debtor or by another person in trust for him or on his behalf:

Provided that the following particulars shall not be liable to such attachment or sale, namely:—

- (a) the necessary wearing-apparel, cooking vessels, beds and bedding of the judgment-debtor, his wife and children, and such personal ornaments as, in accordance with religious usage, cannot be parted with by any woman;
- (b) tools of artisans, and, where the judgment-debtor is an agriculturist, his implements of husbandry and such cattle and seed-grain as may, in the opinion of the Court, be necessary to enable him to earn his livelihood as such, and such portion of agricultural produce or of any class of agricultural produce as may have been declared to be free from liability under the provisions of the next following section;
- (c) houses and other buildings (with the materials and the sites thereof and the land immediately appurtenant thereto and necessary for their enjoyment) belonging to an agriculturist and occupied by him;
- (d) books of account;
- (e) a mere right to sue for damages;
- (f) any right of personal service;
- (g) stipends and gratuities allowed to pensioners of the Crown, or payable out of any service family pension fund notified in the Official Gazette by the Central Government or the Provincial Government in this behalf, and political pensions;

<sup>a</sup>(h) the wages of labourers and domestic servants, whether payable in money or in kind ; and salary, to the extent of the first hundred rupees and one-half the remainder of such salary ;

(i) the salary of any public officer or of any servant of a railway company or local authority to the extent of the first hundred rupees and one-half the remainder of such salary :

Provided that, where the whole or any part of the portion of such salary liable to attachment has been under attachment, whether continuously or intermittently for a total period of twenty-four months, such portion shall be exempt from attachment until the expiry of a further period of twelve months and, where such attachment has been made in execution of one and the same decree, shall be finally exempt from attachment in execution of that decree ;

(j) the pay and allowances of persons to whom the "Indian Army Act, 1911, or the Burma Army Act applies, 'or of persons other than commissioned officers to whom the Naval Discipline Act as modified by the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934, applies ;

(k) all compulsory deposits and other sums in or derived from any fund to which the Provident Funds Act, "1925, for the time being applies in so far as they are declared by the said Act not to be liable to attachment ;

(m) an expectancy of succession by survivorship or other merely contingent or possible right or interest ;

exempt from liability to attachment or sale in execution of a decree; and,

- (p) where the judgment-debtor is a person liable for the payment of land-revenue, any moveable property which, under any law for the time being applicable to him, is exempt from sale for the recovery of an arrear of such revenue.

<sup>1</sup>Explanation 1. — The particulars mentioned in clauses (g), (h), (i), (j), (l) and (o) are exempt from attachment or sale whether before or after they are actually payable, [and in the case of salary other than salary of a public officer or a servant of a railway company or local authority the attachable portion thereof is exempt from attachment until it is actually payable.]

- (i) as respects any public officer in the service of the Central Government, or any servant of a Federal Railway or of a cantonment authority or of the port authority of a major port, the Central Government;*
- (ii) as respects any public officer employed in connexion with the exercise of the functions of the Crown in its relations with Indian States, the Crown Representative; and*
- (iii) as respects any other public officer or a servant of any other railway or local authority, the Provincial Government.*

(2) Nothing in this Section shall be deemed —

1. Legislative changes. — The following are the main changes incorporated in the Section in 1908 :—

1. The words "cooking vessels," "beds" and "and such personal ornaments as, in accordance with religious usage, cannot be parted with by any woman" found in clause (a) are newly added.

2. The exemption relating to agricultural produce in clause (b) is new.

3. Clause (c) has been substituted for the corresponding clause of Section 266 which ran as follows : "The materials of houses and other buildings belonging to agriculturists."

4. In clause (g) the words "military and civil" occurring in Section 266 of the old Code have been omitted as superfluous, (vide Report of the Select Committee), and the words "or payable out of . . . in this behalf" have been added.

5. Clause (h) is new.

6. In clause (i), the words "or allowances equal to salary" and "while on duty" have been added.

7. Clause (k) is new.

8. In clause (l) the words "whether payable in money or kind" have been newly added at the instance of the Government of Burma (vide Report of the Select Committee).

9. In sub-section (2), the words within brackets, namely "with the materials . . . enjoyment" are newly added with a view to correspond with the changes introduced in clause (1) (c).

2. Subsequent amendments.— 1. By Act XX of 1925, a proviso to clause (1) (i) was added and by Act XXVI of 1923, the words "twenty rupees" and "forty rupees" in clause (1) (i) were replaced by the words "forty rupees" and "eighty rupees" respectively. But the whole clause (i) has been amended by Act 9 of 1937 (see below).

2. Sub-section (2) originally contained two clauses (a) and (b). Clause (b) laid down that nothing in the Section shall be deemed "to affect the provisions of the Army Act or of any similar law for the time being in force." It has now been deleted by Act X of 1914, Schedule II.

3. By Section 2 of Act IX of 1937 [the Code of Civil Procedure (Second Amendment) Act, 1937] the following changes were made in the Section:—

(a) The present clauses (l), (i) and (h) were substituted for the corresponding clauses (h), (i) and (l) as they existed prior to the amendment.

For comparison, both the old and the present clauses (h), (i) and (l) are given below —

PRIOR TO AMENDMENT.

(h) allowances (being less than salary) of any public officer or of any servant of a railway company or local authority while absent from duty;

(i) the salary or allowances equal to salary of any such public officer or servant as is referred to in clause (h) while on duty, to the extent of —

THE CORRESPONDING PROVISION
AFTER AMENDMENT OF 1937.

(l) any allowance forming part of the emoluments of any public officer or of any servant of a railway company or local authority which the appropriate Government may by notification in the Official Gazette declare to be exempt from attachment, and any subsistence grant or allowance made to any such officer or servant while under suspension.

(i) the salary of any public officer or of any servant of a railway company or local authority to the extent of the first hundred rupees and one-half the remainder of such salary;

- (i) the whole of the salary, where the salary does not exceed forty rupees monthly;
- (ii) forty rupees monthly, where the salary exceeds forty rupees and does not exceed eighty rupees monthly; and
- (iii) one moiety of the salary in any other case;

Provided that where the decree-holder is a society registered or deemed to be registered under the Co-operative Societies Act, 1912, and the judgment-debtor is a member of the society, the provisions of sub-clauses (i) and (ii) shall be construed as if the word "twenty" were substituted for the word "forty" wherever it occurs and the word "forty" for the word "eighty."

- (l) the wages of labourers and domestic servants, whether payable in money or in kind.

Provided that, where the whole or any part of the portion of such salary liable to attachment has been under attachment, whether continuously or intermittently for a total period of twenty-four months, such portion shall be exempt from attachment until the expiry of a further period of twelve months and, where such attachment has been made in execution of one and the same decree, shall be finally exempt from attachment in execution of that decree;

- (h) the wages of labourers and domestic servants, whether payable in money or in kind; and salary, to the extent of the first hundred rupees and one-half the remainder of such salary;

(b) The Explanation was re-numbered as Explanation I and the words "and in the case of salary . . . . until it is actually payable" were added.

(c) Explanation II was added.

4. Explanation III has been newly added by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, and defines the term "appropriate Government" in clause (1) which has been substituted for "Governor-General in Council" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

Retrospective effect of amendments.

Under Section 3 of the Amending Act IX of 1937 referred to above, the Amendments made by Section 2 of that Act and referred to above have no effect in respect of any proceedings arising out of any suit instituted before the 1st June 1937.<sup>1</sup>

3. Scope and applicability of the Section. — This Section declares what properties are liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree and what properties are exempt therefrom.<sup>1</sup> It classifies the attachable properties under two heads:

1. lands, houses or other buildings, etc., which are specifically mentioned, and
2. all other saleable property belonging to the judgment-debtor or over which he has a disposing power which he may exercise for his own benefit, except in the cases specified in the proviso.

The Section does not, however, affect any special or local law under which properties attachable under this Section are declared to be not attachable in execution of decrees.<sup>1a</sup> Thus, the properties which have been declared by the following enactments to be not attachable cannot be attached even though such properties are not exempted from attachment under this Section :—

1. The Madras Estates Land Act (1 of 1908), Section 192 (h). — Exempting from attachment and sale the manure stocked by an agriculturist.
2. The Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926), Schedule II, Section 60. — Exempting from attachment and sale the manure stocked by an agriculturist.

4. The Indian Marine Act (XIV of 1887), Section 81. — Exempting from attachment and sale, the clothes, equipment and arms of a person subject to that Act and the pay and allowance of any such officer below the position of a Gazetted Officer.
5. The Ajmere Regulation (I of 1877), Section 30.
6. The Oudh Laws Act (XVIII of 1876). — Exempting from sale in execution of a decree ancestral land, except with the previous sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor.

For other enactments, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>1b</sup>

This Section does not apply to mortgage decrees. The word 'decree' in the Section refers to a money decree and not to a mortgage decree for the execution of which no attachment is necessary.<sup>2</sup> The exemptions from attachment and sale specified in the Section do not apply therefore to mortgage decrees.<sup>3</sup>

There is nothing in this Section or in any other Section of the Code empowering the Court to prescribe to the decree-holder what course he is to take for the realisation of his claim or what property he is to attach;<sup>4</sup> nor is there any restriction to the effect that properties of the judgment-debtor are to be attached only to the extent necessary for the satisfaction of the decrees.<sup>5</sup>

4. Property, meaning of. — The word 'property' is a comprehensive term and indicates every possible interest which a person can have.<sup>1</sup> It includes not only tangible property but also intangible interests in property.<sup>2</sup> It is not every tangible object, however, that will answer the description of "property." Some things are in their nature incapable of appropriation, such as air and water in their natural state and they are not, therefore, property.<sup>3-4</sup> The equity of redemption in mortgaged property,<sup>5</sup>

See also the cases cited below.<sup>10a</sup>

A mere right to sue is not 'property' but is only a title to recover future property.<sup>10b</sup> A claim, therefore, to the right and interest of X in a future award which might be made on a reference to arbitration of matters in dispute between X and Y is not a claim to "property."<sup>11</sup>

5. "All other saleable property." — The property, in order to be attachable under this Section, must be "saleable property."<sup>1a</sup> The word "saleable" in this Section means saleable by court auction at a compulsory sale.<sup>1</sup> For this purpose it is firstly essential that the property should be in existence. Uncertain, future and fluctuating profits derivable from a property,<sup>2</sup> or an indeterminate interest in properties varying according to contingencies, as for example, the interest of a Buddhist couple in marriage property,<sup>3</sup> is not 'saleable property.' Secondly it is also essential that the property must, in law, be capable of being transferred. Where it is so transferable it is saleable property.<sup>4</sup> Property in which the judgment-debtor has no legally transferable lands as remuneration for his services in the temple, his right, title and interest therein can be sold subject, in the hands of the purchaser, to its determination by the death or removal from office of the former.<sup>11</sup> When the right to receive the offerings at a temple is independent of an obligation to render services involving qualifications of a personal nature, such as officiating at the worship, such right is attachable.<sup>11a</sup>

The properties of a charitable trust<sup>12</sup> or of a public religious endowment are inalienable.<sup>13</sup> The property of a temple cannot be sold away from the temple.<sup>14</sup> But a gift of an idol belonging to a private endowment made with the concurrence of the whole family, to another family for the purpose of carrying on a regular worship, is valid.<sup>15</sup>

An occupancy holding is not, as such, non-transferable and is not exempt from attachment.<sup>16</sup> But an occupancy holding not transferable by custom or law or usage is inalienable and is not saleable property.<sup>17</sup> But the mere fact that an estate is impartible does not necessarily make it inalienable.<sup>18</sup>

A mere right of residence is a personal right and is not transferable. It is, therefore, not saleable property.<sup>19</sup> So also the right of a Mahomedan widow in possession of her husband's property for her dower debt is a personal right.<sup>19a</sup>

A service tenure, e. g., land burdened with the performance of a service of a public nature, is inalienable and cannot be attached.<sup>20</sup>

6. "Belonging to the judgment-debtor or over which or the profits of which he has a disposing power." — All saleable properties belonging to a judgment-debtor may be attached unless such attachment is prohibited by any law or the proviso to this Section. For instances of saleable property, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

Even though a property may not belong to the judgment-debtor it may still be attachable if he has a disposing power over it which he may exercise for his own benefit.<sup>1a</sup> Thus, a Hindu father has a disposing power over the whole of the joint family property for the purpose of satisfying his personal debts under certain circumstances.<sup>1b</sup> Similarly, a Hindu coparcener in Madras has a disposing power over his share of the joint family property.<sup>2</sup> So also the karnavan and the senior anandravan of a Malabar tarwad have a disposing power over the tarwad properties which they may exercise for the purpose of satisfying debts contracted for the benefit of the tarwad.<sup>3</sup> But on partition between a Hindu father and his sons the father will cease to have disposing power over the shares allotted to his sons.<sup>3a</sup>

Note 6

A Hindu widow has no disposing power over property which she is entitled to enjoy for her life but which she is not entitled to alienate.<sup>4</sup> See also cases under clause (n) below.

A person in whose favour a retiring gratuity or bonus has been declared by a railway company, but which has not been completed by either a registered document or payment, has no disposing power over it so as to make it attachable in execution of a decree against him.<sup>5</sup>

A member of a mutual benefit fund or society has no disposing power over the monies which by rules of the fund or society are payable after the death of the member to his nominee or legal heir.<sup>6a</sup>

A person who holds properties in trust for another person or for other purposes has no disposing power over them<sup>6</sup> and the corpus of the trust property in the hands of the trustee cannot be attached in execution.<sup>7</sup> Where X effects an insurance policy on his own life and it is expressed to be for the benefit of his wife or of his wife and children, such expression amounts, in cases to which the Married Women's Property Act applies, to a trust in their favour, and consequently X has no disposing power over the policy so as to enable his creditors to attach it in execution of a decree against him.<sup>8</sup> In cases to which the said Act does not apply, the simple declaration, (in the absence of an assignment under Section 130 of the Transfer of Property Act, or a declaration of trust under Section 5 of the Indian Trusts Act) does not create a trust in their favour, and X has a disposing power over the policy which he can exercise for his own benefit and the policy can consequently be attached in execution.<sup>9</sup>

A person who has transferred his property to another has no longer a disposing power over it.<sup>9a</sup> Thus, money deposited under decree to the credit of a decree-holder who has already assigned his interest in the decree to another cannot be attached by the creditors of the decree-holder unless the transfer is proved to be not bona fide.<sup>10</sup> Similarly, where X, a contractor, deposits materials on A's premises and the value thereof is advanced by A, A becomes in effect the purchaser of the materials and X has no longer any disposing power over them.<sup>11</sup>

An auctioneer has no disposing power over the sale proceeds of goods sold on behalf of his client, except to the extent of his commission.<sup>12</sup>

For other cases in which the judgment-debtor has no disposing power, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>13</sup>

The words "belonging to the judgment-debtor" in the Section do not mean "belonging to the judgment-debtor alone" and a judgment-debtor's share in property which belongs to him and other persons jointly is also liable to attachment and sale under this Section.<sup>14</sup>

7. Debts.—A 'debt' is a sum of money which is now payable or will become payable in the future by reason of a present obligation.<sup>1</sup> In other words it means an actually existing debt, i.e., a perfected and absolute debt.<sup>2</sup> Thus, arrears of rent<sup>3</sup> or other monies<sup>4</sup> which have become due are 'debts' and can be attached and sold in execution. But a sum of money which may or may not become due or the payment of which depends upon contingencies which may or may not happen is not a 'debt'.<sup>5</sup> Thus, where A agrees to pay B Rs. 5,000 on a mortgage of B's property and pays Rs. 3,000 in advance, the balance of Rs. 2,000 agreed to be paid by A cannot be attached by a creditor of B. The reason is that the sum may not be paid by A in which case B will be entitled, not to a specific performance of the agreement, but to damages.<sup>6</sup> Similarly, a claim for profits<sup>7</sup> or rent<sup>8</sup> or salary or annuity<sup>9</sup> or other claim<sup>10</sup> not yet due but which might become due in the future is not a 'debt.'

Section 60 Note 7

It is important to remember that a debt may become due though payable in the future.<sup>11</sup>

Illustrations

1. A is entitled to get a monthly allowance from B payable on the 1st of every month. X, a judgment-creditor of A, applies on the 21st December for the issue of an attachment (prohibitory order) in respect of a half of the allowance for the month of December. Held that the attachment could be validly made, inasmuch as the allowance for three weeks in December had already become an existing debt though payable on the first of January.<sup>12</sup> The same principle will apply to interest payable at fixed periods.

2. A deposits certain moneys with B as security for the due performance and completion of a contract entered into by him. X, who has obtained a decree against A, can attach the amount deposited as money due and owing to A though it is not payable to him till the completion of the contract, and may even be forfeited.<sup>13</sup>

Where the money is due as, for instance, by an agent or a vendee to his principal or vendor, it will be a "debt" though the exact amount due is not ascertained at the time of the attachment.<sup>14</sup> But a mere claim for unliquidated damages is not a debt.<sup>15</sup>

A claim over which no Court in British India has jurisdiction is not a debt liable to be attached, but the mere circumstance that the garnishee is, at the time of the application for execution, beyond the limits of British India would not, of itself, render the debt not liable to be attached.<sup>16</sup>

The word "debts" in this Section includes share of debts. A judgment-debtor's share in a debt due to the judgment-debtor and other persons jointly can, therefore, be attached and sold in execution.<sup>17</sup>

8. Necessary wearing apparel, etc. — Clause (a). — The necessary wearing apparel of a person cannot be attached in execution.<sup>1</sup> The mangalsutra worn by a Hindu married woman cannot, according to Hindu religious usage, be parted with by her during the lifetime of her husband, and cannot therefore be attached in execution.<sup>2</sup> Cooking vessels include vessels required for cooking operations, such as a thali and a gagru.<sup>3</sup>

9. Tools of artisans, implements of husbandry, etc. — Clause (b). — An 'artisan' is a person engaged in a mechanical employment. Musicians and washermen are not 'artisans' and musical instruments are not 'tools of artisans.'<sup>1</sup> Similarly, the instruments of a surgeon or a doctor do not come within this clause.<sup>1a</sup> But a sewing machine is a 'tool of an artisan.'<sup>2</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>2a</sup> it was held that an artisan is not merely a person who is engaged in mechanical employment but a person who works in the production of some commodity, that whatever he uses for the production of the commodity may be considered as his tools, and that therefore the utensils used by a sweet-meat vendor for preparation of sweets are tools of an artisan. But a person will not be an "artisan" within the meaning of this Section unless he employs himself in a handicraft personally and depends for his living essentially on the proceeds derived from that handicraft.<sup>2b</sup>

Charaks, kadhais and planks of timber used by an agriculturist for pressing sugarcane grown on his field are implements of husbandry and are exempt from attachment.<sup>3</sup>

The Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court has held that the term "implements of husbandry" should be interpreted in a fair and reasonable spirit and not in a narrow sense and that the term will include an engine or a water-pump as being necessary for the agriculturist to irrigate his fields.<sup>3a</sup> But, the Nagpur High Court has taken the view that implements would mean such instruments as the agriculturist handles in the course of his agricultural work and as driving a motor tractor cannot be regarded as manual work, it cannot be regarded as an "implement of husbandry."<sup>3b</sup>

Such cattle and seed-grain as may, in the Court's opinion, be necessary to enable an agriculturist to make a living are not attachable.<sup>4</sup> Even the fodder required for the cattle is exempt from attachment.<sup>5</sup> The fact that the cattle have been plodged as security for a debt will not prevent the operation of this clause.<sup>6</sup>

But it is necessary that the Court should express its opinion that such cattle or seed-grain are necessary to enable the judgment-debtor to earn his livelihood, before the exemption can operate,<sup>7</sup> and if the necessity is disputed, the executing Court must

Section 60 Notes 9-10

10. Houses, etc., of agriculturists — Clause (c). — The object of proviso (c) to this Section is that an agriculturist should not be deprived of his means of livelihood by having his house and other buildings taken from him.<sup>1a</sup> 'Agriculturist' means a person who earns his livelihood wholly or principally by cultivating land either personally or through servants.<sup>1</sup> It is not necessary that he should own the lands he cultivates.<sup>2</sup> He may be a proprietor or a tenant<sup>3</sup> or even a person who without being either, earns his wages by cultivating the land of his employer.<sup>4</sup> The test is, in each case, what is the chief source of his livelihood.<sup>5</sup> If it is other than by cultivation of land he is not an agriculturist though he may also cultivate lands.<sup>6</sup> Thus, a large landed proprietor or zamindar is not an agriculturist even though his sole income is from land, unless his chief source of income is by cultivating lands either personally or through servants.<sup>7</sup> The onus lies on the person claiming the exemption to establish that his chief source of livelihood is by cultivation of land.<sup>8</sup> The Nagpur High Court has, in a recent decision,<sup>8a</sup> expressed the view that the question whether a person is an agriculturist or not is not a question turning on the source of the income or livelihood but on the nature of the employment or occupation and that the sole test for determining whether a person is an agriculturist or not is whether his occupation is that of a person cultivating the soil either personally or through servants whose activities he directs. The Allahabad High Court has also held in the undermentioned case<sup>8b</sup> that the term 'agriculturist' in clause (c) refers to an occupation. The Lahore High Court has, in a recent Full Bench decision,<sup>8c</sup> held that the true test is whether a man personally engages himself in tilling the soil and whether this occupation is essential to his maintenance.

A person who lets out his land to another for cultivation, reserving either money or produce as rent is not an agriculturist,<sup>9</sup> the reason being that in such a case neither his occupation nor the chief source of his livelihood will be the cultivation of land. A person, however, does not cease to be an agriculturist by the mere fact that he has obtained permission to build houses on a portion of the land which was formerly his occupancy tenancy,<sup>9a</sup> or because he has turned an Akali.<sup>10</sup> Nor does the fact that a person owns a vast extent of land which he cultivates himself or through servants make him any the less an agriculturist.<sup>10a</sup>

The house of an agriculturist is exempt both from attachment and sale. Hence, where a judgment-debtor is not an agriculturist at the date of the attachment of his house but by a change of circumstances becomes one subsequently and is an agriculturist at the time of the proceedings for the sale of the house, the house cannot be sold in execution.<sup>10b</sup>

Where a person is proved to be an agriculturist, the houses and other buildings belonging to and occupied by him are exempted from attachment.<sup>11</sup> The exemption from attachment under this clause depends upon the property being that of an agriculturist at the time when the decree-holder seeks to execute the decree against it. Thus, where the decree-holder seeks to attach a dwelling-house belonging to the deceased debtor in the hands of his legal representative, the legal representative can claim exemption if he occupies the same as an agriculturist.<sup>12</sup> But, the Lahore High Court has held that under this clause, the exemption attaches to the property itself and not to the person holding the property for the time being, so that where a decree is sought to be executed against a person as the legal representative of a deceased judgment-debtor who was an agriculturist and who was in occupation of the house, the legal representative would be entitled to the protection of this clause although he may himself not be an agriculturist.<sup>12a</sup> In a recent decision of the Lahore High Court, however, a view similar to that of the Allahabad High Court has been expressed.<sup>12aa</sup> Where an agriculturist mortgages his house with possession to another but is in occupation as a tenant under the mortgagee, there is a conflict of decisions as to whether such occupation comes within this clause. It has been held by the Oudh Chief Court that this clause will not apply to such cases, the reason given being that the clause contemplates occupation by an agriculturist as owner and not as tenant.<sup>12b</sup> A contrary view has been taken by the Lahore High Court.<sup>12c</sup> The words "occupied by" mean living in or using for agricultural purposes.<sup>13</sup> It is not necessary therefore that the house should be the dwelling-house of the agriculturist provided it is "occupied by" him as an agriculturist.<sup>14</sup> Thus, the town residence of an agriculturist is not exempt from attachment,<sup>15</sup> but it will be so exempt, if he takes his cattle there and spends his nights there, even though he has a house in the vicinity of his lands.<sup>16</sup>

But it is only the house or other building with its appurtenances that is exempted from attachment.<sup>17</sup> A vacant site is not exempted from attachment even though used by an agriculturist for storing manure and fodder.<sup>18</sup> A house or building occupied by an agriculturist will be exempt from attachment, even if the house is in a dilapidated condition unless the owner is proved to have no intention to rebuild.<sup>19</sup>

Section 60 Notes 10-11

As has been seen in Note 3 above that this Section does not apply to mortgage decrees. Where, therefore, the house of an agriculturist is specifically mortgaged by him, the house can be sold in execution of the mortgage decree,<sup>21</sup> unless it is appurtenant to an agricultural holding which is not transferable by law.<sup>22</sup>

The exemption in this clause being intended only for the benefit of the judgment-debtor, it can be waived by him.<sup>22a</sup> Thus, where a judgment-debtor agriculturist agrees to give his house as security for the amount of the decree<sup>23</sup> or agrees, in consideration of time being given to him, that his house may be sold in default of payment within the extended time, he cannot claim the exemption subsequently.<sup>24</sup> Similarly, where the judgment-debtor does not claim the exemption during the execution proceedings, he cannot raise it in a suit for possession by the purchaser.<sup>25</sup> But it is not necessary for him to raise his objections at the earliest possible stage in the execution proceedings.<sup>20</sup>

Under Section 266 of the old Code only the materials of a house occupied by an agriculturist were exempted from attachment.<sup>27</sup> But it was held that even a house could not be attached if it was occupied by an agriculturist as such.<sup>28</sup> The present Section has now been drafted in conformity with this view.

See the cases cited below<sup>29</sup> as to the effect of the amendment of this clause by the Punjab Relief of Indebtedness Act of 1934, Section 35.

Notes 11-13

12. Right to sue for damages — Clause (e). — It has been seen in Note 4 above that a mere right to sue is not 'property' at all and cannot be attached and sold in execution.<sup>1</sup> It follows that a mere right to sue for damages cannot be attached and sold<sup>2</sup> and if sold, the purchaser will not get any right or title thereby.<sup>3</sup> It has however been held by the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court that the words 'a mere right to sue for damages' are restricted to damages arising from bodily or mental suffering or injury to the person or reputation of the debtor and not to damages for breaches of contract.<sup>4</sup> The case was one under the Insolvency Act and the question was whether a right to sue for damages for breach of contract vested in the Official Receiver. It is submitted that the decision must be regarded as being applicable only to the facts of the particular case, and cannot be taken to lay down the correct law as to the interpretation of this clause.

A right to claim mesne profits for wrongful possession is a right to sue for damages and cannot be attached.<sup>5</sup> Where, however, a decree has been passed awarding damages, it can be attached.<sup>6</sup>

A right to get a reconveyance and possession of property which has been sold with an agreement of reconveyance is property and is attachable in execution.<sup>7</sup>

allowance payable from a Government treasury is in the nature of a pension and cannot be attached in execution of a money decree.<sup>7a</sup>

A pension granted by the Government by virtue of a treaty obligation contracted with another State<sup>8</sup> or for other reasons of State<sup>9</sup> is a political pension and is exempt from attachment under this Section.<sup>10</sup> Thus, a wasika allowance which is guaranteed by the British Government by the Treaty of the 17th August 1825 in consideration of the loan of 1825 by the then Ruler of Oudh, is a political pension.<sup>11</sup> Similarly, the pensions granted by the Government to the descendants of the families who at one time occupied the throne of Ceylon,<sup>12</sup> or to the members of the Mysore family,<sup>13</sup> or to the descendants of the Nawab of Carnatic,<sup>14</sup> or pensions granted by a foreign State by arrangement with the Government of India to a deposed Maharaja,<sup>15</sup> are all political pensions.

A jahgir may be a political pension,<sup>16</sup> but there is no initial presumption that it is so<sup>17</sup> and the Court should inquire, in each case, into the nature of the jahgir and see whether it is liable to attachment.<sup>18</sup> Where the jahgir is in the nature of a pension it will be exempt from attachment.<sup>19</sup>

Political pensions and other Government pensions are exempt from attachment so long as they are in the hands of the Government, notwithstanding the fact that the amounts have become due.<sup>20</sup> The character of the fund remains unchanged so long as it remains unpaid in the hands of the Government,<sup>21</sup> but once the money is received by the pensioner it becomes subject to all the incidents attached to his properties and can be attached like any other monies in his hands.<sup>22</sup>

Pensions not granted by Government are private pensions.<sup>23</sup> These are not exempted from attachment but they are attachable only as 'debts' or as 'property belonging to the judgment-debtor.<sup>24</sup> It follows therefore that they could be attached only to the extent of the sums that have become due.<sup>25</sup>

A gratuity or bonus allowed by the Government to its servants is exempt from attachment, whether granted to a non-pensioner or to a pensioner in addition to his pension.<sup>26</sup>

For Notifications issued under this clause, vide General Statutory Rules and Orders, Vol. IV, page 685. See also Gazette of India, 1909, Part I, page 5.

15. Wages of labourers, etc., and salaries of private employees — Clause (h).— This clause was substituted by Section 2 of Act IX of 1937 for the old clause (l). The old clause only applied to the wages of labourers and domestic servants and there was no provision for exempting the salary of a person in private employment. Hence, the salary of such a person was not exempt from attachment to any extent.<sup>1</sup> The present clause (h) confers such exemption in respect of the salaries of private employees also, to the extent indicated in the clause.<sup>2</sup> But, under Section 3 of Act IX of 1937, the provision as to salary cannot apply to proceedings arising out of suits instituted before 1st June 1937.<sup>3</sup> O. 21 R. 48 does not apply to the salary of a private servant. Hence, it was held before the amendment of the Section by Act IX of 1937 that such salary could be attached only as a debt after it had fallen due.<sup>3a</sup> Explanation I now makes it clear that the attachable portion of it can be attached only after it has become payable. For meaning of "salary," see Note 22b.

A person is a 'labourer' within the meaning of this clause who earns his daily bread by personal manual labour, or in occupations which require little or no art, skill or previous education. A person who spins cotton and receives wages according to the quantity spun is a 'labourer.' Similarly, coolies employed on railways or other works and paid by the number of baskets of earth carried are 'labourers.'<sup>4</sup>

16. Salary of public officers, etc. — Clause (i).— This clause has been substituted for the old clause (i) by Act IX of 1937. See Note 2 ante. But the new clause has no application if the proceeding for attachment had arisen out of a suit instituted before 1st June 1937 (See Section 3 of Act IX of 1937).<sup>1a</sup> Under the Code of 1859 there was no exemption to any extent in regard to the salaries of public servants and the whole of such salary was attachable as a debt when the salary had fallen due.<sup>1</sup> The later Codes provided for a partial exemption of such salary but the unexempted portion could be attached.<sup>2</sup> A special procedure was also provided for the attachment of salaries in such cases, so that they need not be attached as debts after they had fallen due but could be attached in advance.<sup>2a</sup> (See O. 21 R. 48.) (See also Explanation I.) The object of the provision for exemption is to enable public officers, etc., to maintain themselves and their families in a suitable manner. That the debtor is a European and that the pay is not large enough to maintain his family is, however, no ground for refusing attachment of the attachable portion of his salary.<sup>3</sup>

Clause (h) now extends the exemption from attachment to salaries of private servants also. (See Note 15.) As the provisions of O. 21 R. 48 do not apply to the salary of a private servant, it was held before the amendment of the Section by Act IX of 1937 that such salary was attachable only as a debt and therefore must have fallen due at the time of attachment.<sup>4</sup> Explanation I now makes it clear that the attachable portion of such salary is attachable only after it has become payable.

For definition of "public officer," see Section 2, clause 17 ante. An advocate engaged by the Government on daily fees for the conduct of civil litigation on its behalf is a "public officer" within the meaning of the clause.<sup>5</sup>

16a. Salary of private servant. — See Notes 15 and 16, above.

17. Salary of army officers. — Section 4 of the Code provides that the provisions of the Code shall not affect any special or local law for the time being in force. Section 60 will not therefore apply where there is a special or local law to the contrary. Two of such enactments are —

1. The Indian Army Act (VIII of 1911), Section 120, and
2. The Army Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. Ch. 58) as amended by the Army (Annual) Act of 1895 (58 Vict. Ch. 7), Sections 136, 144 and 145.

The Indian Army Act, 1911, applies only to Indian officers and other persons specified in Section 2 of that Act, and it is provided in Section 120 of the Act that the pay or allowances of any person subject to the Act cannot be attached.<sup>1</sup>

The Army Act, 1881, applies to British Officers in His Majesty's Regular Forces including the Indian Army, and to other persons specified therein. An 'Officer' means, under that Act, a Commissioned Officer.<sup>2</sup> Thus, a first class Warrant Officer<sup>3</sup> or other Non-Commissioned Officer<sup>4</sup> is only a 'soldier' for the purposes of that Act. Section 136 of the Act provides that the pay of an officer of His Majesty's Regular Forces serving in India should be paid without any deduction 'other than deductions authorised . . . by any law passed by the Governor-General of India in Council.' Section 60 of the Code being such a law passed by the Governor-General in Council, it was held by the

High Courts of Madras<sup>5</sup> and Calcutta<sup>6</sup> and by the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh<sup>7a</sup> that the pay of such officer could be attached as being that of a 'public officer' within the definition of Section 2 (17) of the Code. It was also held that sub-section 2 (b) of Section 60, as it originally was, could not be taken to negative the application of Section 60 to cases coming under Section 136 of the Army Act, 1881, inasmuch as the latter Section is not in conflict with Section 60.<sup>7</sup>

The High Courts of Allahabad<sup>8</sup> and Bombay,<sup>9</sup> on the other hand, held, that clause (2) (b) clearly negated the applicability of Section 60 to such cases and that, therefore, the pay of such officers could not be attached.

By Act X of 1914, clause (2) (b) of Section 60 was repealed with the result that Section 60 clearly becomes applicable to cases under Section 136, and the salary of a British Officer in an Indian Regiment can be attached in execution as provided by this clause.<sup>10</sup>

But Section 60 cannot prevail over other special provisions in the Army Act such as Sections 144 and 145 relating to 'soldiers' and providing that their pay shall not be attached in execution.<sup>11</sup> The reason is that there is no saving in those Sections, such as is found in Section 136, as to any law passed by the Governor-General in Council. By virtue of Section 4 of the Code, therefore, Section 60 cannot prevail over those special provisions.<sup>12</sup>

18. Pay of persons to whom the Indian Army Act, 1911, etc., apply —

Clause (j). — Clause (j) originally ran as follows: "the pay and allowances of persons to whom the Indian Articles of War apply." This clause was amended into its present form by the Amending Act XXXV of 1934, S. 2 and Schedule and the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937. (See foot-notes to Section.) The Indian Articles of War which applied to soldiers and followers of the Native Army<sup>1</sup> have been repealed by the Indian Army Act (VIII of 1911), and the reference to the Indian Articles of War in this clause as it originally existed must be read as referring to the Indian Army Act (VIII of 1911).<sup>2</sup> As has been seen in Note 17 above, the pay of persons subject to that Act is not, in view of Section 120 of that Act, attachable in execution.

A compulsory deposit in any Government or railway provident fund is, under Section 3 of the Act, not liable to attachment under any decree or order of any Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court in respect of any debt or liability incurred by the subscriber or depositor.<sup>2</sup> This is so even if the subscriber or depositor may have ceased to be in service,<sup>3</sup> and so long as the fund remains in the hands of authorities managing the fund.<sup>4</sup> But where once the amount is paid out to the person entitled to it, the exemption ceases and it can be attached in execution.<sup>5</sup> Provident fund money sent by money-order to the judgment-debtor is attachable even when it is in the hands of the post office, as the post office in such a case is the agent of the judgment-debtor.<sup>6</sup> authority while absent from duty" were exempt from attachment so that, in the above illustration, the whole of the Rs. 150 would be exempt from attachment. By Section 2 of Act IX of 1937 the above clause (h) has been replaced by the present clause (l).

A creditor seeking to attach a provident fund amount due to his judgment-debtor must show that the provident fund rules allow such attachment.<sup>7</sup>

21. Mere expectancy or other contingent or possible right — Clause (m).

— This clause declares that —

- (1) an expectancy of succession by survivorship, or (2) other merely contingent or possible right or interest, cannot be attached in execution.<sup>1a</sup>

The right of a Hindu reversioner to succeed to the properties inherited by a Hindu widow or other Hindu woman is a mere hope or expectancy of succession and cannot be attached.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, the right of a son to succeed to his father's specific share of property by survivorship,<sup>2</sup> or the chance of Mahomedan heir-apparent to succeed to the property of the owner,<sup>3</sup> cannot be the subject of a sale or attachment. The interest in the pre-empted property of a successful pre-emptor who has not paid the pre-emptive price fixed by his decree is only a contingent right and cannot be attached under this clause.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, the right of a Mulgeni tenant in South Canara to compensation for improvements is a contingent and inchoate right which becomes perfected only at the time of eviction.<sup>5</sup>

A vested remainder is not a mere expectancy though liable to be displaced later on.<sup>6</sup> Thus, where A gives certain property to B for life for her maintenance, the reversion after the life estate is a vested estate in A which can be attached and sold in execution of a decree against A.<sup>7</sup>

In the undermentioned case<sup>8</sup> it was held by the Madras High Court that where a Hindu widow alienates her husband's property without legal necessity, the alienee gets an interest in the property which will last during the lifetime of the widow but that as the widow fully represents the husband's estate, the reversionary interest.

continues to be vested in the widow and can be attached in execution of a decree for a debt due by the husband.

Section 60
Notes 21-22

A vested interest does not cease to be so merely because the person in whom it is vested will be entitled to receive the property at a future date<sup>9</sup> or because the property is the subject of an existing suit.<sup>10</sup>

A resulting trust is not a mere expectancy or contingency.<sup>11</sup> Where in execution of a mortgage decree the sale proceeds are deposited in Court pending confirmation of sale, to which the judgment-debtor does not object, the right to the surplus amount of the sale proceeds which is payable to the judgment-debtor after the confirmation of the sale is not a contingent interest as contemplated by this clause.<sup>12</sup>

in its enjoyment to the grantee personally in which case it will not be a saleable property attachable under this Section.<sup>4a</sup> In the case cited below,<sup>4b</sup> it was held by the Madras High Court that this clause only applies to cases where the right to maintenance is based on the personal law or the personal relationship of the parties and not where such right is purely the result of a contractual arrangement between the parties. Hence, it was held that where a person grants a usufructuary mortgage of all his properties to another and under one of the terms of the mortgage is entitled to receive a certain periodical payment for his maintenance, his right to such payment is not exempt from attachment under this clause.

The mere fact that the person entitled to maintenance is placed in a position to enforce his right by recourse to a particular fund or interest in land in the event of default of payment by the grantor, or that the maintenance is payable out of a particular estate, will not constitute the right an interest in the property, so as to take it out of the application of this clause.<sup>5</sup> An annuity charged upon an estate is property which can be attached under this Section.<sup>6</sup>

This clause prevents the attachment of a judgment-debtor's right to future maintenance. It does not prevent the attachment of arrears of maintenance which have fallen due.<sup>7</sup> It was, however, held by the Calcutta High Court in the case cited below<sup>8</sup> that arrears of maintenance under an order of a Criminal Court under Section 488 of the Criminal Procedure Code were not attachable, the reason given being that the right to such arrears was a purely personal one and not assignable by the judgment-debtor.

It was held in the undermentioned case<sup>9</sup> that the right of the judgment-debtor to reside in a particular house was exempt from attachment under this clause, but where the house was not in the actual occupation of the judgment-debtor but only had been let out by him, a receiver could be appointed to realise the rents and apply them in discharge of the decree.

There is no provision in the Section exempting from attachment land belonging to the judgment-debtor and required for his maintenance and that of his family.<sup>10</sup>

22a. Moveable property exempt from sale for arrear of land revenue — Section 60 Clause (p). — This clause exempts from attachment any moveable property which is exempt from sale for arrears of land revenue. The clause has no application to immovable property.<sup>1</sup>

22b. Explanation II — Salary, meaning of. — Explanation II has been newly added by Section 2 of the Amending Act IX of 1937, and has no retrospective effect by virtue of Section 3 of the said Amending Act.

In a case to which the provisions of the Amending Act did not apply, it was held that the daily remuneration of a counsel charged by the Government to conduct civil litigation on its behalf, was "salary" of a public servant.<sup>1</sup> This will no longer be so in view of the Explanation under which salary means the total monthly emoluments derived by a person from his employment. Profits accruing to a ghatwal from his estate are not "salary."<sup>2</sup>

The word "salary" in clause (h) does not exclusively mean "salary of a labourer or domestic servant" but includes salary of a person who is neither a labourer nor a domestic servant in the strict sense.<sup>3</sup>

23. Objections to attachment. — A decree-holder is not precluded from taking any of his judgment-debtor's properties in execution of his decree merely because he has a lien on particular properties<sup>1</sup> or because the judgment-debtor denies that he has any interest in the properties.<sup>2</sup> But if he effects a wrong attachment, he will be liable in damages resulting therefrom though he may have acted in good faith.<sup>3</sup>

It is for the person claiming exemption from attachment to prove the circumstances entitling him to do so.<sup>4</sup> And he must raise his objections at the proper time, otherwise he will be precluded from raising them later on. Thus, where a property has been attached and sold in execution, a person who was a party to the order for sale or was aware of it, cannot object to the attachment after the sale.<sup>5</sup> But if he was not such a party or was not aware of the proceedings, he can object to the attachment even after

1. Legislative changes. — Under Section 271 of the old Code the outer door could not be broken open under any circumstances.<sup>1</sup> The words "unless such dwelling-house is in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor and he refuses, or in any way prevents access thereto" have been added. See Notes 7 and 8 to Section 55 ante.

2. Scope of the Section. — Section 55 deals with how an arrest of the judgment-debtor is to be effected. This Section deals with how moveable property is to be seized in execution. Provisos 1, 2 and 3 of Section 55 correspond to sub-sections (1), (2) and (3) of this Section.

There is no prohibition, such as is applicable to the breaking open of an outer door, to the breaking open of a door of a room inside the house, when once the person executing the process has gained access into the house.<sup>1</sup> Nor will a seizure of moveables be invalidated by the fact that the bailiff entered the house, which had been closed, after the same had been opened by a certain person who gained entrance into it by getting over the roof.<sup>2</sup>

Where a room inside a house is in the occupancy of a pardanashin lady, the person executing the process should give notice as required by sub-section 3 of this Section before entering the room for the purpose of seizing property.<sup>3</sup> But there is no limitation that the particular room in question must be in the occupancy of the judgment-debtor. It is sufficient that the decree-holder or the person making the attachment should consider that there may be property of the judgment-debtor in that room.<sup>4</sup>

3. "Dwelling-house." — A shop or a godown is not a 'dwelling-house' within the meaning of this Section.<sup>1</sup> Similarly a store-house or barn standing at a distance from a dwelling-house and forming parcel of it is not a 'dwelling-house'.<sup>2</sup>

4. Damages for wrongful seizure. — A bailiff who breaks open the doors of a house belonging to a third person in execution of a decree against the judgment-debtor is a trespasser, if it turns out that the person or goods of the debtor are not in the house.<sup>1</sup> The attaching creditor is also responsible for any results which can be traced to an unlawful attachment carried out on application made by him<sup>2</sup> and will be liable in damages to the person injured thereby, though he may have acted bona fide, without malice and under mistake.<sup>3</sup>

5. Limitation for suits for damages for wrongful seizure. — A suit for damages for wrongful seizure of moveable property is governed by Article 29 of the Limitation Act. The conditions necessary for the applicability of the Article are (1) a wrong seizure of moveable property, and (2) loss to the plaintiff in consequence.<sup>1</sup>

Where, therefore, there is no wrongful seizure, the Article will not apply.<sup>2</sup>

The starting point of the period of limitation under the Article is the date of seizure.<sup>3</sup>

1. Legislative changes. — The following are the changes introduced in the Section:—

1. The words "has been attached" in Section 284 of the Code of 1882 have been replaced by the words "is under attachment" in the present Section (vide Note 4).
2. Sub-section (2) is new (see Note 9).

2. Scope, object and applicability of the Section. — This Section deals with the procedure to be adopted where the same property is under attachment in execution of decrees of more Courts than one.<sup>1a</sup> The object of the Section is to prevent confusion in the execution of decrees<sup>1</sup> and to avoid conflicting claims which might arise out of the attachment and sale of the same property by different Courts.<sup>2</sup> This Section deals merely with procedure and does not affect the substantive rights of the decree-holders inter se,<sup>3</sup> nor does it affect the jurisdiction of Courts.<sup>4</sup> There was a conflict of views under the old Code on this point for which see Note 9 below.

The words "property not in the custody of any Court" include immovable property.<sup>5</sup>

Notes 3-7.

3. "Of more Courts than one." — It has been held that the Courts contemplated in the Section are Courts which are capable of being compared as Courts of different grades or of the same grade. They must therefore be all Civil Courts or all Revenue Courts. A Civil Court cannot be compared with the Revenue Court and the Section will not apply to attachments made by a Civil and also by a Revenue Court.<sup>1</sup>

It has been held by the Madras High Court that the expression "of more Courts than one" qualifies the word "attachment" and not the word "decrees" so that the Section applies also to a case where the property has been attached by different Courts though the decrees have been passed by the same Court.<sup>1a</sup>

This Section applies to Small Cause Courts also.<sup>2</sup>

4. "Is under attachment," meaning of. — It was held under the old Code that the attachments of two or more Courts must be subsisting or existing at the same time.<sup>1</sup> This has been made clear by the substitution of the words "is under attachment" for the words "has been attached" occurring in the old Section.

It has been held that where immovable property which is under attachment is sold for arrears of land revenue, the attachment does not cease but fastens itself to the balance of the sale proceeds that remains after paying the revenue.<sup>2</sup>

The Section requires an attachment in execution. But where a property has been attached before judgment, such attachment will become one in execution on an application for execution being made by the decree-holder.<sup>2a</sup>

It has been held by the Nagpur High Court that the words "where property . . . . is under attachment" do not mean that the only 'claim' which can be determined under the Section is one relating to the attachment or put forward by a person who has attached the property.<sup>3</sup> In that case, it was held that the Court of the highest grade under this Section has the power to allow without recourse to the provisions of Section 73, rateable distribution of the judgment-debtor's assets and that in exercise of this power, such Court could grant a rateable share of assets even to a decree-holder who has not attached the property from which the assets have been derived. (See Note 8 to Section 73.)

5. "Shall receive and realise," meaning of. — These words will include the sale of the attached property.<sup>1</sup>

6. "Claim thereto and any objection to the attachment thereof," meaning of. — The above words mean claims and objections which can be summarily decided in execution proceedings.<sup>1</sup> As to whether a claim for rateable distribution comes within the meaning of the above expression, see Section 73 Note 8.

7. Rateable distribution. — See Notes 6 and 10 and also Section 73.

8. "Court of highest grade." — The grade of any Court depends upon the pecuniary or other limitations of jurisdiction of the particular Court.<sup>1</sup> A District Court is of a higher grade than a Subordinate Judge's Court<sup>2</sup> and the latter Court is of a higher grade than that of the District Munsif.<sup>3</sup> The Small Cause Court is inferior in grade to the Subordinate Judge's Court<sup>4</sup> and may be inferior also to the Court of the District Munsif.<sup>5</sup>

See also Sections 3 and 15 supra.

9. Effect of non-compliance with sub-section (1) — Sub-section (2). — Under the old Code there was a conflict of opinion as to the effect of sale by an inferior Court in contravention of the Section. The High Court of Allahabad held that the sale was a nullity as being without jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup> The Bombay and Madras High Courts and the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court held that the sale was not without jurisdiction and would be upheld if the purchaser brought it about bona fide without notice of the attachment by the higher Court.<sup>2</sup> The Calcutta High Court also held that the sale was not without jurisdiction but in order to uphold the sale it was necessary to show that not only the purchaser but the Court also should have acted without knowledge of the attachment by the higher Court.<sup>3</sup> The addition of sub-clause (2) to the Section now sets the conflict at rest<sup>3a</sup> and a sale in contravention of the Section will now be protected independent of any question of notice either to the Court or to the purchaser.<sup>4</sup> But the Patna High Court has held that even under the present Code, the sale would be invalid if it was held with notice of the prior attachment by a superior Court.<sup>4a</sup>

Section 63 Notes 9-10

Where, after the sale by the inferior Court in contravention of the Section, the property is sought to be sold by the superior Court, then, according to the Madras High Court, the purchaser as a representative of the judgment-debtor may apply to the superior Court under Section 47 to stop the sale.<sup>5</sup> According to the Calcutta High Court, the purchaser is not a representative of the judgment-debtor and cannot apply under Section 47.<sup>6</sup>

It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>7</sup> that even if a sale is liable to be set aside for irregularities under Section 63, it cannot be impeached in collateral proceedings, or by persons who are not parties to the proceedings.

Suppose in a sale held by a Court of an inferior grade, the Court has allowed the decree-holder to purchase the property and to set off the decree amount against the purchase-money. In such a case, is the effect of sub-section 2 not only to validate the sale but also to exempt the amount so allowed to be set off, from the claims of other decree-holders for rateable distribution? On this question, there is a conflict of decisions. It has been held by the Calcutta High Court<sup>8</sup> and in an earlier decision by the Bombay High Court<sup>8a</sup> that the order allowing set-off of the decretal amount must also be considered to be validated by the sub-section so as to exempt the amount so allowed to be set off from the claims of other decree-holders for rateable distribution and that the Court of the superior grade can only call for the balance, if any, out of the sale proceeds remaining after such set-off is allowed, for the purpose of rateable distribution among the other decree-holders. But, the Bombay High Court in a later decision<sup>8b</sup> and the Madras High Court<sup>8c</sup> have taken a different view and held that in such cases, the effect of the sub-section is only to validate the sale held by the Court of the inferior grade and not to exempt the amount allowed to be set off from the claims of other decree-holders for rateable distribution.

Where an inferior Court sells the property and pays out the sale proceeds to the decree-holder in ignorance of an attachment in a pending execution proceeding of a superior Court, the superior Court has no jurisdiction to order restitution and rectify the error.<sup>9</sup>

10. Procedure when inferior Court sells property. — Where the inferior Court has sold the property, the superior Court should not re-sell it but should adopt the sale held by the inferior Court and after getting the sale proceeds transferred to itself, should distribute them rateably among the decree-holders.<sup>1</sup> As to the procedure to be adopted in getting such sale proceeds transferred to the superior Court, there is a difference of opinion. The Bombay<sup>2</sup> and Madras<sup>3</sup> High Courts have held that the

1. Legislative changes. — The following are the changes introduced by this Section :—

1. The words "by actual seizure or by written order duly intimated and made known in the manner aforesaid" occurring in the old Section (276) have been omitted. See Note 3.
2. For the words "any private alienation of property attached whether by sale, gift, mortgage or otherwise" in the old Section, the following words, viz., "any private transfer or delivery of the property attached, or of any interest therein" have been substituted. See Note 10.
3. The words "during the continuance of the attachment" occurring in the old Section have been substituted by the words "contrary to such attachment." See Note 11.
4. The Explanation to the present Section is new. See Note 13.

2. Scope and object of the Section. — This Section enacts that a private alienation of property after attachment is void as against claims enforceable under the attachment.<sup>1</sup> The object of the Section is to prevent fraud on decree-holders and to secure intact the rights of attaching creditors and of those creditors who have obtained decrees and are entitled to satisfaction out of the assets of the judgment-debtor.<sup>2</sup> It is immaterial for the application of the Section whether the decree had or had not been passed before the time when the transfer was effected<sup>3</sup> or whether the transferee acted in good faith or not.<sup>4</sup>

The effect of the Section is, however, not to invalidate such private alienations for all purposes but only as against claims enforceable under the attachment.<sup>5</sup> The benefit of the Section can also be waived by the decree-holder so as to bind himself and his assignees with notice.<sup>6</sup>

As the Section operates as a distinct interference with the rights of alienation of property, its provisions should be strictly construed,<sup>7</sup> and cannot be extended to cases not contemplated by the Section.<sup>8</sup> Thus, a transfer by a successful claimant after the date of the claim order but before institution of a suit under O. 21 R. 63 is not prevented by the Section which only prohibits a transfer by the judgment-debtor.<sup>9</sup>

The provisions of the Section relate to execution and a suit by the attaching creditor to avoid an alienation made during attachment is not maintainable.<sup>10</sup> The Section must be read with O. 21 R. 83 which provides for the private transfers of attached property with the Court's permission in certain circumstances. (See O. 21 R. 83, Note 6.)

3. "Where an attachment has been made." — The words "where an attachment has been made" show that the Section has no application to transfers made before the attachment is levied.<sup>1</sup> Such a transfer, if real, would be valid even though it may have been in the contemplation of the parties that future attempts to attach the property should be defeated.<sup>1a</sup>

Before property could be subjected to the restriction imposed by the Section, there must be a perfected attachment.<sup>2</sup> The modes of attachment of various kinds of property are prescribed in Order 21 and an attachment takes effect not from the date of the Court's order but only from the date of its actual promulgation in the manner prescribed. In Muthia Chetti v. Palaniappa Chetti,<sup>3</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"No property can be declared to be attached unless first, the order of attachment has been issued and secondly, in execution of that order the other things prescribed by the rules in the Code have been done."

It follows that where a transfer is made after an order of attachment but before it was actually effected,<sup>4</sup> or where the mode prescribed is not complied with,<sup>5</sup> or where there is a material misdescription or other defect in the attachment,<sup>6</sup> or where the order of attachment is ultra vires or obtained collusively,<sup>7</sup> the Section does not apply. Whether property is or is not, at a given moment, under attachment is a question of fact, capable of absolute demonstration.<sup>8</sup>

The presumption under Section 114 of the Indian Evidence Act, in favour of the regularity of judicial acts, does not apply to proceedings that follow such judicial acts.<sup>9</sup> In the absence of proof that an attachment, good in law, was ordered and was effected in due manner and without any defect, prior to alienation, the alienation will be upheld.<sup>10</sup> The onus of proving that an alienation is void owing to a prior valid attachment of the property is on the person challenging the alienation and it is for him to prove that the requirements of law as regards a valid attachment were fulfilled.<sup>10a</sup>

crops which have been attached, will be liable in damages to the person at whose instance the crops were attached.<sup>2</sup>

An attachment does not prevent an alienation by operation of law.<sup>3</sup> See Note 10 below.

A judicial sale of property in pursuance of an attachment carries with it any enlargement thereof that accrues after the attachment and before the sale.<sup>4</sup> But an attachment cannot be enforced against property received in lieu of the property originally attached, in a subsequent partition.<sup>5</sup>

As to the distinction between attachment under the Code and a vesting order in insolvency, see the undermentioned case.<sup>6</sup>

See also O. 21 R. 54 Note 11 and O. 21 R. 63 Note 24.

6. Effect of removal of attachment. — A transfer by the judgment-debtor after an attachment has been removed or withdrawn is valid and a subsequent attachment cannot be made so as to relate back to the date of the first attachment and operate against a transfer in the interval, even though the removal or withdrawal of the first attachment was under a misapprehension.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, a private transfer pending an attachment which has subsequently ceased will be valid.<sup>2</sup> Even an implied withdrawal as, for example, where an order of withdrawal is not formally passed but the attachment is understood by the decree-holder to have been withdrawn, bars any objection against the validity of an alienation of the attached property.<sup>3</sup>

As to the revival of attachment, see Note 9 below.

7. Abandonment or discontinuance of attachment. — See also O. 21 R. 57. An attachment may cease for various reasons. Thus it may cease —

1. by an express order withdrawing or putting an end to the attachment;<sup>1</sup>
'there cannot, however, be a partial withdrawal by consent,<sup>2</sup>
2. by the decree being discharged by payment out of Court<sup>3</sup> or by sale of the attached property in execution of the decree,<sup>4</sup>

3. by the decree being set aside,<sup>5</sup>
4. in cases of attachment before judgment, by the suit being dismissed,<sup>6</sup> or
5. by abandonment of the attachment by the decree-holder.<sup>7</sup>

Whether an attachment has been abandoned is a question of fact depending upon the circumstances of each case. Thus, where the decree-holder took no steps to enforce his rights for a very long time after the attachment was made, and the application for execution was consequently 'struck off,' it was held by the Privy Council that the attachment must be presumed to have been abandoned.<sup>8</sup> In Chamiappa Tharagan v. Rama Ayyar,<sup>9</sup> where the application for execution was 'struck off' after some time after the attachment was made and the decree-holder did nothing further for nearly twelve years, except keeping alive the decree by periodical applications for execution, Wallis, C. J., held, applying the Privy Council case above referred to, that the attachment must be taken to have been abandoned. Seshagiri Ayyar, J., dissented from this view and held, distinguishing the Privy Council case, that the periodical applications by the decree-holder negatived the idea of abandonment. Mere lapse of time after the attachment will not, however, be sufficient to prove abandonment<sup>10</sup> especially if the delay was caused by the decree-holder's willingness to grant his debtor indulgence and opportunity to repay the debt.<sup>11</sup>

The mere fact that the decree-holder applies for fresh attachment does not necessarily imply an abandonment of the attachment already made,<sup>12</sup> though it may, under particular circumstances, give rise to a presumption as to abandonment.<sup>13</sup> See also O. 21 R. 54 Note 11 and O. 38 R. 11 Note 3.

An attachment does not abate on the death of the judgment-debtor.<sup>14</sup>

8. Effect of striking off or dismissal of execution proceedings. — An order 'striking off' execution proceedings does not necessarily operate as a dismissal or a final disposal of the execution petition.<sup>1</sup> It is competent to the Court to strike off execution proceedings and to continue the attachment.<sup>2</sup>

('12) 15 Ind Cas 677 (678) (All). (But attachment cannot be deemed to be withdrawn when decree is satisfied in part only.)

Notes 8-9

The striking of an execution proceeding off the file is an act which may admit of different interpretations according to the circumstances under which it is done and there is no general rule as to its effect on an attachment made already.<sup>3</sup> It must depend upon the circumstances of each case.<sup>3a</sup> But certain broad principles have been recognised. If the striking off takes place under circumstances which terminate the case,<sup>4</sup> or which render a fresh attachment necessary,<sup>5</sup> the attachment ceases. Where such circumstances do not exist, the proceedings in execution are merely suspended and the attachment continues.<sup>6</sup>

It was held under the old Code that the dismissal of an execution application did not necessarily put an end to the attachment made already but that it is dependent on the circumstances of each case.<sup>7</sup> Under the present Code, O. 21 R. 57, an attachment shall cease where the application for execution is dismissed for default of the decree-holder.<sup>8</sup> Where it is dismissed in any other way, it is not the necessary consequence that the attachment ceases.<sup>9</sup>

9. Revival of attachment. — It has already been seen in Note 6 above that if an attachment comes to an end, interests created thereafter are not affected by a second attachment. But an attachment cannot be said to have come to an end, so long as the order releasing the attachment is liable to be set aside by way of appeal or otherwise.<sup>1</sup> It can only be said to be temporarily discontinued or suspended.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where an attachment is wrongly released and the order of release is set aside in appeal, the attachment will be deemed to have continued and an alienation made between the date of the order of release and the date of the order in appeal, will be void against all claims enforceable under the attachment.<sup>3</sup> See also Note 4 to O. 21 R. 55, infra. Similarly, where a claim is allowed and the property is released from attachment, such release is only provisional and subject to the result of the suit under O. 21 R. 63. Where therefore the order in the claim petition is set aside in the suit, the attachment is revived so as to affect the alienations made in the interval.<sup>4</sup>

In the case of an attachment before judgment the attachment comes to an end upon the dismissal of the suit and is not revived upon the reversal of the judgment in appeal.<sup>5</sup> The reason is that O. 38 R. 9 contains no provision corresponding to O. 21 R. 63 which makes the order in the claim case and the release from attachment thereupon subject to a regular suit.<sup>6</sup> See also Note 1 to O. 38 R. 9 infra.

10. "Private transfer or delivery of the property attached or of any interest therein." — The word 'transfer' is used in the most generic sense and includes all species of contract which pass real rights in property from one person to another.<sup>1</sup> But it is not confined to transfers by contract. A transfer purporting to be made by a deed of appointment is a 'transfer'.<sup>2</sup>

The transfer contemplated by the Section is a transfer between living persons and therefore does not include a devise by will.<sup>3</sup> A 'private transfer' means a voluntary transfer such as a sale, mortgage, lease or gift and not a transfer by operation of law, such as an involuntary sale under a decree of a Court<sup>4</sup> or the enforced execution of a conveyance or assignment in obedience to the order of the Court.<sup>5</sup> Thus, a transfer effected by an award which has been given effect to by a decree,<sup>6</sup> or a conveyance executed in obedience to a decree for specific performance of a contract of sale,<sup>7</sup> is not a 'private transfer' within the meaning of this Section. But it has been held that where a transfer is embodied in a decree but the decree is entirely based on an agreement between the parties, the transfer is a 'private' transfer.<sup>7a</sup> A vesting order in insolvency is a transfer by operation of law and is not within the mischief of this Section.<sup>8</sup> But where the adjudication order is made by a foreign Insolvency Court, it cannot have the effect of prevailing over a prior attachment effected by the order of a British Indian Court.<sup>8a</sup>

The prohibition under the Section extends to all private transfers and delivery of property by which the attachment is defeated by the property or interest therein being put out of the reach of the attaching creditor.<sup>9</sup> But an act which is consistent with the proper management of the property is not barred by the Section.<sup>10</sup> A consent given by heirs of a Mahomedan after his death, to a bequest made by him, does not amount to an alienation of property.<sup>11</sup>

The operation of the right of survivorship among members of a Hindu joint family is not a private transfer; but it has been held independently of this Section that when a judgment-debtor dies after an attachment in execution is effected on his undivided share, the right of survivorship of his co-parceners does not prevail over the rights enforceable under the attachment.<sup>12</sup> Where, however, the judgment-debtor dies after an attachment before judgment but before it is converted into an attachment in execution, the right of survivorship would prevail over the attachment.<sup>13</sup> The reason is that when the right by survivorship accrued, there was not in existence any competing right or title at all.

An assignment of a decree under attachment is a "transfer of a property" within the meaning of this Section.<sup>14</sup> Where the karta of a Hindu joint family business is adjudicated an insolvent, the power of such karta to dispose of joint family property for discharging business obligations vests in the Official Receiver. But such power in the hands of the Official Receiver will be subject to the same qualifications as it was in the hands of the karta. Hence, where the joint family property is under attachment, at the time of the adjudication, the Official Receiver's powers of disposal over such property are not unrestricted but subject to the clog created upon it by the attachment.<sup>15</sup>

11. Contrary to such attachment. — These words have been substituted for the expression 'during the continuance of the attachment' which occurred in the old Section. This latter expression was too wide and was capable of being construed as rendering any alienation during the attachment void, whether prejudicial to the claims enforceable under the attachment or not. The Privy Council in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> under the old Code, negatived such a construction and held that the object of Section 276 (corresponding to present Section 64) was only to prohibit alienations 'contrary to the attachment.' The substitution of the said words brings out this idea clearly and specifically. The words 'contrary to the attachment' mean that the transfer must be prejudicial to the interests of the attaching creditor or the auction-purchaser,<sup>1a</sup> and an alienation which does not in any way prejudice the rights of the attaching creditor or the auction-purchaser is not affected by the Section.<sup>1b</sup>

Where a mortgage is executed pending attachment in renewal of<sup>2</sup> or for the purpose of discharging<sup>3</sup> prior mortgages, the transfer is not really contrary to the attachment as the attaching creditor is not in any way prejudiced thereby. But if the amount secured under the new mortgage is in excess of the amount secured under the prior one at the time of the attachment, the security to the extent of the additional amount is void against the claims enforceable under the attachment.<sup>4</sup> A sale pending attachment for the purpose of discharging a prior mortgage debt will be one 'contrary to attachment,' but if the vendee has paid off the prior mortgagee, he is entitled to stand in the shoes of that mortgagee in respect of the amount so paid off.<sup>5</sup>

An attachment of a decree is made under the provisions of O. 21 R. 53. Under that Rule the holder of the attached decree is not prohibited from transferring the decree attached and therefore an assignment of the decree will be valid and will entitle the transferee to have his name substituted in place of the assignor and to apply for execution under O. 21 R. 16.<sup>6</sup> But his right to execute the decree is only a permissive right and is subject to the rights of the attaching decree-holder to be paid out first from out of the monies recovered in execution. See O. 21 R. 53.<sup>7</sup>

The attachment referred to in the Section is the particular attachment under which a claim is being made<sup>8</sup> and when an alienation is not contrary to such attachment the Section has no application.<sup>9</sup> Consequently, an alienation, resulting in the satisfaction of the decree in execution of which the attachment is made, is not 'contrary to such attachment' within the meaning of the Section,<sup>10</sup> whereas an alienation pending one attachment, in order to pay off another attaching creditor, is invalid as against the former.<sup>11</sup>

Any payment to the judgment-debtor of an attached debt contrary to the attachment will be void under this Section as against all claims enforceable under the attachment and the mere fact that the debtor does not pay money into the hands of the judgment-debtor but to somebody else will not make it any the less a payment contrary to the attachment, if the payment is voluntarily made at the instance of or for the benefit of the judgment-debtor.<sup>12</sup>

from the decree-holder,<sup>4</sup> a claimant for the rateable distribution of assets<sup>5</sup> and an auction-purchaser at the sale held in pursuance of the attachment,<sup>6</sup> are all persons whose claims are enforceable under the attachment and who can object to the private transfer pending attachment.

The attachment referred to in the Section is the attachment in respect of which the property was sold and it is that attachment alone which can be employed for the purpose of impugning a private alienation.<sup>7</sup> Thus, where property attached in execution is alienated, but such attachment ceases by a dismissal of the application for execution under O. 21 R. 57 and the property is again brought to sale in pursuance of a second attachment, the alienation pending the first attachment is not void against the auction-purchaser in the sale held under the second attachment.<sup>8</sup>

If an attachment is not properly perfected, no claim can be enforced thereunder.<sup>9</sup> Again, if the attachment comes to an end by the satisfaction of the decree in execution of which it was attached, all claims enforceable under the attachment also cease to be enforceable and the Section does not apply.<sup>10</sup> Nor can a decree-holder who has not secured his title from the Court and has no longer any claim enforceable under the attachment, obtain any benefit from the provisions of this Section.<sup>11</sup>

A who has mortgage rights over certain properties transfers the rights to B in order to discharge two other decree debts in execution of which those rights had been attached. B delays in discharging those debts and in the meanwhile C, in execution of another decree against A, attaches the monies retained by B to pay off the prior attaching creditors. Subsequent to this B pays off the decrees debts. Is such payment valid against C? Yes. The reason is that A himself has no absolute rights to amounts retained by B but is subject to the latter's right to pay off the prior encumbrances. C's attachment of A's rights will therefore be also subject to the paramount rights of B to protect his title by paying off the prior creditors.<sup>12</sup>

13. Claims enforceable under an attachment include claims for rateable distribution — Explanation. — The Explanation to the Section is now. It gives effect to the view taken by Telang, J., in Sorabji v. Govind,<sup>1</sup> a case under Section 276 of the old Code, that claims enforceable under an attachment include claims under

Notes 13-14

Section 73 of the Code for rateable distribution of assets.<sup>2</sup> But in order that the Explanation may apply, two conditions must be satisfied —

1. there must be assets held by the Court, for otherwise there is no right to rateable distribution at all,<sup>3</sup> and
2. the claim of the decree-holder must be one enforceable under the particular attachment in respect of which the assets have been realised.<sup>4</sup>

Illustrations

1. A obtains a decree against B and attaches his properties in execution. B transfers the property pending the attachment, to C. Subsequently X attaches the same properties in execution of his decree against B, brings it to sale and purchases it himself. Here if assets are held by the Court in X's execution, A will be entitled to rateable distribution, he having applied in execution before the receipt of such assets. But he cannot question C's title inasmuch as his claim is only in respect of X's attachment which cannot be enforced against the transfer to C which took place prior to that attachment.<sup>5</sup>

2. A obtains a decree against B and attaches his properties in execution. C also obtains a decree against B and applies for execution of his decree. B then transfers the property to D and discharges A's decree. Here no assets are received at all and C has no right to any rateable distribution. He cannot consequently question D's title to the property.<sup>6</sup>

It has been held by the Bombay<sup>7</sup> and Madras<sup>8</sup> High Courts that in order that a claim for rateable distribution may be 'enforceable' so as to defeat an alienation pending the attachment in respect of which assets are received, it is not necessary that the claim should have been in existence on the date of the alienation, i.e., that the claimant should have obtained a decree and applied for execution before that date. The same view was taken in an earlier decision of the Calcutta High Court.<sup>9</sup> The same High Court has however, in a later case, held that the claim should have been in existence on the date of the alienation.<sup>10</sup> There does not seem to be anything in the Section itself which leads to the restricted interpretation adopted by the later decision of the Calcutta High Court. It is submitted that the Bombay and Madras views are correct.

of law and is not affected by Section 64. Where the judgment-debtor is adjudicated an insolvent, the whole of his property vests in the Official Receiver or Official Assignee for the benefit of the general body of creditors and an attaching creditor has no priority over the Official Receiver or Official Assignee.<sup>1</sup> Under Section 34 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1907, the attaching creditor was entitled to the assets realised in execution or otherwise before the order of adjudication so that if execution had taken place and sale price deposited in Court before adjudication, the decree-holder was entitled to the sale proceeds as against the receiver.<sup>2</sup> This is now no longer law in view of the provisions of Section 51 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, 1920, which provides that "no person shall be entitled to the benefit of the execution against the receiver except in respect of assets realized in the course of the execution by sale or otherwise before the date of the admission of the petition."

Where property under attachment is transferred contrary to such attachment, the transfer is not absolutely void and so, where the debtor is adjudicated insolvent after the alienation, the property does not vest in the Official Receiver.<sup>2a</sup>

An order for liquidation does not vest the property of the company in the liquidator and an attachment made on the property of the company at the instance of the decree-holder before the winding up of the company will prevail over the rights of the liquidator.<sup>3</sup>

15. Prior contract for sale of property. — It has been held in the under-mentioned cases<sup>1</sup> that an alienation of immovable property pending an attachment of such property can be avoided under this Section, although the alienation has been made in pursuance of a contract entered into before the attachment.

But a contrary view has been held in several cases. In Gutta Bapineedu v. Gutta Venkayya,<sup>2</sup> it was held by the High Court of Madras that as the contract entered into before attachment could be enforced under Section 27 (b) of the Specific Relief Act, against the transferee in court auction and the attaching creditor, the claim of the latter was not one enforceable under the attachment against the sale executed in pursuance of such a contract and therefore cannot prevail against the sale. In Babala Venkata Reddi v. Mangadu Yellappa Chetty,<sup>3</sup> the same High Court rested the view on another ground. It held, following an earlier decision of the Calcutta High Court,<sup>4</sup> that the contract of sale created an obligation annexed to the ownership of the property under Section 40 of the Transfer of Property Act and that the attachment and sale must be deemed to have been made of the property only subject to such obligation. The High Court of Rangoon has held the same view in the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> on yet another ground. In that case possession of the property had also been delivered to the promisee under the contract of sale prior to the attachment and it was held that the beneficial interest had been transferred before attachment, that what is aimed at by Section 64 is only the transfer of the beneficial interest and that therefore the mere conveyance of the legal title after the attachment is not affected by Section 64. The view held in Babala Venkata Reddi's case<sup>3</sup> has also been taken by the Madras High Court in subsequent decisions.<sup>6</sup> The Nagpur High Court has also held that this Section does not affect a transfer in pursuance of a contract entered into prior to the attachment.<sup>7</sup>

It is submitted that the second of the two views mentioned above seems to be the correct one. No doubt a mere contract for the sale of immovable property does not create any interest in the property. But the contract certainly creates an obligation annexed to the ownership of the property and as what is attached is the right, title and interest of the debtor in the property, the attachment cannot be free from any obligation to which the debtor is subject in respect of the property at the date of the attachment. As the learned Judges observed in Babala Venkatarreddi's case,<sup>3</sup> "It does not seem to be sound sense that when a creditor attaches property which is subject to a particular obligation, he should be able to override it."

If an interest in the property is created only after the attachment, it is clearly within the terms of the Section and cannot prevail against claims enforceable under the attachment.

16. Objections as to attachment.—The onus of proving that an attachment prima facie legal is not legal is on the party pleading it.<sup>1</sup> But a judgment-debtor who consents to an attachment of an occupancy holding is not estopped from objecting to the sale of the holding on the ground of its non-transferability.<sup>2</sup> An attachment before judgment does not stand on the same footing as an attachment in execution; and a party who does not object to the attachment before judgment is not estopped from objecting to its validity after the decree.<sup>3</sup> The question of non-observance of the

See also the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> where the Privy Council observed that the main purpose of attachment is to prevent the transfer or charging of the property by the judgment-debtor and held that the alleged irregularities in the attachment in the particular case did not justify the setting aside of the sale.

17. Waiver of benefit under the Section. — The Section being intended for the benefit of the attaching creditor, the benefit can be waived by him.<sup>1</sup> Waiver, however, is an intentional act and a clear act showing such an intention must be shown.<sup>2</sup> The mere fact that the decree-holder in taking out execution referred to a mortgage that had been executed pending attachment,<sup>3</sup> or that such mortgage was notified in the proclamation of sale,<sup>4</sup> will not amount to a waiver of the plea under Section 64. If however the decree-holder expressly permits its notification at the time of the sale, he cannot be permitted to plead the bar under Section 64.<sup>5</sup>

Notes 1-8

1. Legislative changes. — Two important changes have been introduced into the present Section —

1. The date of vesting of title in the auction-purchaser is the date of the sale and not the date of the sale certificate.
2. The decree under which the property is sold need not be subsisting at the time of the confirmation of the sale.

2. Scope and object of the Section. — A judicial sale, unlike a private one, is not complete immediately it takes place. It is liable to be set aside on appropriate proceedings taken under O. 21 Rr. 89 to 91. If no such proceedings are taken, or if taken are not successful, the sale will then be made absolute under O. 21 R. 92. Questions, therefore, arise as to whether the auction-purchaser is entitled to rents and profits during the period between the two dates, i.e., the date of the sale and the date of the certificate of sale. Again, there may be successive sales of the same property in execution of different decrees giving rise to questions of priority of title with reference to dates of confirmation. Questions as to the validity of private sales by auction-purchasers or judgment-debtors before the date of confirmation may also arise. In order to settle the law bearing on such questions, this Section lays down that though the property does not vest in the auction-purchaser till the date of confirmation, once the sale is confirmed and becomes absolute, the title of the auction-purchaser shall relate back to the date of the sale itself.

3. "Immoveable property." — See Section 16.

4. "Becomes absolute." — See O. 21 R. 92. As to when a judicial sale is void or voidable, see O. 21 Rr. 89 to 91 and Section 47 Notes 51 to 71.

5. Sale certificate. — See Order 21 Rule 94.

6. Effect of reversal of decree after confirmation. — See Note 58 to Section 47.

7. Effect of reversal of decree before confirmation. — Under the old Section there was a proviso that the decree must be subsisting on the date of the sale certificate for the property to vest in the purchaser.<sup>1</sup> This is now no longer necessary and a sale in favour of a bona fide purchaser not a party to the suit will not be set aside merely because the decree has been reversed before confirmation.<sup>2</sup>

As to the cases where a judicial sale may be set aside on the reversal of the decree, see Note 58 to Section 47.

date than that of the confirmation, does not affect the vesting of title on the confirmation of the sale.<sup>2</sup>

The legal effect of the relation back of the vesting of the title to the date of the sale is that the auction-purchaser will be entitled to rights in the property and be liable to the obligations in respect of the same as from the date of sale. Thus, if there are accretions to the property between the date of sale and the date of confirmation, they would belong to him. But if the property is between those two dates sold for arrears of revenue, he would lose it completely.<sup>3</sup>

Though, according to the strict terms of Section 316 of the old Code, title vested only on the date of the sale certificate, the Courts had held that even from the date of sale the purchaser acquired an equitable interest in the property to be perfected on confirmation,<sup>4</sup> and, in effect, the same position was reached as is now embodied in the Section in clear terms. Again, under the old Code the property vested in the purchaser only against parties to the suit and persons claiming under them.<sup>5</sup> The omission from the present Section of the words "so far as regards the parties to the suit and persons claiming through or under them" does not, however, alter the law under the present Section.

9. Right to possession, when accrues. — As has been seen in Note 8 above, the right of the auction-purchaser to the property arises on confirmation of the sale.<sup>1</sup> It is therefore no longer necessary to obtain a sale certificate before applying for possession<sup>2</sup> as was held to be necessary under the Code of 1859.<sup>3</sup>

10. Right to mesne profits.—The present Section entitles the auction-purchaser to claim mesne profits from the date of sale.<sup>1</sup> Under Section 316 of the Code of 1882 though the theory of equitable title was largely recognized, the right to claim mesne profits was held to arise only on confirmation of the sale.<sup>2</sup>

11. Liability for rent and revenue.—The liability of an auction-purchaser of a leasehold interest for rent and revenue dates from the date of the sale as his title relates back to that date.<sup>1</sup> Under the old Code there was, on this question, a conflict of opinion between the Madras and Calcutta High Courts<sup>2</sup> which is not now material.

12. Titles of purchasers at successive execution sales.—On the doctrine of relation back on confirmation, the title of an auction-purchaser dates from the date of sale. Consequently, as between purchasers at successive execution sales of the same property, the sale first in point of time is the sale first in the eye of law and will prevail over a later sale though confirmed earlier. Under the Code of 1882 the same result was arrived at by the application of the principle of equitable title in mitigation of the strict terms of the Section as it stood.<sup>1</sup>

Where, however, on the date of the later sale the earlier sale was for any reason not in fact subsisting, as for example, where it had been set aside under O. 21 R. 90, it will not acquire priority on being revived in due course of law.<sup>2</sup>

13. What passes under a court sale.—See Order 21 Rule 94.

14. Sale in execution of mortgage decree.—In deciding the question of priority between two successive purchasers of the same property in execution of different mortgage decrees against the same judgment-debtor, the determining date is the date of the execution sale and not of the mortgages.<sup>1</sup> In a case of the Allahabad High Court,<sup>2</sup> it has been held that the purchaser under the earlier mortgage is entitled to priority. But in that case the different execution sales were held to be simultaneous. For a full discussion on this question, see Note 19 to O. 34 R. 1, infra.

1. Legislative changes. — The main changes that have been introduced in this Section are as follows —

1. For the words "no suit shall be maintained against the certified purchaser" in Section 317 of the old Code, the words "No suit shall be maintained against any person claiming title under a purchase certified by the Court in such manner as may be prescribed" have been substituted. See Notes 16 and 17 below.
2. For the words "any other person" and "such other person" in the old Code, the words "the plaintiff" have been substituted.
3. The words "or interfere with the right of a third person . . . real owner" in sub-section (2) have been newly added. See Note 11 below.

2. Scope, object and applicability of the Section. — This Section enacts an exception to the general rule applicable to benami transactions, i.e., transactions by one person in the name of another. A benami transaction is not per se illegal<sup>1</sup> and, unless brought about for a fraudulent purpose and the fraud is carried out, a Court of Equity will give effect to the real title as against the benami title.<sup>2</sup> This is the general rule. The Legislature has, by this Section, declared that this general rule shall not apply to execution sales held by the Court.<sup>2a</sup> The object is to put an end to purchases in court auction by one person in the name of another<sup>3</sup> and to protect third parties who might deal with the purchaser against the claims of an undeclared or secret owner who puts forward the certified purchaser as the legal owner.<sup>4</sup> The effect of the Section would appear to help the certified purchaser in his fraud or breach of trust against the real purchaser, but really the Section is designed to prevent fraud against third parties resulting from the collusive action of the real and certified purchasers.<sup>5</sup> Hence, the Section should be applied in all cases without any regard to the consequences.<sup>6</sup> But inasmuch as it is restrictive of the Court's equitable jurisdiction to grant relief to the real owner as against the ostensible owner, it should not be extended beyond its actual terms but should be construed strictly.<sup>7</sup>

In order that the Section may apply, the following essentials are necessary —

- (1) There should be a court sale. In other words, the Section applies only to execution sales. Thus, a sale by a receiver is not within the Section.<sup>8</sup>
- (2) The sale must be a real and not a fictitious one. Thus, where a collusive suit is brought in which a collusive decree is allowed to be passed and a fictitious sale held in execution of such decree, this Section has no application.<sup>9</sup>
- (3) The suit must be against the certified purchaser or his representative, on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff or his prodeccesor-in-interest.<sup>10</sup>

('23) AIR 1923 Cal 302 (303). (Certified purchaser or his successor not party to the suit.)

Notes 2-4

The test to see whether a suit is based on the ground that the auction-purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff is whether the plaintiff can get any relief or any material relief without proving that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff.<sup>10a</sup> The Section, like the Limitation Act, does not extinguish the rights of the real owner but only prevents him from enforcing them in a Court of law.<sup>11</sup> See Note 15 below. Sub-section (2) excepts the classes of cases mentioned therein from the operation of sub-section (1). The rule in sub-section (1) therefore does not apply —

(1) to a suit for a declaration that the name of the certified purchaser was inserted in the certificate fraudulently or without the consent of the real purchaser,<sup>12</sup>

(2) to the right of a third person to proceed against the property on the ground that it is liable to satisfy his claim against the real owner.

3. English law. — Under the English law, as in the Indian law, where A purchases with his own funds property in the name of B, there will, in the absence of any other circumstances, be a resulting trust in favour of A which the Courts will enforce against B.<sup>1</sup> But no such trust will result if the policy of any Act of Parliament would thereby be defeated.<sup>2</sup> Thus, under the old Registry Acts, where A purchased a ship in the name of B, the register was conclusive evidence of the ownership of B both at law and equity.<sup>3</sup>

4. Retrospective operation of the Section. — There is a conflict of opinion as to whether this Section is retrospective in its operation. The conflict arises in view of the fact that under Section 317 of the old Code an action against the representative of the certified purchaser was not barred but that, under the present Section, it is barred. If a court sale is held and confirmed before this Code came into force, but a suit is brought against the representative of the certified purchaser after the Code came into force, is the suit barred under Section 66? The Calcutta High Court has held that it is not,<sup>1</sup> on the ground that the real owner had, on the date of the confirmation of the sale, acquired a vested right to have his title declared in respect of the properties, which he could enforce against the benamidar's transferee, and that such right is not taken away by Section 66. The Lahore High Court has followed the Calcutta view.<sup>1a</sup> The Allaha-bad<sup>2</sup> and the Madras<sup>3</sup> High Courts have taken a contrary view, on the ground that this Section embodies, as Section 317 of the old Code did, merely a rule of procedure and that rules of procedure are always retrospective. The view of the Calcutta High Court that Section 66 or the corresponding Section 317 of the Code of 1882 embodies anything more than a rule of procedure does not seem to be a sound one.

Where a sale was held before, but confirmed after the Code came into force, the purchaser's title becomes perfected only after the confirmation and consequently Section 66 applies.<sup>4</sup>

6. Cases under the Public Demands Recovery Act. — See Note 5 above.

7. "No suit shall be maintained." — The words "no suit shall be maintained" in the Section mean "no suit shall be instituted and if it is instituted, it shall fail."<sup>1</sup> The words "no suit" show that not even a suit for the return of the purchase money from the benamidar will lie.<sup>2</sup>

8. Plea in defence, if can be raised. — The Section bars only a suit against the certified purchaser or his representatives-in-interest. Where a suit is brought by the certified purchaser or his representatives against the real owner, the latter can plead that the purchase was only benami for him. The Section does not bar a plea of benami in defence.<sup>1</sup> In Mussumat Bahuns Kowur v. Lalla Buhoree Lall,<sup>2</sup> which was a case under Section 260 of the Code of 1859 corresponding to the present Section, their Lordships of the Privy Council said as follows:

"It is well known that benami purchases are common in India, and that effect is given to them by the Courts according to the real intention of the parties. The Legislature has not, by any general measure, declared such transactions to be illegal; and therefore they must still be recognised and effect given to them by the Courts except so far as positive enactment stands in the way and directs a contrary course. . . . The only express enactment on the subject occurs in Section 260. . . . This enactment is clear and definite. . . . It is confined to a suit brought against the certified purchaser. . . . The present suit which is converse of that pointed at in the Section is not within the words or scope of it. It would be specially unsafe so to construe the Act as by inference to import into it prohibitory enactments which would exclude any inquiry into the truth in any suit between the parties."

9. Suits outside the Section.—As has been seen in Note 2 above, a suit which is not against the certified purchaser or his representatives, or which is not based on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff, is not within the Section. A suit by a certified purchaser for declaration of his own title to the property purchased is not barred by the Section.<sup>1</sup> For suits based on grounds other than that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff, see Notes 12, 13, 14 and 15 below.

10. Suit by beneficial owner in possession or his successor in title for declaration of title.—Where the beneficial owner is in possession and brings a suit against the benamidar for declaration of his title, is the suit barred by Section 66? The general consensus of opinion is that it is barred.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the words "no suit shall be maintained" in the Section are very general and do not exclude a suit for a declaration of title on the mere ground that the plaintiff is in possession.<sup>3</sup> A contrary opinion was, however, expressed by the Calcutta High Court in the undermentioned case.<sup>3</sup> Their Lordships seem to have proceeded in that case on the view that the suit was not based on the ground that the purchase was made benami, but on the ground of existing possession in the plaintiff. The case has been dissented from by the same High Court in later cases.<sup>4</sup> The view expressed in I. L. R. 23 Calcutta 699, if accepted, would amount practically to a repeal of the whole Section, and cannot, therefore, be accepted as a sound one.<sup>5</sup> The Lower Burma Chief Court<sup>6</sup> has, however, followed the decision in I. L. R. 23 Calcutta 699.

But an auction-purchaser may, by his conduct, be estopped from pleading the bar under Section 66.<sup>7</sup> Thus, where the real owner sells the property to a third person with the consent and attestation of the benamidar auction-purchaser and the third person brings a suit against the benamidar, the latter will be estopped from pleading that the suit is barred under Section 66.<sup>8</sup>

Where the true owner has perfected his title by adverse possession for twelve years, a suit by him against the certified purchaser for declaration of his title will not be barred as it is based on title by adverse possession<sup>9</sup> and not on the ground that the purchase was made on his behalf. See Note 12 below.

11. Suits by third person.—Under Section 317 of the old Code, no suit was maintainable against the certified purchaser on the ground that the purchase was made "on behalf of any other person or on behalf of some one through whom such other person claims." This raised a conflict of opinion as to whether a third person, such as a creditor of the real owner, could sue to enforce his claims against the property purchased on the ground that the purchase was benami for the real owner. The Calcutta High Court held that he could, and that the bar under the Section operated only on suits brought by the beneficial owner as plaintiff.<sup>1</sup> The Madras High Court held a contrary view in the undermentioned case,<sup>2</sup> but in a later case<sup>3</sup> dissented from the earlier case and came to the same conclusion as that of the Calcutta High Court. The Allahabad High Court and the Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court took a view contrary to that of the Calcutta High Court.<sup>4</sup>

The substitution, in the present Section, of the words "on behalf of the plaintiff or on behalf of some one through whom the plaintiff claims" and the introduction of the words "or interfere with the right of a third person to proceed against that property, on the ground that it is liable to satisfy a claim of such third person against the real owner" in sub-section (2) gives effect to the Calcutta decisions and removes the conflict mentioned above.<sup>5</sup>

12. Suit on grounds other than those mentioned in the Section. — A suit is barred under the Section only if it is based on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff or on behalf of some one through whom the plaintiff claims. The Section has no application if the relief is sought on certain facts which establish certain other kinds of legal relations between the parties which entitle the plaintiff to rely on them as involving and creating effectual legal claims in his favour.<sup>1</sup> In Ganga Sahai v. Keshri,<sup>2</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"In their Lordships' opinion the provisions of that Section (Section 317 of the old Code) were designed to create some check on the practice of making what are called benami purchases at execution sales for the benefit of judgment-debtors, and in no way affect the title of persons otherwise beneficially interested in the purchase."

1. A sues and obtains a decree against B. In execution of the decree B's house is sold in court auction and is purchased by C, the paid agent of A, with A's money, but without his knowledge. A then sues C for possession, on the ground that the purchase by the agent enures to the benefit of the principal. The suit is not barred as it is based on a legal relationship of principal and agent, and not merely on the ground that C was a benamidar.<sup>3</sup>

2. A and B are joint mortgage decree-holders against C. A applies on behalf of himself and B under Section 231 of the old Code (O. 21 R. 15) to execute the decree and purchases C's property in the court sale in his own name, the purchase money being set off against the whole decree amount. B then sues A for recovery of his share of the properties purchased by A. The suit is not barred, as B is beneficially interested in the purchase otherwise than merely on the ground that the purchase was made on B's behalf.<sup>4</sup>

3. In execution of A's decree against B, C purchases certain properties in court auction and then agrees with A to convey the property to him. A brings a suit for specific performance of the contract against C. The suit is not barred as the claim is based on an agreement and not on the ground that the purchase was made on A's behalf.<sup>5</sup>

4. A purchases certain properties in court auction with his own funds, but in the name of B. A continues in possession of the properties purchased for over twelve years. He then sues B for a declaration that he is entitled to the properties. The suit is not barred as it is based not merely on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of A but on the ground of his having perfected his title to the property by adverse possession.<sup>6</sup>

13. Suits by joint purchasers. — It has been seen in the Illustration 2 to Note 12 above that where one of several joint decree-holders applies for execution of the decree on behalf of all and purchases the property, the purchase money being set off against the entire decree amount, the other decree-holders are entitled to sue the purchaser for recovery of their share in the property and that Section 66 is no bar thereto.<sup>1</sup> Where, without being decree-holders, two persons enter into a joint venture to buy a property at a court sale, the funds being provided jointly, but the sale certificate is issued in the name of one of them only, there is a conflict of decisions as to whether a suit by the other claiming half the property on the ground that the purchase was made for both is barred under Section 66. The general trend of decisions is to the effect that such a suit is barred.<sup>2</sup> This view proceeds on the basis that the Section applies to all cases where the suit is based on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff, whether the allegation is that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff exclusively or that it was made on behalf of the plaintiff and the certified purchaser jointly. But the contrary view was taken in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> by the Bombay High Court. The reason given is that the Section applies only to benami purchases at execution sales and that in such a case, there is only a joint purchase and not a benami purchase. It was also held that in such cases there is a partnership and the plaintiff must be deemed as suing to enforce his right as a partner.

Where, out of two joint mortgagees one alone sues making the other a pro forma defendant and obtains a decree, in execution of which he purchases the property in his own name, a suit by the other joint mortgagee claiming a share of the property purchased does not fall within the principle of the decision in Ganga Sahai v. Keshri,<sup>4</sup> and is barred by Section 66.<sup>5</sup>

Where A and B both applied to purchase a property at an auction-sale in a certain proportion, agreeing to pay the price in that proportion and actually paid the 25 per cent. of the purchase money in that proportion, but the balance was wholly paid by B and he obtained the sale certificate in his name, it was held that the payment by B was on behalf of A also, that B's name in sale certificate was inserted without A's consent and that a suit by A for his share of the property purchased was not barred under Section 66 sub-section (2).<sup>6</sup>

14. Purchase by Hindu coparcener.— Under the Hindu law, every acquisition made by a Hindu coparcener, with joint family funds, becomes the common property of the family, in which the other members are entitled to share. Such acquisitions are not benami transactions, which are the result of private agreements or undertakings. The rights of coparceners to treat such acquisition as the common property of the family arise from the operation of law. A suit, therefore, by one coparcener to share in the property purchased by another at a court sale with joint family funds is not barred by Section 66, as it is based on a ground other than the one mentioned in the Section, namely, that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff.<sup>1</sup>

Where the managing member of a Hindu family makes a purchase with joint family funds but takes the sale in the name of a third person, there is a conflict of opinion as to whether any member of the family can sue the third person on the ground that the purchase was benami for the managing member and so enures for the benefit of the family. The Madras High Court has held that he can.<sup>2</sup> The reason is that a purchase by a managing member in the name of a third person cannot be considered to have been made on behalf of all the members of the family and so cannot be considered to have been made "on behalf of the plaintiff" within the meaning of the Section.<sup>3</sup> The Allahabad High Court has held to the contrary basing its decision on the ground that a purchase by a managing member is made on behalf of all the members of the family and so is made on behalf of the plaintiff.<sup>4</sup> It purported to follow the decision of the Privy Council in Suraj Narain v. Ratan Lal<sup>5</sup> which was, however, a case under Section 317 of the old Code which barred a suit on the ground that the purchase was made "on behalf of any other person." It is submitted that the view of the Allahabad High Court is not correct. The object of Section 66 is, as has already been seen, to put a stop to benami purchases at court sales,<sup>6</sup> and when a managing member makes such a purchase in the name of a third person, he is doing something which is wholly wrong and cannot be presumed to be acting on behalf of the family.<sup>7</sup>

15. Suit for specific performance of agreement to sell.— Where before the date of a court-sale A and B agree that B should buy the property in his name with funds supplied by A and should convey the property to A thereafter, the agreement is really to buy the property on behalf of A and a suit by A for specific performance of such an agreement will be one based on the ground that the property was purchased "on behalf of A" and is consequently barred by Section 66.<sup>1</sup>

Notes 15-16

Where, before the court sale, B intends to buy the property for himself with his own funds but agrees to convey the same to A for consideration, the purchase by B is not a benami transaction at all and a suit by A for specific performance of the contract is one not based on the ground that the purchase was "on behalf of the plaintiff" and is outside Section 66.<sup>2</sup> If, however, the circumstances show that, notwithstanding the purchase was made with his own funds, B never intended to buy on his own behalf but intended to do so only on behalf of A, the case clearly falls within the mischief of Section 66.<sup>3</sup>

Where B agrees with A subsequent to the purchase (whether made on his own behalf or on behalf of A) to sell the property purchased, and A sues B for specific performance of that agreement, the suit is not barred by the Section.<sup>4</sup> The reason is that the suit is based, not on the ground that the purchase was made "on behalf of the plaintiff," but on agreement which is not only not inconsistent with B's own title, but is rather the reverse.<sup>5</sup>

of course has no application.<sup>4</sup> Where the real purchaser sues the certified purchaser and a third person on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff, and the certified purchaser either is ex parte or admits plaintiff's title or does not contest the plaintiff's claim or executes a release deed in plaintiff's favour or is otherwise liable to him under a contract made after the sale which he duly admits, the Section does not bar it.<sup>5</sup> The Section does not also apply to cases of contest between two persons each claiming to be the real purchaser under an admittedly benami court-auction-purchase.<sup>6</sup>

17. "Certified purchaser," meaning of. — In a case under Section 260 of the old Code of 1859 it was held by the Calcutta High Court that that Section applied to a suit against a purchaser at a court sale though the sale certificate was obtained by him only during the pendency of the suit.<sup>1</sup> A person entitled to get a sale certificate was considered as a certified purchaser as soon as his bid at the sale was accepted.<sup>2</sup> The Allahabad High Court, on the other hand, held in a similar case that until the certificate was actually granted he was not a certified purchaser but that as soon as the certificate was granted, he became a certified purchaser and the bar under the Section would become applicable.<sup>3</sup>

A sale certificate in the name of A "as mother and guardian of her infant son B" is a sale in favour of B who is therefore the certified purchaser.<sup>4</sup>

18. Waiver of right by auction-purchaser. — A purchases property at a court sale in the name of B. B obtains possession from the Court and delivers it to A and subsequently disturbs his possession. A sues B for a declaration of his title or for possession of the property. The suit is barred by Section 66. The reason is that a mere permission to hold possession cannot give or transfer a title from the benamidar to the real owner so as to enable him to maintain a suit on title against the benamidar.<sup>1</sup> After the Transfer of Property Act, no waiver or transfer of rights can be recognized in the case of immovable property in the absence of a registered instrument.<sup>2</sup>

Where, however, the real owner is in possession and the certified purchaser sues him for possession, the real owner can defend his possession on the basis of the real title resting with him.<sup>3</sup>

19. Name inserted in the certificate fraudulently or without the consent of the real purchaser.—Sub-section (2) is an exception to the rule in sub-section (1). A certified purchaser is not protected if he is guilty of fraud or gets his name inserted in the sale certificate without the consent of the real purchaser.<sup>1</sup> The basis of this exception is that the real purchaser is really an innocent person and it is not the policy of the law to benefit a fraudulent certified purchaser as against an innocent party. Where the pleader of a party, by means of treachery and fraud, purchases at an inadequate price the property of the party in a court sale, Section 66 will not operate as a bar to a suit against him for the recovery of the property on the ground that he must be taken to have made the purchase as trustee of the plaintiff.<sup>2</sup>

20. Objection as to bar by Section 66, when can be raised.—A plea that a suit is barred by the provisions of Section 66 may be put forward and given effect to at any stage of the suit, even in appeal for the first time.<sup>1</sup>

Every notification issued in the exercise of the powers conferred by this sub-section shall set out the rules so continued or modified.

[1877, S. 327; See Ss. 54 and 68 to 72.]

a. Substituted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, for "Local Government."

b. Substituted by ibid for "Local Official Gazette."

1. Sub-section (2). — Sub-section (2) was inserted in the Section by the Code of Civil Procedure Amendment Act (I of 1914). There was an analogous provision contained in the corresponding Section (Section 327) of the former Code, and as the present Code originally omitted this provision it was held that the special rules which had been issued under the former Code were indirectly repealed from the date of the new Civil Procedure Code.<sup>1</sup> Even after the insertion of sub-section (2) by Act I of 1914, if no notification is issued under it, the special rules framed under Section 327 of the former Code do not apply.<sup>2</sup> But where rules are made after due notification under the sub-section, they are binding and a sale not in conformity with them is void.<sup>3</sup>

The words "with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council" were omitted by the Devolution Act (XXXVIII of 1920), Section 2 and Schedule I, Part I.

DELEGATION TO COLLECTOR OF POWER TO EXECUTE DECREES AGAINST IMMOVEABLE PROPERTY.

68. [S. 320, para. 1.] The Provincial Government may declare, by notification in the Official Gazette, that in any local area the execution of decrees in cases in which a Court has ordered any immoveable property to be sold, or the execution of any particular kind of such decrees, or the execution of decrees ordering the sale of any particular kind of, or interest in, immoveable property, shall be transferred to the Collector.

Power to prescribe rules for transferring to Collector execution of certain decrees.

Synopsis

1. Object of the Section.
2. "Has ordered any immoveable property to be sold."
3. Notifications under the Section.
4. Retrospective effect of notifications.
5. Execution shall be transferred to the Collector.
6. Jurisdiction of Civil Court and of Collector. See Section 70 Note 2.
7. Liquidation of judgment-debt by temporary alienation of judgment-debtor's land. See Section 72 Notes 6, 7 and 8.

1. Object of the Section. — In Huro Prasad v. Kali Prasad, I. L. R. 9 Calcutta 290 (F. B.), Field, J., observed as follows:

"In different parts of India, the effect of sales in execution of decrees was to transfer landed estates from the old families to modern speculators. A strong opinion was entertained by certain members of the Government of India that these results of the administration of civil justice were impolitic and inexpedient; and it was suggested that some procedure might be devised by which the chief executive officer of the district would be enabled to liquidate debts of the encumbered landholders without the immediate sale of their estates, and so to preserve the old landed gentry of the country. The provisions of Sections 320 to 325C<sup>1</sup> were inserted in the Code of Civil Procedure, in order to give effect to these suggestions."<sup>1a</sup>

The words "with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council" have been omitted by the Devolution Act (XXXVIII of 1920), Section 2 and Schedule I, Part I.

2. "Has ordered any immoveable property to be sold." — The Section contemplates cases in which immovable property has been ordered to be sold. Hence a simple money decree in execution of which the Court has not ordered any immovable property to be sold cannot be transferred to the Collector for execution under this Section.<sup>1</sup> For a similar reason, the Section does not apply to land which is not capable of being sold in execution, e. g., land the sale of which in execution of a decree is prohibited under the law. Hence a decree cannot be transferred to the Collector for realising the decretal amount from such land even otherwise than by the sale of the land.<sup>2</sup>

3. Notifications under the Section. — Sections 68 to 71 have no application to the Punjab as no notification by the Provincial Government has been issued as contemplated by Section 68.<sup>1</sup>

The Government of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh have issued a Notification No. 576-1A-93, dated 26th March 1932, declaring that with effect from the 1st April 1932, the execution of decrees in cases in which the Civil Court has ordered any agricultural land situated in those provinces or any interest in such land

Sections 68 to 72 have been excluded from operation in the following cases —

- (2) Suits for recovery of rent under the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) as amended by Act IV of 1928, Section 148, and, under the Orissa Tenancy Act (II of 1913): see Section 198.
- (3) Suits, appeals and other proceedings under the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908): see Section 192.

4. Retrospective effect of notifications. — Alterations merely in the form of procedure are, as has been seen in Note 3 to Preamble, retrospective in effect. Hence, rules made by the Provincial Government in pursuance of a notification under Section 68 for regulating the procedure of the Collector affect sales ordered before the coming into force of such rules as well as those ordered after, unless there be some strong reason to the contrary.<sup>1</sup> On the wording of the particular notification in the undermentioned case,<sup>2</sup> it was held by the Allahabad High Court that the notification did not apply to orders for sale passed before the date of the notification. Where agricultural land belonging to a judgment-debtor has been sold by a Civil Court in execution of a decree, and before the confirmation of the sale a notification under this Section is issued by the Provincial Government directing execution proceedings in such cases to be transferred to the Collector, the notification does not affect the validity of the sale held by the Civil Court.<sup>3</sup>

See also Section 70 Note 6 foot-note (1).

5. Execution shall be transferred to the Collector. — Where a notification under the Section affects only a portion of the immovable property ordered to be sold, the decree should be transferred to the Collector for execution as regards such portion of the land only.<sup>1</sup> Where a judgment-debtor stands by and allows a Court to sell certain land as not being covered by the Government notification under the Section, he cannot subsequently sue to set aside the sale on the ground that the land was covered by the notification and that therefore the Court had no power to sell the land.<sup>2</sup>

1. Extent of power of Provincial Government to make rules. — A rule made by the Provincial Government under this Section providing that no suit shall lie to set aside a sale confirmed by the revenue authority is not ultra vires. Clause (b) of sub-section (1) of this Section authorises such a rule being made.<sup>1</sup> Under the former Code it was held that the power to prescribe rules for regulating the procedure of the Collector included a power to make rules providing for an appeal from his orders.<sup>2</sup>

Under Sections 35 and 37 of Madras Regulation V of 1804 the Local Government has power to make rules in regard to claims which have not merged into decrees and to extend to such claims the procedure laid down in Section 322 (a), (b) and (d) (Schedule III, Paras. 3, 4 and 6 of the present Code).<sup>3</sup>

For rules providing for appeals in the Punjab from the orders of the Collector or the gazetted subordinate of the Collector in certain cases, see Punjab Gazette, 1909, Part I, page 12.

2. Jurisdiction of Collector and Civil Court. — Section 69 provides that in all cases in which execution of the decree has been transferred under Section 68, it is the procedure in the Third Schedule of the Code that shall apply. Section 70 enables the Provincial Government to make rules consistent with Sections 68 and 69 to regulate the procedure of the Collector in the execution of such decrees and further declares that the powers exercisable by the Collector under such rules shall not be exercised by the Court.<sup>1</sup> But the Provincial Government has no power under this Section to make any rule empowering the Collector to deal with questions of title.<sup>1a</sup>

It is thus clear that after a decree is transferred to the Collector, the jurisdiction of the Civil Court, in matters falling within the purview of the Third Schedule or of the rules framed under this Section, is ousted and it cannot thereafter control the Collector's proceedings in execution.<sup>1b</sup> Thus, a sale held by the Civil Court after the date of the notification issued under Section 68 is void.<sup>1a</sup> But the Collector has powers of execution only and not of deciding other matters.<sup>2</sup> Thus, he has no power to inquire into objections to attachment or applications for rateable distribution or matters of that kind.<sup>3</sup> He has also no jurisdiction to act except as provided by the Third Schedule or by rules made under this Section. Thus, except as so provided, he has no jurisdiction to set aside a sale under O. 21 R. 89<sup>4</sup> or under Section 47,<sup>5</sup> or to allow payment of the decree by instalments.<sup>6</sup> See also Note 74 to Section 47, and Note 1 to Section 71.

In matters arising in execution, but not covered by the provisions of the Third Schedule or the rules framed under this Section, the Civil Court will continue to have jurisdiction.<sup>7</sup>

The Collector ceases to have jurisdiction to sell or confirm the sale when the Court passing the decree recalls, under the rules governing the matter, the proceedings.<sup>9</sup>

For jurisdiction of Collector and Civil Court in respect of partition of an undivided estate assessed to Government revenue or for separate possession of a share of such estate, see Section 54 Notes 5 and 7.

3. Ancestral property. — As an example of the working of this Section may be taken the Allahabad Government Notifications requiring that decrees for the sale of "ancestral" property must be transferred to the Collector for execution. In such cases the Civil Court has no jurisdiction to sell the property.<sup>1</sup> But the decision of the Court as to property being non-ancestral is final and cannot be attacked subsequent to the sale.<sup>2</sup>

As to what is and what is not ancestral property, see the undermentioned case.<sup>3</sup>

4. Suit to set aside orders of Collector. — A suit to set aside the order of the Collector is maintainable under two circumstances —

(1) Where the order of the Collector is such that if it had been passed by the Court a suit would have been maintainable to set it aside,<sup>1</sup> except where the order is declared to be final or conclusive by the rules framed by the Provincial Government.<sup>1a</sup>

Thus, it was held under the former Code that the last clause of Section 312 (O. 21 R. 92) did not preclude a suit to confirm a sale and set aside the order passed by the Collector cancelling it.<sup>2</sup> The reason is that Section 70 (2) does not preclude the jurisdiction of any Court other than the one referred to in it, viz., the Court which has transmitted the decree to the Collector for execution.<sup>3</sup> In view of these rulings, the decision of the Oudh Chief Court in the undermentioned case,<sup>4</sup> that after the transmission of the decree to the Collector for execution no Civil Court has authority in the matter and that no suit is maintainable for a declaration that the plaintiff's shares in the property are not liable to attachment, seems to be open to question.

(2) Where the order of the Collector is ultra vires as being beyond his powers, as for example, where he sets aside a sale under O. 21 R. 89 or R. 90 without having the power to do so.<sup>5</sup>

5. Suit to set aside sale held by Collector. — A suit to set aside a sale by the Collector on the ground of fraud is maintainable if the fraud does not come within the scope of O. 21 R. 90.<sup>1</sup>

6. Power of Collector to set aside sale. — There is a consensus of judicial opinion that in the absence of rules under this Section specifically empowering the Collector to set aside a sale in the particular circumstances in question, the Collector has no jurisdiction to set aside a sale.<sup>1</sup> The undermentioned case<sup>2</sup> is an instance of the Collector being empowered to set aside a sale under circumstances covered by O. 21 Rr. 89 and 90. The Allahabad High Court has held that even after the Collector has confirmed a sale and the case has been re-transmitted to the Civil Court, he may, in his inherent jurisdiction, set aside the sale on the ground of fraud.<sup>3</sup>

7. Appeal from orders of Collector. — An appeal from the orders of the Collector in an execution proceeding transferred to him lies to such authority as may be prescribed by rules under Section 70 (1) (c) and not to the High Court.<sup>1</sup> This is made clear by the sub-section (2) which enacts that a power conferred by rules upon the Collector shall not be exercisable by any Court in the exercise of appellate or revisional jurisdiction which it has with respect to decrees or orders of the Court.

8. Revision of orders of Collector. — It also follows from what has been said in Note 7 above that an order passed by the Collector in execution of a transferred decree is not open to revision by the High Court.<sup>1a</sup> The reason is that the Collector is not a Court and Section 115 of the Code only empowers the High Court to revise orders made by any Court subordinate to it. See also Note 1 Point 1 to Section 71, infra. An order by the Collector in the course of execution proceedings transferred to him sanctioning the prosecution of a person under Section 476, Criminal Procedure Code, is made by him in the capacity of a Revenue Court and as the jurisdiction of the High Court under Section 439, Criminal Procedure Code, is limited to proceedings in Criminal Courts, the order cannot be set aside in revision by the High Court.<sup>1</sup>

Notes 8-10

9. Power of Collector to pass order under Section 476, Criminal Procedure Code.—An Assistant Collector has no powers of either Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court while receiving an application under the rules under Section 70 for setting aside the sale on payment of the decree amount. If therefore an offence under Section 182, Indian Penal Code, is committed in the course of making an application, the Assistant Collector has no jurisdiction to order prosecution.<sup>1</sup> adjustment of the decree.<sup>2a</sup>

Under the former Code the expression used was "shall be deemed to be acting judicially within the meaning of Act No. XVIII of 1850." The italicised words have been omitted in the present Section, presumably to negative the view<sup>3</sup> that, except for the purposes of Act XVIII of 1850, the Collector's functions in execution proceedings were of a ministerial and not of a judicial character.

As to applicability of the Section, see Section 68 Note 3.

1. Legislative changes. — The corresponding provision in the Code of 1859 (Section 244) required that security for the amount of the decree must be given before the Section could be applied. This condition was deleted in the Code of 1877. The second sub-section was inserted in the Section in the Code of 1882. The only change of any importance made by the present Section is that it has omitted the expression "or management" which occurred after the words "temporary alienation." As to the applicability of the Section, see Section 68 Note 3.

2. "And the Collector represents to the Court." — This Section does not authorize the Collector to effect a temporary alienation of the judgment-debtor's property on his own responsibility. The Collector can only make a representation to the Court which should then decide upon the matter after hearing the parties.<sup>1</sup> The Collector's proposal must provide for satisfaction of the decree within a reasonable period, otherwise the Court cannot act on his proposal.<sup>2</sup> His proposal for temporary alienation need not contain an express representation that the public sale of the land is objectionable. The very fact of his making the proposal for temporary alienation may be taken to show his opinion that the sale of the land is objectionable.<sup>3</sup>

As to the power of the Court to order the temporary alienation of property in cases not covered by this Section, see Note 4 to Section 51, ante.

3. "Collector," meaning of. — The term "Collector," not being defined anywhere in the Civil Procedure Code, is to be taken in the sense of the definition in General Clauses Act, Section 3 (10), viz., as meaning the Chief Officer in charge of the revenue administration of a district.<sup>1</sup>

4. Reference to the Collector by the Civil Courts. — Though this Section empowers the Court to sanction a temporary alienation on the representation of the Collector, the Court can refer the case to the Collector and enquire if he wishes to intervene.<sup>1</sup> If the Collector reports his inability to do so, the Court should go on with the execution application in accordance with law and cannot decline to proceed further with it.<sup>2</sup>

As to the Court's power to act without any representation from the Collector, see Note 4 to Section 51, ante.

5. Discretion of Court. — The Court is not bound to accept the Collector's proposal and, if after hearing the decree-holder's objections and the evidence that might be offered in support of them the Court is not fully satisfied that the proposal is feasible, it ought, in the exercise of its discretion, to refuse its sanction.<sup>1</sup> The Court

As to Court's power to sanction temporary alienation in absence of Collector's representation, see Note 4 to Section 51, supra.

6. Court may authorise only temporary alienation. — This Section permits only a temporary alienation of the judgment-debtor's land and does not empower the Court to allow payment of the decree amount by instalments.<sup>1</sup>

As to form of authorisation, see Schedule I, Appendix E, Form No. 42.

7. Temporary alienation of land, of which sale in execution is prohibited. — See Section 51 Note 4, ante.

8. Collector to provide for such satisfaction in the manner recommended. — The Collector is not required to submit a detailed scheme to the Court when he makes a representation under this Section and the Court may give him an authority in general terms.<sup>1</sup>

9. Provisions of Sections 69 to 71 shall apply. — By virtue of this provision, Para 2 of Schedule III applies to Section 72 and the Court cannot therefore direct a temporary alienation of property of which the decree orders the sale in pursuance of a contract specifically affecting it.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, under Para 2 of Schedule III, the judgment-debtor cannot grant a usufructuary mortgage of property which is under the Collector's management under this Section.<sup>2</sup> Under the same Paragraph the period during which the property is under the Collector's control under the present Section must be excluded in computing the limitation for execution against the property.<sup>3</sup> So also, Section 71 must be read with this Section, and as Section 71 provides that the Collector must be deemed to be acting judicially, all objections relating to execution proceedings before the Collector under Section 72 must be disposed of by him.<sup>4</sup>

10. Appeal. — There is no right of appeal against the Collector's order making a representation or refusing to make a representation to the Court under the present Section.<sup>1</sup> But the order of the Court authorising the Collector to make temporary alienation is appealable.<sup>2</sup>

11. Revision. — Where a Court, without exercising its own judgment, merely accepts, as a matter of course, the Collector's recommendation, the order of the Court can be set aside in revision.<sup>1</sup>

DISTRIBUTION OF ASSETS

Section 73

Proceeds of execution sale to be rateably distributed among decree-holders.

- (a) where any property is sold subject to a mortgage or charge,<sup>15</sup> the mortgagee or incumbrancer shall not be entitled to share in any surplus arising from such sale;
- (b) where any property liable to be sold in execution of a decree is subject to a mortgage or charge, the Court may, with the consent of the mortgagee or incumbrancer, order that the property be sold free from the mortgage or charge,<sup>16</sup> giving to the mortgagee or incumbrancer the same interest in the proceeds of the sale as he had in the property sold;
- (c) where any immoveable property is sold in execution of a decree ordering its sale for the discharge of an incumbrance<sup>17</sup> thereon, the proceeds of sale shall be applied —
  - first, in defraying the expenses of the sale;
  - secondly, in discharging the amount due under the decree;
  - thirdly, in discharging the interest and principal monies due on subsequent incumbrances (if any);
  - and
  - fourthly, rateably among the holders of decrees for the payment of money against the judgment-debtor, who have, prior to the sale of the property, applied to the Court which passed the decree ordering such sale for execution of such decrees, and have not obtained satisfaction thereof.

(2) Where all or any of the assets liable to be rateably distributed under this section are paid to a person not entitled to

Section 73 receive the same, any person so entitled may sue such person to compel him to refund the assets.<sup>18</sup>

(3) Nothing in this section affects any right of the Crown.<sup>19</sup>

1. Legislative changes. — This Section corresponds to Section 295 of the Code of 1882. The following are the important changes introduced by the Section —

1. For the words "whenever assets are realised by the sale or otherwise in execution of a decree," the words "where assets are held by a Court" have been substituted. For the effect of the change, see Note 4 below.
2. For the words "prior to the realisation," the words "before the receipt of such assets" have been substituted. See Note 11 below.
3. The words "by which such assets are held" have been omitted.
4. For the words "decrees for money," the words "decrees for the payment of money passed" have been substituted. This alteration does not really effect any change in the law prior to the Code of 1908.<sup>1</sup>
5. For the words "right against" the words "interest in" in clause (b) have been substituted, thereby bringing the Section in conformity with Section 96 of the Transfer of Property Act. This alteration also is merely a verbal one.

2. Scope and object of the Section. — Under Sections 270 and 271 of the Code of 1859<sup>1</sup> which corresponded to the present Section 73, the creditor who first attached the property had a statutory priority to have his claim satisfied in full out of the sale proceeds to the exclusion of other creditors.<sup>2</sup> This superior position assigned to the first attaching creditor naturally led to scrambles and malpractices among attaching creditors, and with a view to put an end to the same the Section was changed by the Code of 1877 so as to place all decree-holders on an equal footing regardless of any priority in attachment or of the application for rateable distribution.<sup>3</sup>

The object of the Section is two-fold —

- (1) to prevent unnecessary multiplicity of execution proceedings, to obviate, in a case where there are many decree-holders, each competent to execute his decree by attachment and sale of a particular property, the necessity of each and every one separately attaching and separately selling that property;
- (2) to secure an equitable administration of the property by placing all the decree-holders on the same footing and making the property rateably divisible among them.<sup>4</sup>

Notes 2-4

The rule enunciated in this Section is only a rule of procedure and provides a cheap and speedy mode of execution of several decrees obtained against the same judgment-debtor by rateably distributing the assets held by a Court amongst the several rival decree-holders. It does not, however, alter or limit the substantive rights of such rival decree-holders.<sup>5</sup> A failure to participate in the assets under this Section does not deprive a decree-holder of the rights to execute his decree.<sup>6</sup> As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Shankar Sarup v. Mejo Mal,<sup>7</sup> the scheme of the Section "is rather to enable the Judge as a matter of administration to distribute the price according to what seem, at the time, to be the rights of the parties, without this distribution importing a conclusive determination on those rights which may be subsequently re-adjusted in a suit."

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>8</sup>

3. Essential conditions for the applicability of the Section. — In order that a decree-holder may claim a rateable distribution of the assets of the judgment-debtor under this Section, the following conditions must exist<sup>1</sup> —

1. The assets must be held by the Court.
2. The decrees obtained by the decree-holder and the attaching-creditor must be decrees for the payment of money.
3. Such decrees should have been obtained against the same judgment-debtor.
4. The claimant for rateable distribution must have applied for execution to the Court by which the assets are held.
5. Such application should have been made before the receipt of assets by the Court.

If the above conditions are all fulfilled, the decree-holder will be entitled to participate in the rateable distribution. It is not necessary that he should have given notice of his claim to other decree-holders.<sup>2</sup>

Before passing an order under this Section, the Court should give the parties claiming to be interested, an opportunity of being heard, and of establishing their claims to participate in the distribution.<sup>3</sup>

4. There must be assets held by the Court. — The right to rateable distribution under this Section is conditional upon there being assets held by the Court.

Hence, where the property attached is purchased by the attaching decree-holder privately, no right to rateable distribution arises as in such a case no proceeds come into the hands of the Court.<sup>1</sup> The word "assets" means all a man's property, of whatever kind, which may be used to satisfy debts or demands existing against him,<sup>2</sup> in other words, which may be used to satisfy his liabilities.

The five per centum of the sale price which is deposited under O. 21 R. 89 for payment to the auction-purchaser as compensation is not an asset of the judgment-debtor available for rateable distribution among his judgment-creditors. The reason is that the five per centum is not deposited in payment of any debt due by the judgment-debtor to the auction-purchaser but a statutory payment in order to ensure the setting aside of the sale.<sup>3</sup>

Where the manager of a joint Hindu family is adjudicated an insolvent, all that vests in the Official Receiver is not the interest of the other members of the family in the family property but only the right or the capacity which the insolvent had of making such interest available for the benefit of joint creditors under certain conditions which are recognised by the Hindu law. So long, therefore, as this right is not exercised by the Receiver and the interests of the other members are not sold, it is open to the latter to transfer their shares voluntarily to others and it is open also to their creditors to attach and sell them in execution of their decrees against such members. Hence, proceeds realised by the sale of such shares in execution of decrees obtained against the other members will be "assets" available for rateable distribution among persons holding money decrees against such members.<sup>4</sup>

The expression "assets held by the Court" conveys the idea of assets realised or converted into cash, for until then, the assets cannot be said to be held by the Court.<sup>5</sup>

This Section applies also to cases where the Collector, to whom execution is transferred, sells the lands of the judgment-debtor and holds the assets,<sup>6</sup> as in such cases the purchase money must be deemed to be received and held by the Court as soon as it is paid to the Collector.<sup>7</sup> But where the immovable property of a person is sold by the Collector in execution of an award under the Bombay Co-operative Societies Act of 1925 (which provides for the enforcement of such award according to the law applicable to the recovery of arrears of land revenue) the sale proceeds of the property in the hands of the Collector are not assets held by a Court within the meaning of this Section.<sup>8</sup>

In order that the assets should be capable of being distributed under Section 295 of the old Code, they had to be realised either —

1. by sale in execution of a decree, or,

2. otherwise in execution of a decree. This was interpreted in two ways —

- (a) Such assets as were realised otherwise than by sale, from the property of the judgment-debtor, e. g., under O. 21 R. 69, O. 21 R. 83 and Schedule III, Paragraphs 2 and 7.<sup>9</sup> Thus, monies paid by the judgment-debtor to the warrant officer arresting him in execution of a decree were held not to be distributable under Section 295 on the ground that such monies were not realised from the property of the judgment-debtor.<sup>10</sup>
- (b) Such assets as were realised by any process of execution expressly provided by the Code.<sup>11</sup> This was a wider interpretation than the one in (a) above. Thus, monies paid into Court under a prohibitory order under Section 268 (O. 21 R. 46), though not realised from the property of the judgment-debtor, are still recovered under a process of execution under the Code and were therefore held to be distributable assets under Section 295.<sup>12</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>13</sup>

Monies not realised in either of these two modes, namely, by a sale in execution of a decree or "otherwise in execution of a decree" were not assets distributable under Section 295 of the old Code.<sup>14</sup>

The substitution of the words "where assets are held by a Court" in the present Section for the words "whenever assets are realised by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree" which occurred in the old Section, makes the Section very much wider than before.<sup>15</sup> The words "assets held by a Court" will now include —

2. all monies obtained in any manner whatsoever by the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree under execution, for the purpose of satisfying the said decree.<sup>17</sup>

In order that Section 73 may apply, it is not therefore now necessary that the receipt of assets should have been under a process of execution, but it is still necessary that the assets should have reached the hands of the Court in execution, i. e., on the execution side.<sup>18</sup> For example, O. 21 R. 1 provides that all monies payable under a decree shall be paid into the Court whose duty it is to execute the decree. A payment made by the judgment-debtor of the decree amount into Court is not one levied by any process in execution but is still one in execution. Such a deposit will, under the present Section, be "assets held by the Court."<sup>19</sup> Similarly, money paid by a judgment-debtor under O. 21 R. 55 though made for the satisfaction of a particular debt, is subject to rateable distribution under this Section.<sup>20</sup> On the other hand, money paid in Court to avoid arrest before judgment under Order 38,<sup>21</sup> or money paid to the decree-holder out of Court under a private arrangement,<sup>22</sup> or money paid by a defendant into Court pending suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim,<sup>23</sup> or money paid into Court towards a decree, not against the judgment-debtor but against a third person,<sup>24</sup> are none of them obtained by the Court in execution and are not "assets held by the Court."

In Sorabji v. Kala Raghunath,<sup>25</sup> the Bombay High Court has however placed a very narrow construction on the words "assets held by the Court." The question there was, whether money paid into Court by a judgment-debtor under O. 21 R. 55 for payment of the amount due to the decree-holder who got the property attached was subject to rateable distribution. Scott, C. J., held that it was not, on the ground that the assets referred to in Section 73 should be assets received in the process of execution. This view has been followed by the Rangoon High Court<sup>26</sup> and by the Judicial Commissioners' Courts in Nagpur<sup>27</sup> and Sind.<sup>28</sup> In Ebji Umersey v. Graham & Co.,<sup>29</sup> which is also a case of the Bombay High Court, the question was whether money paid by the judgment-debtor under Section 55 (4) to the warrant officer arresting him, is an asset subject to rateable distribution. Macleod, J., sitting as a single Judge, held that it was not assets, on the ground that the Section was intended to apply to assets realised by the sale of the property attached.

The view of Scott, C. J., in Sorabji v. Kala Raghunath<sup>30</sup> has been expressly dissented from by the Madras, Calcutta and the Patna High Courts.<sup>31</sup> It has also been dissented from in later cases of the Bombay High Court itself. In Nathmal v. Moniram,<sup>32</sup> Pratt, J., while feeling himself bound as a single Judge to follow the decision of the appellate Bench in Sorabji v. Kala Raghunath,<sup>33</sup> disapproved of the view of Scott, C. J., expressed therein. In Indaji Majaji v. Cooverji Nowroji,<sup>34</sup> Mirza, J., though sitting as a single Judge, refused to follow the decision in Sorabji v. Kala Raghunath,<sup>35</sup> on the ground that the observations of Scott, C. J., in that case were obiter dicta. He entirely agreed with the dissentient views expressed by Pratt, J., in Nathmal v. Moniram.<sup>36</sup>

It is submitted that the decisions in Sorabji v. Kala Raghunath<sup>37</sup> and Ebji Umersey v. Graham & Co.,<sup>38</sup> have not appreciated or given effect to the deliberate change in the language of the Section<sup>39</sup> and in view of the considered opinions to the contrary both in the same and in the other High Courts, the view expressed in those decisions and followed in Rangoon, Nagpur and Sind cannot be accepted as a sound one.

In some decisions<sup>40</sup> the view has been expressed that where a payment has been made for a specific purpose or specifically towards a particular decree, the money so paid is not liable for rateable distribution. It is submitted that this view is not sound in view of the wide language of the Section. In Satnarain Prasad Choudhury v. Mahabir Prasad Choudhury,<sup>41</sup> Fazl Ali, J., observed as follows :

"Now Section 73 being imperative, it is obligatory upon a Court to distribute rateably the assets held by it (irrespective of how they came into its hands) among all the creditors who are entitled to the benefit of this Section. The assets are so distributable by the operation of law and there is nothing in this Section or any other provision of the Code to show that the Court must deal with them in accordance with the wishes of the judgment-debtor. When therefore there are several decrees outstanding against a judgment-debtor and all the requirements of Section 73 are complied with, the judgment-debtor cannot prevent rateable distribution by merely earmarking his payments for the benefit of one of the decree-holders."

"The money paid, with whatever motive, if paid to the Court, is paid upon terms of the Code whatever they may be. Those terms, as I read Section 73, have been laid down so that distinction in the form in which execution has been had, in the precise extent to which execution has been allowed to run, in the exact source or genesis of the fund in Court, are now no part of the definition of the assets that are subject to distribution rateably. The object of the new Code in using larger language can only be to avoid anomaly. To introduce a distinction on the strength of the voluntariness of the payment or the purpose of the debtor, is, I think, to cut down the language and intention of the Code upon a principle which is inapplicable to the subject-matter and which if applicable is very difficult to imply."

But, where a judgment-debtor has already assigned certain property to a particular decree-holder or created a charge on a certain property in favour of a particular decree-holder, such property is not liable to the claims of other decree-holders, for rateable distribution.<sup>43</sup> Similarly, where the assets in the Court represent security given for the satisfaction of a particular decree, the holders of other decrees are not entitled to rateable distribution out of such assets, the reason being that in such a case the decree-holder for whose benefit security has been given gets a lien on the assets for the satisfaction of his decree.<sup>44</sup>

It has been held by the Bombay High Court<sup>45</sup> that where the assets held by the Court are derived from property which is not liable to be proceeded against in execution of the decree under which the claim for rateable distribution is made, the holder of such decree will not be entitled to share in such assets. But the decision of the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court cited below<sup>46</sup> is inconsistent with this view.

Notes 4-6

It is submitted that the above view of the Bombay High Court does not seem to be warranted by the language of the Section.

As to claims for rateable distribution in cases where a decree-holder is allowed to purchase property in execution of his own decree and to set off the purchase money against the decretal amount, see O. 21 R. 72, Note 5.

As to whether money deposited under O. 21 R. 89 for setting aside an execution sale is liable for rateable distribution, see Note 23 to O. 21 R. 89, infra.

5. What are assets. — See Note 4 above.

6. Claimant for rateable distribution and attaching decree-holder must be holders of decrees for the payment of money. — As already noticed in Note 3 above, it is one of the essential conditions for the applicability of the Section that the claimants for rateable distribution and the attaching decree-holder must be holders of decrees for the payment of money. Thus, persons in whose favour orders for the payment of money are passed are not entitled to the benefit of this Section.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the definition of decree does not include an order.

As a general rule, every decree by virtue of which money is payable is to that extent a "decree for money."<sup>2</sup> Thus, a decree for the payment of mesne profits is a "decree for the payment of money" within the meaning of the Section. It is not necessary that the amount of mesne profits should have been ascertained; it is enough if the decree-holder has applied under O. 21 R. 42.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that O. 21 R. 42 referred to above treats the attachment as a proceeding in execution of the decree and the application for attachment may, therefore, be treated as one for execution. Similarly, a judgment entered up under Section 86 of the Insolvent Debtor's Act is a "decree for the payment of money."<sup>4</sup>

There has, however, been a conflict of opinion as to whether a mortgage decree is a "decree for the payment of money" and whether such a decree-holder can claim rateable distribution under this Section.

In Hart v. Taraprasanna,<sup>5</sup> it was held by the Calcutta High Court in accordance with the general rule stated above that a holder of a mortgage decree or of any decree under which money was payable and other relief granted, was the holder of a "decree for the payment of money" within the meaning of the Section. In Vaidhianadaswamy v. Somasundaram,<sup>6</sup> a Full Bench of the Madras High Court held that a mortgage decree is one for the payment of money whether there is a direction to pay personally or not.<sup>7</sup> This view was also adopted by the Punjab Chief Court in the undermentioned case.<sup>8</sup> The Full Bench view has been distinguished in a later case<sup>9</sup> wherein it was held that where a mortgage decree expressly exempts the defendants from personal liability, it is not a money decree under the Section. High Court<sup>10</sup> and later decisions of the Calcutta High Court<sup>11</sup> distinguishing Hart v. Taraprasanna,<sup>5</sup> have held that a mortgage decree is not a decree for the payment of money even though it provides for the deficiency of the decree amount being realised, after sale of the hypotheca, personally from the mortgagor. The Lahore High Court also has in its recent decisions taken a similar view.<sup>12</sup>

It is submitted that the Madras view is not sound. The provisions of O. 21 R. 20 clearly show that the Legislature intended to make a distinction between a "mortgage decree" and "a decree for the payment of money."

A composite mortgage decree for sale including a personal decree for the balance is a decree for the payment of money within the meaning of this Section and the holder of such a composite decree is entitled to rateable distribution, when the net proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged properties fall short of the decretal amount.<sup>13</sup>

A personal decree obtained by a mortgagee independently of his mortgage,<sup>14</sup> or for interest due on the mortgage,<sup>15</sup> or for the balance due after the mortgaged property is sold<sup>16</sup> and found insufficient to satisfy the mortgage debt, are all decrees for the payment of money. Again, a decree for money personally against B and against the properties of C and D does not thereby lose its character as a money decree against B for the purpose of claiming rateable distribution of the assets of B held by the Court.<sup>17</sup>

A mortgagee may also waive his lien on the mortgaged property and content himself with a mere money decree. In such a case he will, as a money decree-holder, be entitled to claim rateable distribution.<sup>18</sup>

7. Such decrees should have been obtained against the same judgment-debtor. — The third condition for the applicability of the Section is that the decree should have been obtained against the same judgment-debtor.<sup>1</sup> Where X obtains a decree against A, and Y obtains a decree against B, the decrees are not against the same judgment-debtor even if A himself is a judgment-creditor of B.<sup>2</sup>

But it is not necessary that all the judgment-debtors in each of the several decrees should be identically the same.<sup>3</sup> It is sufficient if there is one judgment-debtor common to all the decrees.<sup>4</sup> Thus, where X gets a decree against A, Y a decree against A and B, and Z a decree against A, B and C, the decrees are all "against the same judgment-debtor" with respect to the assets of A held by the Court.<sup>5</sup> But if, in the illustration mentioned above, assets are realised from C or his property, X and Y are not entitled to claim rateable distribution.<sup>6</sup>

There will be a difference, however, in the extent of the share of the assets in which each of the decree-holders can claim rateable distribution according as the properties of the one common judgment-debtor or of such debtor and of others, are sold in execution. Thus, in the illustration mentioned above, if A's property is attached and sold, X, Y and Z will share rateably in the whole of the proceeds. If the properties of A and B are sold, X will share in the assets so far as it represents the share of A in the property. Y and Z will share in the whole of the proceeds. If the properties of A, B and C are sold, X will share in the assets representing the share of A in the property, Y will share in the assets which represent the shares of A and B in the property and Z will share in the whole proceeds.<sup>7</sup>

From the above, it is clear that where X obtains a decree against A, and Y obtains a decree against A and B and the properties of both A and B are sold in execution of Y's decree, X will only be entitled to a rateable distribution of the sale proceeds of A's share in the properties, A alone being the common judgment-debtor under both the decrees. But, where A and B constitute a joint Hindu family of which A is the manager and X obtains a decree against A as manager of the joint family and Y obtains a decree against both A and B eo nomine as members of the joint family, both A and B would be judgment-debtors under both the decrees and X will be entitled to a rateable distribution of the proceeds obtained by the sale of the entire family properties and not only to a rateable share in the proceeds obtained by the sale of A's share in the properties. The reason is that where a person is sued as manager of a joint Hindu family, it must be taken that he represents all the members of the family and they are constructively parties to the suit.<sup>8</sup>

Suppose X obtains a decree against A, a Hindu father and Y obtains a decree against A and his sons B and C, and suppose that the entire joint family properties belonging to A, B and C are sold in execution of Y's decree. Is X entitled to claim a share in the entire proceeds? In other words, are all the judgment-debtors to be considered to be the same under both the decrees? It has been held by the Madras High Court that it must be considered that both the decrees have been passed against the same judgment-debtors.<sup>9</sup> This view is founded on the ground that in such cases both the decrees are executable against the same properties, that a liberal construction should be adopted in regard to the words "same judgment-debtor" in this Section and that without unduly straining the language of the Section, decrees executable against the same properties may be treated as decrees passed against the same judgment-debtors.<sup>10</sup>

The words "same judgment-debtor" will not include a person who does not occupy the same character in all the decrees.<sup>11</sup> Thus, where X obtains a decree against A in his personal capacity and Y obtains a decree against him as heir of P, the two decrees are not against the same judgment-debtor.<sup>12</sup> Similarly, a decree against A in his personal capacity and a decree against a firm of which A is a partner are not decrees against the "same judgment-debtor."<sup>13</sup> The Calcutta High Court has, however, in the undermentioned decisions<sup>14</sup> taken the view that a decree obtained against a person as the heir of a deceased person and another decree obtained against him in his personal capacity are decrees against the same judgment-debtor within the meaning of the Section. Similarly, the same High Court has held in the undermentioned decision<sup>15</sup> that a decree passed against a firm is really one against the individuals constituting the firm and hence, the judgment-debtor under a decree against a firm and under a decree against the individuals constituting the firm are the same for the purpose of this Section.

A decree is passed against A during his lifetime. Another decree is passed against A's heirs after A's death. Are the two decrees against the same judgment-debtor? On this question, there is a conflict of decisions. The High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>16</sup> Bombay<sup>17</sup> and Calcutta<sup>18</sup> have held that in such cases the decrees are not against the same judgment-debtor notwithstanding the fact that both the decrees are founded on a liability of the deceased. But, the Madras High Court has, in a recent Full Bench decision,<sup>19</sup> held that the decrees are not against the same judgment-debtor. The Madras view proceeds on the ground that it is not necessary under this Section that the several decrees must be against the same persons eo nomine and that decrees which are capable of execution against the same estate may, without unduly straining the language of the Section, be regarded as passed against the same persons.

Where A and D each obtained a decree against B, and after B's death C who was the legal representative of B purchased A's decree with monies not belonging to B's estate, C is not disentitled to claim rateable distribution, along with D, by reason only of his being the legal representative of B.<sup>20</sup>

Section 73 Note 8

8. Claimant for rateable distribution must have applied for execution to the Court by which assets are held. — In order to claim rateable distribution, a decree-holder must have applied under O. 21 R. 11 of the Code for execution of his decree.<sup>1</sup> Such an application is necessary, not only for the enforcement of his right to rateable distribution but also to control similar rights of rival decree-holders.<sup>2</sup> But it is not necessary for a decree-holder to make a specific application for rateable distribution.<sup>3</sup>

The application must be in form, and in substance one for execution.<sup>4</sup> A mere omission to give certain particulars or other technical defects will not invalidate an application for execution for the purposes of Section 73.<sup>5</sup> Nor is it necessary that attachment should be asked for or should follow the application for execution.<sup>6</sup> Where an application for execution is presented to the Court before the receipt of assets by the Court but being defective is returned and is re-presented only after the receipt of assets, the application must be deemed to have been validly made on the date on which it was originally presented, and is sufficient for the purpose of this Section.<sup>7</sup>

The following have been held not to be applications for execution, for the purposes of Section 73 —

- (1) An application merely for rateable distribution.<sup>8</sup>
- (2) An application merely for attachment of property without anything more.<sup>9</sup>
- (3) An application to a superior Court to transfer to itself, an execution case from an inferior Court.<sup>10</sup>
- (4) An application to a Court for an order to another Court not to sell properties.<sup>11</sup>
- (5) An application for payment out of Court, by a Judge's summons.<sup>12</sup>

Not only is an application for execution necessary, but such application must have been made to the Court, i. e., the Court which holds the assets.<sup>13</sup> Where all the decrees are of the same Court as the one which holds the assets, the application for execution must, of course, be made to that Court. But where the assets are held by Court A and the decree under which the claim for rateable distribution is being made has been passed by Court B, such claim cannot be allowed unless before the receipt of assets by Court A an application has been made to that Court for execution of the decree.<sup>14</sup> (This is the general rule. In cases coming under Section 63, ante, an application to the Court actually holding the assets is not necessary: see below.) This necessarily involves the condition that the decree must have been transferred to Court A, for unless the decree is transferred to that Court no application can be made to it for execution of the decree. (See Section 38 ante.) But, it is not necessary that the copy of the decree must have actually reached Court A. It is enough if Court B has ordered the transfer of the decree to Court A and the decree-holder has applied to that Court for execution before the receipt of assets by it.<sup>15</sup>

Suppose now that X obtains a decree in a superior Court against A and applies for execution there. Y obtains a decree against A in an inferior Court. Then —

- (1) If Y has not applied for execution of his decree either in the superior or in the inferior Court, he will not be entitled to rateable distribution with X.<sup>16</sup>
- (2) If he gets his decree transferred to the superior Court and applies for execution there, he will of course be entitled to participate in the rateable distribution.<sup>17</sup>
- (3) If he has applied for execution to the inferior Court, he may get his execution case transferred to the superior Court. This will practically amount to his applying to the superior Court itself for execution and, consequently, he need not apply again to the superior Court, for execution.<sup>18</sup>
- (4) If he has applied for execution to the inferior Court but has neither got his execution case transferred to the superior Court nor has applied to such Court for execution, is he entitled to rateable distribution along with X?

On this question, there is now a consensus of judicial opinion that where the same property of the judgment-debtor has been attached by both the superior and inferior Courts and the property or its proceeds are received or realised by the superior Court, Y will be entitled to a rateable share of such property or proceeds, although he has not applied for execution to such superior Court, nor has got his execution case transferred to such Court.<sup>19</sup> In some of the earlier decisions,<sup>20</sup> however, a contrary view was taken. But, this view being opposed to the trend of recent decisions in all the High Courts must be treated as being no longer good law. It will be seen that such cases will fall under Section 63 ante which runs as follows:

"Where property not in the custody of any Court is under attachment in execution of decrees of more Courts than one, the Court which shall receive or realize such property and shall determine any claim thereto and any objection to the attachment thereof shall be the Court of highest grade, or, where there is no difference in grade between such Courts, the Court under whose decree the property was first attached . . . . ."

The view that in the above case a fresh application to the superior Court is not necessary is chiefly based on the ground that Sections 63 and 73 must be read together, that the true view of Section 63 is that the receipt of assets by the superior Court in such cases is on behalf of all the Courts that have attached the property represented by the assets, and that therefore, the application to the inferior Court which has resulted in the attachment by that Court is really one to the Court by which the assets are received and held and as such is sufficient for the purposes of this Section.<sup>21</sup>

Certain decisions give some other reasons also:

- (a) In such cases, this Section does not apply at all and it is only Section 63 that applies and as that Section does not require any application for execution to be made to the superior Court by which assets are held, no such application is necessary.<sup>22</sup> It is submitted, this view is not correct. Section 63 merely points out the Court which shall determine the claims for rateable distribution in such cases, but does not lay down the circumstances under which such rateable distribution can be claimed. For the latter purpose, it is only Section 73 that must be seen.<sup>23</sup>

- (b) The expression "application to the Court" in this Section refers to an application to the appropriate Court and not necessarily to the Court by which assets are held.<sup>24</sup> This view, again, it is submitted, does not seem to be sound as that would entitle a decree-holder even in a case not covered by Section 63 to rateable distribution under this Section though he has not applied to the Court holding the assets for execution—a result not contemplated by any of the decisions which all seem to agree in the view that the Section requires an application for execution to be made to the Court which actually or constructively holds the assets.

It has been held by the Madras High Court that it is a general principle under Section 63 that where the same property is attached in execution of several decrees by several Courts against the same judgment-debtor, the receipt of assets by any one of such Courts is a constructive receipt by each of them so that the attaching decree-holder in each such Court is entitled to share rateably in such assets. So, even if the assets are held by a Court of an inferior grade, a decree-holder who has attached the property through a Court of a superior grade will be entitled to rateable distribution, although he has not applied for execution to the Court of the inferior grade.<sup>25</sup>

But where there is no application for execution made to the Court holding the assets before the receipt of such assets, and the claim for rateable distribution is only based on the applicant having attached the same property through another Court, he is not entitled to share rateably in all the assets held by the Court but only to share in that portion of it which represents the property attached by him.<sup>26</sup> The reason is that it is only in respect of such portion that the Court which has attached the property can be deemed to have constructively received the assets when the same are received by the distributing Court.

Illustration

A who has a decree for payment of money against J executes his decree in the Court of a particular Subordinate Judge and attaches and sells properties X, Y and Z, the proceeds of which are received by that Court. B, C and D who have decrees for the payment of money against J proceed to execute their respective decrees in other Courts, say, the first, second and third Court of the Munsif of a particular place, and attach respectively, X, Y and Z. These attachments are effected before the sale proceeds are received by the Subordinate Judge. They do not apply for execution of their decrees in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, nor are their executions transferred to that Court before the receipt of assets by that Court, but they bring the fact of the attachments to the notice of the Subordinate Judge. The entire proceeds of the sale of X, Y and Z cannot be distributed by the Subordinate Judge amongst A, B, C and D rateably under Section 63, but the proceeds of the sale of X have to be distributed rateably between A and B, those of Y between A and C and those of Z between A and D. But where before the receipt of the assets by the Court of the Subordinate Judge, B, C and D also apply to that Court for execution of their decrees after getting their decrees transferred to that Court, B, C and D would be entitled to share in the sale proceeds of all the properties X, Y and Z.<sup>27</sup>

Suppose A, B and C each obtain a money decree against D, respectively in Courts X, Y and Z. X and Y are Courts of the same grade and Z is a Court of a higher grade than either X or Y. A attaches certain property belonging to the judgment-debtor in execution of his decree through Court X. C attaches the same property in execution through Court Z. The property is sold and the sale proceeds are held by Court Z. In such a case, it has been seen above that A will be entitled to rateable distribution of the assets although he has not applied for execution to Court Z. Is B who has neither attached the property through Court Y nor applied for execution to Court Z entitled to a rateable share of such assets? It has been held by the Nagpur High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>28</sup> that B is entitled to a rateable share. The decision proceeds on the ground that in such a case the rateable distribution takes place under Section 63 which confers upon Court Z the power to determine all claims to the attached property including claims for rateable distribution and that under that Section the word "claims" does not mean merely claims of persons who have attached the property. It is submitted that the decision cannot be supported. As already pointed out, it is not a correct view to hold that in such cases Section 63 alone applies and that a reference to the provisions of Section 73 is not necessary. Under the latter Section an application to the Court holding the assets is necessary for making a claim for rateable distribution. But in the case of decree-holders who have already attached the property (from which the assets are derived) through Courts of inferior grade, a fresh application for execution to the Court of the superior grade which holds the assets is not necessary. The reason is that in such cases, the application to the Court of the inferior grade itself is to be treated as an application to the Court holding the assets, because the Court of the superior grade must be deemed to receive and hold the assets on behalf of all the Courts through whom the property has been attached. But this principle cannot apply to persons who have not attached the property through the inferior Court.

It has been held by the Bombay High Court<sup>29</sup> that the application for execution referred to by the Section is one which on the face of it is entitled to succeed. On this ground, it has been held that if the decree is on the face of it one which could not be executed against the property represented by the money in the Court, the Court cannot allow the holder of such decree to share in the rateable distribution of the money.<sup>30</sup>

For the purposes of Section 73 an ordinary Civil Court and the same Court invested with Small Cause powers are distinct Courts.<sup>31</sup> But where the decree of a District Munsif passed in the exercise of his ordinary jurisdiction is transferred for execution to the Small Cause side of the Subordinate Court, the holder of the decree so transferred is entitled to claim a share in the assets realised by the Subordinate Judge's Court in execution of a Small Cause decree as if both the proceedings are in the same Court.<sup>32</sup>

9. Effect of dismissal of the application for execution.—To entitle a decree-holder to claim rateable distribution it is essential that there should be a subsisting decree<sup>1</sup> and that his application for execution should be pending and undisposed of at the time of the receipt of the assets.<sup>2</sup> If the application had been struck off or dismissed before such date, he cannot participate in the distribution.<sup>3</sup> It has, however, been held that although there may be a formal order dismissing an application for execution, where such order is not a judicial order but only an order for administrative or statistical purposes, the application must be deemed to be pending notwithstanding such dismissal and the applicant will be entitled to rateable distribution of the assets received subsequently.<sup>4</sup> But, where an execution application has been struck off as wholly infructuous, it cannot be said to be pending merely because the attachment has been ordered to continue.<sup>5</sup> A dismissal of the application after the date of the receipt of assets will not affect the right to rateable distribution which had accrued to the decree-holder earlier at the time of the receipt of assets.<sup>6</sup>

11. The application should have been made before the receipt of assets by the Court. — It has been seen in Note 1 above that the words "before the receipt of assets" have in the present Section been substituted for the words "prior to the realisation" in the old Section. The change was effected with a view to make the meaning perfectly clear and to avoid the necessity of judicial interpretations such as those given to the word "realisation" under the old Code.<sup>1</sup>

In order to claim rateable distribution, a decree-holder must have applied for execution before the receipt of assets by the Court.<sup>2</sup> It, therefore, becomes important to ascertain the exact point of time at which assets are received by the Court.

The Section only requires that there must be an application for execution before the assets are received. It does not prescribe "any period" within the meaning of Section 10 of the General Clauses Act for the making of such application. Hence that Section does not apply to such cases and when assets are received by the Court during the vacation, an application for execution presented on the re-opening day cannot be considered to be in time for the purpose of this Section.<sup>3</sup>

Assets will be deemed to be received by the Court when they are received —

1. by the Court itself, or,
2. by a receiver appointed by the Court in execution,<sup>4</sup> or,
3. by the officer conducting an execution sale under O. 21 R. 65,<sup>5</sup> or,
4. by the Collector holding a sale under Schedule 3 of the Code.<sup>6</sup>

In the first case the date of receipt is, of course, the actual date on which the money is received by the Court. In the other three cases, the date of receipt will be the date on which the several officers receive the amount and not the date on which those officers send the money to the Court.<sup>7</sup>

Now the several classes of cases in which assets may be received by the Court and the dates on which such assets will be deemed to have been "received" may be considered :

- (a) Where a fund belonging to the defendant is attached before judgment and the same is deposited in Court to the credit of that suit, it does not become assets until the plaintiff, after getting a decree, applies for execution and the same is ordered by the Court. The date of receipt of assets is the date of the order.<sup>8</sup> If, in the above case, the fund attached is lying in Court to the credit of a suit, other than the one in which it is attached, it is further necessary that the fund should be transferred to the credit of the suit in which it is attached. The date of receipt of assets will, in such a case, be the date of the transfer.<sup>9</sup>

Illustration

A files a suit against B and attaches before judgment certain piecegoods belonging to him. The goods are sold by order of the Court under O. 39 R. 6 and the sale proceeds deposited into Court to the credit of A's suit. C, another creditor, files a suit against B and attaches before judgment the money in deposit in A's suit. He then obtains a decree and applies for execution. The application for execution is ordered but the fund is not transferred to the credit of C's suit. Subsequent to this A obtains a decree in his suit and applies for execution and the same is ordered. Is A entitled to rateable distribution along with C? Yes. The reason is that the fund did not become assets in C's suit, as it was not transferred to the credit of his suit, but became assets in A's suit when A's application for execution was ordered, since the fund was already lying to the credit of A's suit.<sup>10</sup>

But, it has been held by the Patna High Court that where a fund in Court to the credit of the judgment-debtor in some other matter, is attached by a decree-holder in execution of his decree, the money must be treated as "received" by the Court in execution of the decree as soon as it is so attached although there is no entry in the books transferring the money to the credit of the suit in which the decree has been passed.<sup>11</sup>

- (b) Where the amount belonging to the judgment-debtor in the hands of a third person is attached by a prohibitory order under O. 21 R. 46 and the garnishee deposits the amount in Court under O. 21 R. 46 (3), the date of the receipt of assets will be the date on which the garnishee makes the deposit.<sup>12</sup> A decree-holder who applies for execution after the deposit, though on the same day as the deposit, will not be entitled to claim rateable distribution, as he did not apply "before the receipt of assets by the Court."<sup>13</sup>
- (c) Where moveable property of the judgment-debtor is sold in execution, the date of receipt of assets is the date on which the sale proceeds are received by the Court. If the property is sold in several parcels the assets will be deemed to be received on the several dates on which the sale proceeds of the several parcels are respectively paid. Thus, a decree-holder who applies for execution after the sale of parcels 1 and 2, but before the sale of parcels 3 and 4, will be entitled to rateable distribution of the sale proceeds of parcels 3 and 4, but not of parcels 1 and 2.<sup>14</sup>

- (d) Where immovable property of the judgment-debtor is sold in a single lot in execution of a decree, the assets will be deemed to be received, not on the date when the deposit of 25 per cent. of the purchase money is paid under O. 21 R. 84, but on the date when the balance of the purchase money is paid. Thus, a decree-holder who applies for execution after the 25 per cent. deposit is made but before the balance is paid is entitled to come in under Section 73,<sup>15</sup> while one who applies after the balance is paid will not be so entitled, even if his application is before the date of the confirmation of the sale.<sup>16</sup>
- (e) Where immovable property of the judgment-debtor is sold in several lots in execution of a decree, there is a conflict of opinion as to whether the assets are deemed to be received, when the entire amount of the purchase money in respect of all the parcels are paid, or whether they are deemed to be received on the several dates on which the sale proceeds of the several lots are respectively paid into Court. The Madras High Court and the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court have taken the former view.<sup>17</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>18</sup> the Calcutta High Court followed the decision of the Madras High Court, but in a later case<sup>19</sup> they have adopted the latter view. This later Calcutta case does not refer to the earlier case of the same High Court or to the decision of the Madras High Court. Nor does it give any reasons for its view. In view of the fact that the word 'assets' means, in such a case as this, the proceeds realised by one order of sale,<sup>20</sup> the later decision of the Calcutta High Court does not seem to be based on sound principle.
- (f) As to when assets are deemed to be realised in cases where permission to bid and set-off is given to a decree-holder, see Note 5 to O. 21 R. 72.
- (g) Where in pursuance of an order passed by a superior Court under Section 63 ante, assets realised in execution by an inferior Court are transferred to the superior Court, the assets are deemed to have been received within the meaning of this Section, when they are received by the superior Court and not when they are received by the inferior Court.<sup>21</sup>

Where the receipt of assets and the application for execution are made on the same day, there is no presumption as to the order of events and it is the duty of the distributing Court to determine the question of priority.<sup>23</sup>

11a. "And have not obtained satisfaction thereof." — Where the decree of any of the claimants for rateable distribution has been partially satisfied, only the unsatisfied portion of the decree should be taken into account in considering the question of rateable distribution.<sup>1</sup> Even if the partial satisfaction of the decree takes place after the application for rateable distribution has been made, such partial satisfaction must be taken into account.<sup>2</sup> In other words, rateable distribution should be made according to the amount due to each decree-holder at the time of the distribution.<sup>3</sup>

12. Jurisdiction of Court to inquire into the validity of the decree under which rateable distribution is claimed.—A and B obtain decrees for money against C and apply for execution before the assets are received by the Court. In the proceedings for rateable distribution A contends that B's decree is collusive, fraudulent and is otherwise invalid. Can the Court go into this question? There is a preponderance of judicial opinion to the effect that the Court cannot go into the question.<sup>1</sup> The view is based on the ground that the Court distributing the assets is only an executing Court and as such cannot question the decree.<sup>2</sup> In Dattatraya Govindseth v. Purshottam Narayanseth,<sup>3</sup> Macleod, C. J., observed as follows: "On general principles, the Court which would be merely a distributing agency would not have any power to deal with the question whether any of the decrees had been obtained by fraud or other improper means just as in an ordinary case of execution the Court which executes the decree cannot go behind the decree." But the question as to the validity of the decree can be gone into in a suit under sub-section 2 of the Section.<sup>4</sup>

Though an executing Court acting under this Section cannot question the validity of a decree under which a claim for rateable distribution is being made, yet, where on the face of it such decree is inexecutable against the property from which the assets held by the Court are derived, the Court cannot grant the claim for rateable distribution.<sup>5</sup> by the subsequent adjudication of the judgment-debtor as an insolvent.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that from the time of the order of rateable distribution, the money must be treated as belonging, not to the judgment-debtor but to the decree-holders in whose favour the order was passed. The Official Receiver could, therefore, no more recover the money from the Court which passed the order than from the decree-holder.<sup>2</sup> As regards realisations subsequent to the vesting order, however, they will vest in the Official Receiver or Assignee and will not be available for rateable distribution.<sup>3</sup>

An application for rateable distribution presented by an insolvent (in regard to a decree passed in his favour before his adjudication) after adjudication and before his discharge is competent.<sup>4</sup>

15. Sale subject to mortgage — Mortgagee cannot get rateable distribution — Proviso (a). — Where a property is sold in execution of a money decree subject to a mortgage, the mortgagee is really not affected by such sale, but retains his rights to proceed against the property in enforcement of his mortgage.<sup>1</sup> He will not, therefore, as a mortgagee, be entitled to share in the proceeds of the sale along with other decree-holders.<sup>2</sup> If, however, he holds also a money decree, he is not barred from sharing, as a money decree-holder, in the rateable distribution.<sup>3</sup> He can also waive his right on the mortgage and claim to participate in the assets as a money decree-holder.<sup>4</sup> See Note 6 above.

A sale subject to a mortgage means a sale expressly made subject to the mortgage, i. e., by the certificate of sale.<sup>5</sup>

been validly held by the Court.<sup>3</sup> Where a private alienation is made with the sanction of the executing Court, this proviso does not apply.<sup>4</sup>

Notes 16-17

The consent of the mortgagee is necessary for a sale under this proviso. A sale without notice to the mortgagee and without his consent will not prejudice his rights in any way.<sup>5</sup> If the mortgagee consents but the fact of mortgage or the amount of mortgage money is disputed, the Court should make a summary enquiry under O. 21, R. 66 (4) and state the result of the inquiry in the proclamation of sale.<sup>6</sup>

An order for sale under this proviso must have specific reference as to the person from whose encumbrance it will be sold free and there must be express direction or notice to purchasers that the property is to be so sold.<sup>7</sup>

Where a property is sold under this proviso the auction-purchaser becomes the absolute owner thereof, the mortgagee's rights being transferred to the sale proceeds in Court.<sup>8</sup> But the mortgagee cannot thereby obtain an order for payment of the amount due to him under the mortgage.<sup>9</sup> He must enforce his rights by way of suit.<sup>10</sup>

The words "any property" in clauses (a) and (b) of the proviso, as contradistinguished from "immovable property" in clause (c), shows that a mortgage of moveables is included therein.<sup>11</sup>

17. Sale in execution of decree on mortgage — Mode of applying the sale proceeds — Proviso (c). — This proviso applies only where any immovable property is sold in execution of a decree ordering its sale for the discharge of an incumbrance thereon.<sup>1</sup> The words "an incumbrance" mean only the incumbrance sued on and not other incumbrances.<sup>2</sup> A exocutes a first mortgage in favour of X, a second mortgage in favour of Y and a third mortgage again in favour of X. X sues on the first mortgage, obtains a decree and sells the property. Y applies for payment to him out of the surplus remaining after the first mortgage sued on is paid off. He is entitled to be so paid in priority to the third mortgage of X.<sup>3</sup> But the words of the proviso are general and apply not only to a pre-existing incumbrance, i.e. an incumbrance existing independently of the decree ordering the sale of the property but also to an incumbrance which is created by the decree itself, as for instance, a charge created by the decree ordering

the sale of the property in enforcement of such charge.<sup>4</sup> After discharging the interest and principal money due on the mortgage in discharge of which the sale is held, the surplus proceeds are to be applied in discharging the amounts due on subsequent incumbrances, if any, and not of prior incumbrances.<sup>5</sup> If there are several subsequent incumbrances, the proceeds are to be applied in satisfaction of such incumbrances according to their priority.<sup>6</sup> The amount due under the subsequent incumbrances must have been ascertained.<sup>7</sup>

If, even after the payment of subsequent incumbrances, there is a surplus, it should be applied rateably between the money decree-holders. These latter should, as the proviso says, have applied for execution of their decrees prior to the sale of the property.<sup>8</sup> Where there is a competition between an incumbrancer and a money decree-holder, the Court should satisfy itself that the former is lawfully entitled to priority over the latter.<sup>9</sup> An incumbrance, for instance, which came into existence pending an attachment by a money decree-holder, cannot be given priority over the latter.<sup>10</sup>

Where a sale takes place in execution of a mortgage decree, the sale cannot be stopped as soon as the amount of the mortgage decree is realised. ('83) AIR 1933 Pat 277 (278).

Court. C, the second mortgagee, who was not made a party to B's second suit, then files a suit against B for recovery of the amount withdrawn by B on the ground that he is entitled to a prior charge thereon. Such a suit is not one under clause (2).<sup>4</sup> The reason is that the assets after paying B's first decree were payable to subsequent incumbrancers in order of priority and not rateably.

In the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> it was doubted by the Oudh Chief Court whether, in view of the language of the clause, it applies to cases where the right of the person, who has been paid the assets, to receive rateable assets is not denied.

In a suit for refund under clause (2) it is for the Court to decide whether, having regard to all the equities between the parties, the plaintiff will be entitled to recover or not.<sup>6</sup> And, in order to enable the Court to adjudicate upon and settle effectually and completely all the questions involved, it is necessary that all the decree-holders who have obtained rateable distribution should be impleaded as parties to the suit.<sup>7</sup>

A suit under this clause is not one for setting aside the order for distribution<sup>8</sup> and therefore need not be brought within one year from the date of the order under Article 13 of the Limitation Act.<sup>9</sup> It is virtually a suit for money had and received and can be brought within three years from the date of the receipt of the assets by the defendant.<sup>10</sup> The cause of action for the suit is the wrongful receipt by the defendant and, consequently, a suit does not lie where merely an order for payment is made, but the money is not actually paid.<sup>11</sup>

Where the dispute arising under clause (2) arises between the judgment-debtor on the one hand and the decree-holder or decree-holders on the other, it has been held by the Calcutta High Court that the matter falls under Section 47 of the Code and that a suit is consequently barred.<sup>12</sup> Where, however, the dispute is between rival decree-holders, Section 47 will not apply and the suit is not barred.<sup>13</sup>

The Calcutta<sup>14</sup> and Allahabad<sup>15</sup> High Courts have held that a suit of this nature is not cognisable by a Court of Small Causes. The Madras High Court, on the other hand, has held that it is cognisable.<sup>16</sup> expression "to compel him to refund the assets" in this clause, was inclined to hold that the plaintiff cannot ask for interest on the assets till the date of the suit.

19. Priority of debts — Clause (3). — It has been seen in Note 2 above that under Sections 270 and 271 of the Code of 1859 the creditor who first attached the property had a statutory priority, over the others, to have his debt satisfied in full.<sup>1</sup> It has also been seen that the law was changed by the Code of 1882 and that now all the decree-holders are placed on the same footing regardless of the order of attachment.<sup>2</sup> A obtains a decree personally against B. C obtains a decree against B making him liable to the extent of the assets of his father in his hands. C cannot claim any priority against A.<sup>3</sup>

In cases not coming under Section 73 but under O. 21 R. 52 as, for instance, in a case where assets have been received before any of the contending decree-holders have applied for execution, there is a conflict of decisions as to whether such assets are liable to rateable distribution. As to this, see Note 6 to O. 21 R. 52.

In the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> a patnidar brought to sale a darpatni tenure in execution of a decree for arrears of rent of such tenure. After satisfaction of the decree, the surplus proceeds were left in Court. The patnidar then obtained another decree against the same darpatnidar for arrears of rent accruing for a subsequent period in respect of the same tenure. It was held that the patnidar had no further lien for rent after the sale of the darpatni tenure, that the decree for rent in his favour was only a money decree, and that he was not entitled to any priority in respect of such decree, and that the surplus sale proceeds in Court were liable to be divided rateably among all persons who had taken out execution of money decrees against the same judgment-debtor and had not obtained satisfaction.

It is a general principle of law that claims of the Crown or State are entitled to precedence over all other claims.<sup>5</sup> A judgment-debt due to the Crown is entitled to priority over all other decrees.<sup>6</sup> But the clause does not confer any jurisdiction on the executing Court to entertain a claim on behalf of the Government in the absence of any decree in support of it.<sup>7</sup> In Oudh Commercial Bank Ltd. v. Secretary of State,<sup>8</sup> Bhide, J., of the Lahore High Court observed as follows :

"I am unable to see that this sub-section confers any jurisdiction on the executing Court to entertain a claim on behalf of the Government in the absence of any decree in support of it. The sub-section only saves the rights of the Government, independent of the Section, such as they might be and merely appears to have reference to the right of priority which can be ordinarily claimed in respect of debts due to the Crown."

Notes 19-22

But, where certain moveable property of the judgment-debtor was attached by the Court and was in the custody of the Court and the Collector attached such property under Section 46 sub-section 2 of the Income-tax Act of 1922 in enforcement of the claim of the Crown for income-tax against the judgment-debtor, it was held that the matter was governed by O. 21 R. 52 and that the Crown was entitled to priority and that the income-tax must be paid in preference to the claims of the persons holding decrees against the judgment-debtor.<sup>9</sup>

A debt due to a co-operative society under Section 19 of the Co-operative Societies Act is entitled to no priority as such over other judgment-debts and the society cannot make any claim under Section 73 unless it gets a decree or a charge under Section 20 and applies for execution as in the case of other creditors.<sup>10</sup>

The costs of realisation of the assets will have to be paid in priority to the other debts. The words "costs of realisation" do not, however, include a previous mortgage amount paid off by the decree-holder.<sup>11</sup>

20. Debts due to the Crown. — See Note 19.

21. Debts due to Co-operative Society. — See Note 19.

22. Mode of distribution. — In practice difficulties may arise as to the actual working out of the rateable distribution between the various decree-holders. The following illustrations will make the matter clear :

Illustrations

1. X and Y obtain decrees for the recovery of Rs. 1000 each against two brothers A and B. M and N obtain decrees for Rs. 800 and 600 respectively against B alone. All the decree-holders attach the joint family property belonging to A and B. The property is sold in execution and the sale proceeds Rs. 1600 are received in Court. How is the amount to be distributed? So far as B is concerned it must be taken that only his interest, namely, one-half, in the property was sold. . . . The principle of distribution to be adopted is as follows:—Divide the sale proceeds into two halves, distribute one-half, namely Rs. 800, belonging to A between X and Y each being given Rs. 400. The decree amounts now due to X and Y must for purposes of further distribution be taken to be Rs. 600 each. B's half share, viz. Rs. 800, must now be rateably distributed between X, Y, M and N in the proportion of 600 : 600 : 800 : 600.<sup>1</sup>

2. X obtains a decree against the estate of F in the hands of A, B and C who represent only three-fourths of the estate of F. Y obtains a decree against the same estate in the hands of all the heirs. The property is sold in execution of Y's decree, and X applies for rateable distribution. The amount to be rateably distributed between X and Y is only three-fourths of the amount recovered in execution of Y's decree.<sup>2</sup>

Rateable distribution should be made according to the amount due to each decree-holder at the time of distribution.<sup>4</sup> See also Note 11a, ante.

Notes 22a-24

22a. Appropriation of amount received by way of rateable distribution.

— A decree-holder is not entitled to appropriate the sum he receives by way of rateable distribution in any way he likes. What he receives goes towards the payment of every rupee of his debt.<sup>1</sup>

Illustration

A obtains a decree against B and C. The decree awards A a certain sum of money payable by B and also a further sum by way of costs payable by B and C. A receives a certain sum by way of rateable distribution under the decree. A is not entitled to appropriate the whole of this amount towards the amount of the decree proper and proceed against C for the entire amount of the costs on the footing that such amount has not been reduced by the rateable share received. Both the items in the decree debt must be deemed as reduced pro tanto.<sup>2</sup>

23. Application for rateable distribution is one for a step-in-aid of execution. — It has been seen in Note 8 above that a mere application for rateable distribution is not one for execution. Such an application however can be a step-in-aid of execution under Article 182 of the Limitation Act.<sup>1</sup>

24. Appeal. — An order under this Section is not appealable as an order.<sup>1</sup> It will be appealable as a decree if the conditions of Section 47 are satisfied.<sup>2</sup> Where such an order determines questions between parties, i. e., between the judgment-debtor on the one hand, and the decree-holder on the other, it will fall under Section 47 and become appealable as a decree.<sup>3</sup> It follows that an order determining a question between rival decree-holders will not be appealable as a decree<sup>4</sup> unless such question is also one between the judgment-debtor and the decree-holders, in which case it would be appealable.<sup>5</sup> So also, an order under the Section which affects not only the rival decree-

25. Revision. — A wrong order of distribution can be contested in a suit under clause (2). This other remedy being open, the High Courts will not, as a general rule, interfere in revision in such cases.<sup>1</sup> This, however, does not mean that they cannot interfere in revision.<sup>2</sup> Where the lower Court acts without jurisdiction or declines to exercise jurisdiction,<sup>3</sup> or the remedy by suit is so inconvenient as to practically amount to no remedy,<sup>4</sup> or is manifestly wrong,<sup>5</sup> or the result of the suit, if brought, would be definite success,<sup>6</sup> a revision will lie. Where the Court sets aside the order, it can order the amount wrongly paid to be returned to Court.<sup>7</sup>

RESISTANCE TO EXECUTION

74. [S. 330.] Where the Court is satisfied that the holder of a decree for the possession of immoveable property or that the purchaser of immoveable property sold in execution of a decree has been resisted or obstructed in obtaining possession of the property by the judgment-debtor or some person on his behalf and that such resistance or obstruction was without any just cause, the Court may, at the instance of the decree-holder or purchaser, order the judgment-debtor or such other person to be detained in the civil prison for a term which may extend to thirty days and may further direct that the decree-holder or purchaser be put into possession of the property.

[1877, S. 330; 1859, S. 228. See O. 21 Rr. 97 to 103.]

2. Scope of the Section.
3. "Decree for the possession."
4. Resistance must be by judgment-debtor or some other person on his behalf.
5. What is resistance.
6. Possession.
7. Appeal.

1. Legislative changes. — These are referred to and discussed in their appropriate places in the Notes below.

2. Scope of the Section. — The corresponding Section of the old Code related entirely to decrees for possession.<sup>1</sup> The scope of the Section has now been widened by making it applicable to cases where a court auction-purchaser is resisted or obstructed in obtaining possession of the property purchased by him.

The old Section contained the words "without prejudice to any penalty to which such judgment-debtor or other person may be liable under the Indian Penal Code or any other law for such resistance or obstruction." These words have been omitted in the present Section apparently as being unnecessary. The law, it is conceived, must be regarded as being the same under the present Section, notwithstanding the said omission.

In addition to the powers which Courts have under the ordinary law to punish disobedience of judicial orders, the High Courts in India can enforce obedience to their orders by taking proceedings for contempt.<sup>2</sup>

For detailed provisions, see O. 21 Rr. 97 to 103.

2. ('88) 7 Bom 1 (4). (Authority conferred on High Court by Charters and Letters Patent.)

3. "Decree for the possession." — A decree for partition is a decree for possession within the meaning of this Section.<sup>1</sup> For further Notes, see Section 16, ante.

Section 74
Notes 3-7

4. Resistance must be by judgment-debtor or some other person on his behalf. — Under the old Code the resistance must be by the judgment-debtor himself or some other person at his instigation.<sup>1</sup> Under the present Section it is enough if the resistance is by or on behalf of the judgment-debtor.

A person who, on behalf of the judgment-debtor, obstructs the decree-holder in obtaining possession, is not a party to the suit within the meaning of Section 47.<sup>2</sup>

5. What is resistance. — In cases arising under the Penal Code it has been held that a mere oral statement claiming to be the owner of certain property attached by a bailiff in execution of a decree that he would not allow the bailiff to take hold of the property unless he entered it as his property, does not amount to such resistance as is contemplated by the Penal Code,<sup>1</sup> but that if such a protest is accompanied by a threat of violence if the bailiff persisted in removing the property, it would amount to resistance.<sup>2</sup>

6. Possession. — The word "possession" is not limited to actual physical possession. The Section is exhaustive enough to cover cases of constructive possession such as that by a tenant.<sup>1</sup>

7. Appeal. — An appeal lies from an order of detention in jail under the Section. See Section 104 clause (h).

INCIDENTAL PROCEEDINGS

COMMISSIONS

Section 75

Power of Court to issue Commissions.

75. [New.] Subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed, the Court may issue a commission —

- (a) to examine any person;
- (b) to make a local investigation;
- (c) to examine or adjust accounts; or
- (d) to make a partition.

[See Order XXVI.]

5. Commission to make partitions. See O. 26 Rr. 13 to 18.

Other Topics (Miscellaneous)

As may be prescribed — Order 26. See Note 1.

No delegation of judicial functions to Commissioner. See Note 1.

1. Issue of commissions. — This Section is new and defines and limits the power of the Court to issue commissions. The detailed provisions are set forth in Order 26, but they do not amplify the scope of this Section.<sup>1</sup> Where, therefore, it is not necessary for the purposes set forth in the Section to issue a commission, it is not competent for the Court to do so.<sup>2</sup>

Though the Court has power to issue a commission, it cannot make over the whole case<sup>3</sup> or a material issue<sup>4</sup> to the Commissioner for trial on the merits. Nor should

This Section and Order 26 deal with cases in which a Commissioner is appointed either by the Court suo motu or on the application by either party. These provisions do not apply to cases in which the parties consent or agree to the appointment of a Commissioner for any particular purpose. Hence, where in a suit for infringement of copyright a Commissioner is appointed by the consent of both the parties to record evidence, the evidence recorded by the Commissioner is admissible in evidence although the case does not come under the Rules in Order 26. But, the opinion of the Commissioner is no evidence and cannot be considered by the Court.<sup>7</sup>

2. Commission to examine any person. — See O. 26 Rr. 1 to 8.

3. Local investigation. — A Court ought not to hold a local investigation with a view to gather information on which it may base its judgment, though it may inspect the locality with a view to understand the evidence. Where additional information is required, the proper course is to appoint a Commissioner whose report may be used in evidence and who may himself be examined as a witness.<sup>1</sup>

Where a matter has been referred to a Commissioner for local investigation, it is not safe for the Court to act as an expert and to overrule the report of the Commissioner whose integrity is unquestioned.<sup>2</sup>

For further notes, see O. 26 Rr. 9 and 10.

4. Commission to examine accounts. — See O. 26 Rr. 11 and 12.

5. Commission to make partitions. — See O. 26 Rr. 13 to 18.

(2) Every Court receiving a commission for the examination of any person under sub-section (1) shall examine him or cause him to be examined pursuant thereto, and the commission, when it has been duly executed, shall be returned together with the evidence taken under it to the Court from which it was issued, unless the order for issuing the commission has otherwise directed, in which case the commission shall be returned in terms of such order.

1. Legislative changes.—The present Section was substituted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937, for the original Section 79, the change being necessitated by the Government of India Act, 1935 (25 & 26 Geo. V, Ch. 42). (See Sections 3 and 176 of that Act.) The old Section ran as follows :

"(1) Suits by or against the Government shall be instituted by or against the Secretary of State for India in Council.

"(2) Nothing in this Section shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect any information exhibited by the Advocate-General in exercise of the power declared by Section 111 of the East India Company Act, 1813."

It will be seen that under the old Section, all suits by or against the Government were to be instituted by or against the Secretary of State for India in Council. After the passing of the Government of India Act, 1935, such suits will fall under the three categories enumerated in clauses (a), (b) and (c) of the present Section and the Section has accordingly been changed so as to deal specifically with each such category.

2. Scope and applicability of the Section. — This Section declares the procedure where suits are to be brought by or against the Government; it does not deal with the question as to what are the claims and liabilities enforceable against the Government.<sup>1</sup> These must be determined only with reference to the provisions of the Government of India Act, 1935. (See Sections 172 to 180 of the Act.) The rule of procedure under this Section applies also to appeals.<sup>2</sup>

In India, Section 176 sub-section 1 of the Government of India Act 1935, provides as follows :—

"(1) The Federation may sue or be sued by the name of the Federation of India and a Provincial Government may sue or be sued by the name of the Province and, without prejudice to the subsequent provisions of this chapter, may, subject to any provisions which may be made by the Act of the Federal or Provincial Legislature enacted by virtue of powers conferred on that Legislature by this Act, sue or be sued in relation to their respective affairs in the like cases as the Secretary of State in Council might have sued or been sued if this Act had not been passed."

So, under the above sub-section, the test to see if a suit lies against the Crown is whether in the circumstances of the case, a suit would have lain against the Secretary of State for India in Council, if the Government of India Act of 1935 had not been passed. For this, Section 32 of the Government of India Act of 1915 must be seen. Sub-section 2 of that Section runs as follows :—

"Every person shall have the same remedies against the Secretary of State in Council as he might have had against the East India Company if the Government of India Act, 1858 and this Act had not been passed."

The above sub-section corresponds to the following provision in Section 65 of the Government of India Act of 1858 conferring the right of suit against the Government<sup>3</sup> :

"... all persons and bodies politic shall and may have and take the same suits, remedies and proceedings legal and equitable, against the Secretary of State in Council of India as they could have done against the said Company" (the East India Company).

The East India Company was engaged in transactions partly in the exercise of sovereign powers delegated to it by the Crown and partly on its own account, which, without delegation of sovereign powers might be carried on by private individuals.<sup>4</sup> Therefore, in so far as a person was aggrieved by an act done in the exercise of sovereign rights, the East India Company was liable in the same way as the Crown upon a petition of right. It follows that the Crown in India is also liable in respect of all such acts, that is, detention of land, chattels or money and breach of contract.<sup>5</sup> In respect of torts by its servants in the exercise of sovereign powers, the Company was not, and the Crown in India will not be, liable unless it had ordered or ratified the tortious act.<sup>6</sup> The reason is that the doctrine of principal and agent can apply where the acts done by the Officers of the Government are done in the performance of duties imposed by the Legislature, though the officers themselves are appointed by the Government; and in exercising or exceeding such authority they cannot be considered to have been the agents of the appointing authority so as to render the latter liable.<sup>7</sup> In so far as the East India Company was engaged in transactions on its own account, which, without delegation of sovereign right can be carried on by private individuals, it was liable like any other private individual. The Crown in India will consequently be liable in respect of those acts also which might be done by private individuals without the delegation of sovereign rights.<sup>8</sup>

It was held, before the Government of India Act of 1935, that contracts with the Secretary of State for India must conform to the provisions of Section 29 of the Government of India Act, 1915; and where they did not conform to such provisions they were not binding on the Secretary of State.<sup>9</sup> It is obvious that the same principle will also apply now and the Crown will not be liable under any contract unless such contract conformed to the provisions of the Government of India Act of 1935.

4. Act of State. — See Section 9 Note 57 “Acts of State.”

5. Suits against State Railways. — Before the passing of the Government of India Act of 1935, it was held that a suit against a State Railway must be brought against the Secretary of State for India in Council.<sup>1</sup> See now Section 185 of the Government of India Act of 1935.

6. Cases in which Government is a necessary party. — The rules governing the joinder of ordinary persons as parties would also apply to the joinder of the Government as a party.<sup>1</sup> Thus in a suit to set aside a sale under the Public Demands Recovery Act (Bengal Act 1 of 1895), the Government is in the position of a decree-holder and as such is a necessary party.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, in a suit to recover possession of a chur which had been leased by the Government to the defendant, the Government as claiming a proprietary right in the land is a necessary party.<sup>3</sup> See also the undermentioned cases<sup>4</sup> showing in what cases Government was held to be a necessary party and in what cases not.

7. Jurisdiction in suits against Government. — It was held, before the Government of India Act of 1935, that a suit against the Secretary of State for India could only be brought in the Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the cause of action arose and that the words "dwell," "carry on business" or "personally work for gain" which occur in Sections 16, 19 and 20 of the Code and Clause 12 of the Letters Patent, did not apply to the Secretary of State for India.<sup>1</sup> It is conceived that the same principle will apply to suits against the Crown after the passing of the above Act. (See Notes to Section 20.)

8. Form of suit against Government. — It was held, before the Government of India Act of 1935, that a suit against Government must be instituted against the Secretary of State for India in Council<sup>1</sup> and that it could not be brought against the "Secretary of State."<sup>2</sup> Where a suit was wrongly brought against an officer of the Government, it was held that the plaint should be amended by substituting the name "the Secretary of State for India in Council" for the name of the officer.<sup>3</sup> Under the Code of 1859, a suit against the Agent to the Governor-General on the part of the Government was held to be a suit substantially against the Government.<sup>4</sup>

In the undermentioned case,<sup>5</sup> a suit against the Government was dismissed and an appeal was filed against the decree dismissing the suit. The case was one in which under Section 179 sub-section 1 of the Government of India Act of 1935 the appeal should have been lodged against the Government of the Punjab or the Secretary of State. But the respondent to the appeal was named as the Secretary of State for India in Council. It was held that although this was inconsistent with the provisions of the above Section, the mere addition of the words "for India in Council" did not justify the dismissal of the appeal and it could only be construed as a misdescription of the respondent.

9. Information exhibited by the Advocate-General. — As seen in Note 1 ante, sub-section 2 of the old Section, which provided that nothing in the Section should be deemed to limit or otherwise affect any information exhibited by the Advocate-General in exercise of the power declared by Section 111 of the East India Company Act 1813,<sup>1</sup> has been omitted from the Section substituted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

10. Procedure in suits by or against the Government. — See Section 80 and Order XXVII.

1. Legislative changes. — See foot-notes (a) and (b) below the text of the Section.

2. Scope and object of the Section. — This Section, like Section 79, enacts only a rule of procedure<sup>1</sup> and does not affect the right to sue the Secretary of State for India in Council, which is given by the Government of India Act, 1935 (See Note 3 to Section 79 ante.)

The object of the Legislature in requiring the notice under this Section is to afford the defendant an opportunity to reconsider his position with regard to the claim made, and to make amends or settle the claim, if so advised, without recourse to the trouble and cost of litigation.<sup>2</sup>

The terms of the Section are imperative and admit of no exceptions or implications.<sup>3</sup> A suit, not complying with its provisions, cannot be entertained by any Court, and if instituted, must be rejected under O. 7 R. 11.<sup>4</sup> The provisions of the Section cannot be relaxed merely because the Crown or the public officer happens to be only one of several defendants.<sup>5</sup> Even where the Crown or the public officer is only a pro forma defendant, a notice under this Section is necessary.<sup>6</sup> But in the undermentioned cases,<sup>7</sup> the view was held that where a suit has been instituted against several defendants one of whom is the Crown or a public officer and notice under this Section has not been given, the whole suit is not bad but is bad only with reference to the Crown or the public officer.

The Section deals with two classes of cases —

- (1) Suits against the Crown.
- (2) Suits against Public Officers.

In the first class, notice under this Section must be given in all cases.<sup>8</sup> In the second class, notice under this Section is necessary only where the suit is in respect of any act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity.<sup>9</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Lahore that an application under Para. 17 of the Second Schedule of this Code is not a suit within the meaning of this Section, so as to be governed by its provisions.<sup>10</sup> See also Note 12 to Para. 20 of the Second Schedule, infra.

3. Applicability of the Section. — The provisions of this Section have been made inapplicable to the following cases —

- (1) Suits against the Official Trustee in which no relief is claimed against him personally. See Section 16 of the Official Trustees Act (II of 1913).
- (2) Suits against the Administrator-General in which no relief is claimed against him personally. See Section 41 of the Administrator-General's Act (III of 1913).
- (3) Suits of the class mentioned in Section 77 of the Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887). See Section 94 of that Act.

The provisions of this Section do not apply to a suit brought pursuant to an undertaking given under Section 14 of the Bombay City Land Revenue Act (II of 1876).<sup>1</sup>

Every suit instituted under Section 42 (5) of the Burma Forest Act (IV of 1902) is subject to the provisions of this Section.

4. Act of State. — See Note 57 Section 9, ante.

5. "Act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity." — In suits against public officers, notice under this Section is necessary only —

- (1) if the suit is in respect of any act done by such public officer, and
- (2) such act purports to have been done by such public officer in his official capacity.<sup>1</sup>

Where a suit is not in respect of any act done by the public officer, no notice is that this was limited to acts done negligently or inadvertently by the public officer and did not extend to acts done mala fide by him. The following cases,<sup>10</sup> on the other hand, have held that the Section applies to all acts of public officers whether done bona fide or mala fide. In Koti Reddi v. Subbiah,<sup>11</sup> it was held that the words "any act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity" mean any act intended to seem to be done by him in his official capacity. If, therefore, the act, whether done in good faith or not, was such as is ordinarily done by the officer in the course of his duties, and he desired that other persons should believe that he was so acting, the act is one purporting to be done by him in his official capacity within the meaning of the Section.<sup>12</sup> Having regard to the general principles of interpretation of statutes<sup>13</sup> and to the dictum of the Privy Council in Bhag Chand v. Secretary of State<sup>14</sup> that the Section does not admit of any implications or exceptions, the rulings referred to above which held that the act must be one done negligently or inadvertently cannot be considered to be good law.

But the words "act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity" will not cover acts which are outside the sphere of his duties.<sup>15</sup> Thus, where a public officer insults, uses defamatory language, or assaults his subordinate,<sup>16</sup> or an investigating police officer assaults a witness,<sup>17</sup> or a public officer seizes property which he has no authority to seize,<sup>18</sup> the acts cannot be considered to be "acts purporting to be done" by him in his official capacity and notice under this Section is not necessary.

9. Suits against Railway Administration. — The Indian Railways Act (IX of 1890) provides for notice of suit to be given in suits against the Railway Administration. See Sections 77 and 140 of that Act and the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup> Where, however, the Railway is administered by the Government, a notice under the Railways Act alone is not enough and will not be a substitute for the notice required under Section 80.<sup>2</sup> Conversely, in such cases, a notice under this Section alone will not be sufficient; a notice under the Railways Act also will be necessary.<sup>3</sup>

10. Notice is a condition precedent to the institution of the suit. — It has been seen in Note 2 above that the Section is mandatory and admits of no exceptions.<sup>1</sup> A Court is debarred from entertaining a suit instituted without complying with the requirements of the Section.<sup>2</sup> The only course open to the Court in a suit instituted without giving the notice required will be to reject it under Order 7 Rule 11.

11. Suits on contracts and suits for injunctions. — It was held by the High Court of Bombay in the undermentioned cases<sup>1</sup> that the Section has no application to suits founded on contracts. There was also a conflict of opinion in the various High Courts as to whether the Section applies to suits for injunctions.<sup>2</sup> It has now been authoritatively laid down by the Privy Council in Bhag Chand v. Secretary of

Notes 11-13

State<sup>3</sup> that the language of the Section is mandatory and admits of no implications or exceptions, that the Section is applicable to all forms of action and all kinds of relief, and that the view that the Section is inapplicable where the whole or part of the relief claimed is an injunction is not correct. But the decision of the Privy Council cannot be taken to mean that notice is necessary in every suit for injunction against the Secretary of State or a Public Officer,<sup>4</sup> without regard to the fact whether the other conditions necessary for the applicability of the Section are satisfied. Thus, the Section will apply only when the suit is in respect of an act done by the Secretary of State or the Public Officer. The words "act purporting to be done" cover only a past act, and do not include a future act threatened to be done. A suit therefore merely for an injunction, not based upon any past act of the Public Officer, is not within the scope of the Section and no notice is necessary in such a case.<sup>5</sup> But if the suit is laid on a past act of such Officer, the fact that an injunction is also prayed for will not take the case out of the operation of the Section.<sup>6</sup> The High Court of Lahore, however, seems to be of the opinion that the Privy Council decision will apply even to suits merely in respect of acts threatened to be done.<sup>7</sup>

12. Object of notice. — See Note 2 above.

13. Form and sufficiency of notice. — It is not necessary that the notice should be in any particular or technical form.<sup>1</sup> It should not be strictly construed as if it were a pleading and it need not set out all the details and facts of the case.<sup>2</sup> But it must substantially fulfil its object in informing the parties concerned generally of the nature of the suit intended to be filed.<sup>3</sup> Thus, it is essential that the notice should state the cause of action and the relief claimed;<sup>4</sup> the phrase "cause of action" need not in this connexion be narrowly construed and the notice is sufficient if it informs the defendant substantially of the ground of complaint.<sup>5</sup> Where a claim is made in the notice for a larger amount of money as due from the defendant, the fact that in the suit the claim is reduced to a smaller amount does not change the cause of action for the suit or make the notice invalid.<sup>6</sup> Where the cause of action has not arisen at all, a notice under the Section is not valid.<sup>7</sup> A notice which does not state the cause of action or the intention to file a suit,<sup>8</sup> or a notice merely objecting to, and asking for, the reconsideration of the order complained of,<sup>9</sup> or a mere objection to an entry in the settlement roll under the Bengal Tenancy Act,<sup>10</sup> or a mere report to the Deputy Commissioner,<sup>11</sup> will not constitute a valid notice under the Section.

It is also essential that the notice should state the names, descriptions and places of residence of all the plaintiffs.<sup>12</sup> But, there is a conflict of decisions as to whether a notice otherwise sufficient under the Section is invalid on the ground that it has not been given by all the plaintiffs. According to one view such notice is sufficient<sup>13</sup> while the other view is that such notice is not sufficient.<sup>14</sup>

A notice given by a pleader on behalf of his client is sufficient for the purpose of this Section.<sup>15</sup>

14. Service of notice. — As is clear from the language of the Section, a notice, in the case of the Secretary of State in Council, must be delivered to, or left at the office of a Secretary to the Local Government or the Collector of the District, and, in the case of a public officer, delivered to him or left at his office.<sup>1</sup> This delivery or leaving of the notice may be either personal or by post.<sup>2</sup> "Collector of the District" means the Collector of the District where the suit is instituted. A suit instituted at Sealdah based on a notice given to the Collector of Purneah is untenable.<sup>3</sup>

15. Waiver of notice and effect thereof. — A notice under the Section is given for the benefit of the defendant and there is nothing to prevent him from waiving the notice or from being estopped by his conduct from pleading the want of notice.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where objection as to notice was taken in the written statement, but no issue was raised on the point and no objection was taken subsequently at any stage of the trial in the Court of first instance, it was held that the notice was waived.<sup>2</sup> Where no objection is raised in the Court of first instance, it cannot be pleaded for the first time in special appeal.<sup>3</sup> But the mere failure to raise the objection in the written statement cannot per se be regarded as a waiver, if it was raised practically before the trial had commenced and before any prejudice could have been caused to the plaintiffs by the lateness of the stage at which the objection was raised.<sup>4</sup>

An objection as to notice cannot be taken by a defendant other than the Secretary of State or other public officer for whose benefit the notice is intended,<sup>5</sup> or by a transferee from the Secretary of State.<sup>6</sup>

16. Notice, if necessary for amendment of plaint. — Where an amendment of the plaint is necessitated by the discovery of facts previously unknown to the plaintiff and the relief asked for in the plaint is not altered by the amendments, a further notice under the Section is not necessary.<sup>1</sup> But where the amendment introduces a new cause of action not specified in the original notice, as for example where a suit based on negligence is sought to be amended into one based on nuisance, a further notice is necessary.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, where a plaint against a person is sought to be amended by substituting the Secretary of State in the place of the original defendant,<sup>3</sup>

or by adding him as an additional defendant, and the effect of such addition would be to raise a question for decision as between the plaintiff and the Secretary of State, notice under the Section is necessary<sup>4</sup> and, in fact, the application to add the Secretary of State as a party should state that the required notice has been given.<sup>5</sup> Where, however, a notice has been properly given to the Railway Administration under Section 77 of the Railways Act, but the Railway is taken over by the Secretary of State subsequent to the notice, no second notice to the Secretary of State under Section 80 is necessary to be given, before filing the suit.<sup>6</sup> Nor is a notice necessary where the defendant's interest devolves on the Government during suit.<sup>7</sup>

17. Fact of notice having been delivered to be mentioned in the plaint.—

The Section requires that the plaint shall contain a statement that the notice under the Section has been delivered or left as required. But the non-mention of the fact will not necessarily entail a dismissal of the suit. The plaint may be amended by adding the statement and the suit proceeded with.<sup>1</sup>

An averment in the plaint that a notice under Section 80 is "sent" to the officer concerned is not sufficient under the Section as the words "delivered" or "left" are not used as provided by the Section.<sup>2</sup>

18. Institution of suit during currency of notice. — It has been seen in Notes 2 and 10 above that the Section is mandatory. It follows that a suit cannot be instituted before the expiry of the two months of notice.<sup>1</sup> But, where a suit instituted before the expiry of the two months' period has been withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit, such fresh suit can be brought on the basis of the same notice.<sup>2</sup>

19. Variance between notice and plaint. — Where there is no substantial variation between the notice and the plaint, the maintainability of the suit will not be affected.<sup>1</sup> But where the case set up in the plaint is different from the case stated in the notice, the suit is not maintainable.<sup>2</sup>

20. Effect of death of intending plaintiff after notice. — A notice given by a person to the Secretary of State of an intended suit will not, where such person dies before the institution of the suit, enure to the benefit of his legal representative and the latter cannot institute the suit without giving fresh notice.<sup>1</sup>

21. Exclusion of period of notice for purposes of limitation. — In computing the period of limitation for a suit against the Secretary of State or public officer, the period of the notice will be excluded under Section 15 (2) of the Limitation

Act.<sup>1</sup> The period of the notice will include both the day of serving the notice and the day on which the suit is filed.<sup>2</sup>

But it has been held that Section 15 (2) of the Limitation Act has no application to periods of limitation not prescribed by the Limitation Act itself, but by any special law such as the Bengal Tenancy Act.<sup>3</sup> In such cases, therefore, the period of notice cannot be excluded in computing the period of limitation prescribed by such special law.<sup>4</sup> Nor can the period of notice be excluded where there is no cause of action at all against the Secretary of State or public officer and the latter is erroneously impleaded as a defendant in the suit.<sup>5</sup>

[ 1877, Ss. 425, 428 ; 1859, S. 72. See O. 27 R. 8.]

1. Scope of the Section. — The exemption from arrest or attachment under this Section is only with reference to arrest or attachment before judgment and not in execution (see O. 27 R. 8). Clause (b) may be compared with Section 133 of the Code which empowers the Provincial Government to exempt from personal attendance any person whom the Government considers, in view of his rank, to be entitled to such exemption.

Suits against alien enemies not prohibited. See Note 1.

1. Scope and applicability of the Section. — Sections 83 to 88 of the Code deal with suits by aliens and by or against Foreign Rulers and Rulers of Indian States. This Section deals with the question as to when aliens may sue in the Courts of British India.

Alien friends are on the same footing as if they were subjects of His Majesty. Thus, an alien prince is competent to sue in a British Indian Court.<sup>1</sup> A foreign corporation can, in its corporate character, sue in British Indian Courts, even if it is not registered under the Indian Companies Act.<sup>2</sup>

An alien enemy residing in British India with the permission of the Central Government may also sue in British Indian Courts.<sup>3</sup> The Section, however, does not preclude suits against aliens not so residing, or affect their right of defence in such suits.<sup>4</sup> As to who is an alien enemy, see Note 2.

2. Alien enemy. — The words "alien enemy" include not only the subjects of a state at war with Great Britain but also British subjects and subjects of a neutral State who are voluntarily residing in a hostile country.<sup>1</sup> The test, therefore, to determine whether a person is an alien enemy, is his place of residence or the place where he carries on business and not his nationality.<sup>2</sup> In Janson v. Driefontein Consolidated Mines, Ltd.,<sup>3</sup> Lord Lindley observed as follows:

"When considering questions arising with an alien enemy, it is not the nationality of a person but his place of business during the war that is important. An Englishman carrying on business in an enemy's country is treated as an alien enemy in considering the validity or invalidity of his commercial contracts."

('28) AIR 1923 Nag 121 (122).

The residence, however, must be a voluntary one. A prisoner of war kept in the enemy country cannot be regarded as an alien enemy.<sup>4</sup> But the residence need not be a permanent one, provided it is not of a temporary character.<sup>5</sup> A person residing in a hostile country for a substantial period of time acquires the disabilities of an alien enemy during the period, unless such residence is with the consent of the Crown.<sup>6</sup>

3. Suits by alien enemies. — An alien enemy residing in a foreign country cannot sue in British Indian Courts.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where some of the partners are resident in a hostile country, the firm cannot maintain an action in British Indian Courts.<sup>2</sup> An alien enemy residing in British India can sue in such Courts if such residence is with the permission of the Governor-General in Council.<sup>3</sup> The permission need not be express, but may be presumed from the circumstances. Where the alien enemy has resided in British India from before the outbreak of war and continues to remain after such outbreak without being ordered to remove himself, permission may be presumed.<sup>4</sup> Where a German lady filed a petition for divorce in the Allahabad High Court, while England was at war with Germany, the fact that she was not interned was construed as an implied permission to reside, by the Government of India.<sup>5</sup>

The Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court has, however, in the undermentioned case<sup>6</sup> taken the view that the permission must be express. The observation is obiter and is against the trend of authorities and cannot be considered sound.

4. Service of summons in a foreign country. — A summons can be transmitted by a British Indian Court to the Foreign Office through the High Court in England for being served on the defendant residing in any enemy country.<sup>1</sup>

5. Contracts with alien enemies. — It is a universal principle of public law that commercial intercourse between States at war with each other is interdicted.<sup>1</sup> But this prohibition is, however, confined to intercourse which is inconsistent with the state of war between the belligerents, including any act or contract which tends to increase the resources of the enemy. A lease granted after the commencement of hostilities, by an alien enemy in British India on behalf of one who is not shown to be an enemy subject, the rent whereof is intended to be used in this country and by persons who are not enemies, is enforceable.<sup>2</sup> A debtor indebted to an alien enemy is not entitled to a suspension of interest on his debt from the date the war began to the date when the enemy obtained a licence to trade in British India.<sup>3</sup>

may sue.

84. [S. 431, Cl. (b).] (1) A foreign State may sue in any Court of British India:

Provided that such State has been recognised by His Majesty or by the Central Government:

Provided, also, that the object of the suit is to enforce a private right vested in the head of such State or in any officer of such State in his public capacity.

(2) Every Court shall take judicial notice of the fact that a foreign State has or has not been recognized by His Majesty or by the Central Government.

Sub-section (1), second proviso. See Note 1.

Suits on judgments and decrees of foreign States. See S. 18, Notes.

1. Legislative changes. — The second proviso to the corresponding Section 431 of the former Code ran as follows:—

"Provided that the object of the suit is to enforce the private rights of the head or of the subjects of the foreign State."

This was open to the interpretation that the foreign State had a general power to litigate in respect of the private rights of its subjects. This was not the intention of the Legislature and so the language of the proviso to the present Section has been suitably modified so as to make it clear that a foreign State can litigate only in respect of private right vested in the head of the State or in any officer of the State in his capacity as such officer.

2. "A foreign State may sue." — The Raja of Faridkot is competent to sue in British Indian Courts.<sup>1</sup> A suit by a foreign State must be instituted in the name by which it has been recognised by His Majesty.<sup>2</sup>

3. Private rights. — The private rights spoken of in this Section do not mean individual rights as opposed to those of the body politic but those private rights of the State which must be enforced in a Court of Justice as distinguished from its political or territorial rights which must, from their very nature, be made the subject of arrangement between one State and another. They are rights which may be enforced by a foreign State against private individuals as distinguished from rights which one State in its political capacity may have as against another State in its political capacity.<sup>1</sup>

Persons specially appointed by Government to prosecute or defend for Princes or Chiefs.

Explanation. — For the purposes of this sub-section the expression “the Government” means —

(a) in the case of any Indian State, the Crown Representative ; and

(b) in any other case, the Central Government.

(2) An appointment under this section may be made for the purpose of specified suit or of several specified suits, or for the purpose of all such suits as it may from time to time be necessary to prosecute or defend on behalf of the Prince or Chief.

(3) A person appointed under this Section may authorize or appoint persons to make appearances and applications and do acts in any such suit or suits as if he were himself a party thereto.

1. Scope of the Section. — This Section enacts that the persons specially appointed under this Section "shall be deemed to be recognised agents." It does not exclude the other classes of recognised agents mentioned in O. 3 R. 2, and a Sovereign Prince is not prevented from suing in his own name or through a recognised agent appointed under O. 3 R. 2. This Section is thus only an enabling provision.<sup>1</sup>

The Section applies to Revenue Courts also.<sup>2</sup>

An administrator of a Native State, who is ruling the State as the representative of the Government of India and who has been appointed by the Government of India to prosecute suits on behalf of the State, is competent to institute suits on behalf of the State in British Indian Courts.<sup>3</sup>

(3) No such Prince, Chief, ambassador or envoy shall be arrested under this Code, and, except with such consent as is mentioned in sub-section (1), certified as aforesaid, no decree shall be executed against the property of any such Prince, Chief, ambassador or envoy.

“(4) The Central Government or the Crown Representative, as the case may be, may by notification in the Gazette of India authorise a Provincial Government and any Secretary to that Government to exercise with respect to any Prince, Chief, ambassador or envoy named in the notification the functions assigned by the foregoing sub-sections to the consenting authority and a certifying officer respectively.

(5) A person may, as a tenant of immoveable property, sue, without such consent as is mentioned in this section, a Prince, Chief, ambassador or envoy from whom he holds or claims to hold the property.

is a modified form of the absolute privilege enjoyed by independent sovereigns and their ambassadors in the Courts in England, in accordance with the principles of international law. The difference is that while in England the privilege is unconditional, dependent only on the will of the Sovereign or his representative, in India it is dependent upon the consent of the Central Government or the Crown Representative, which can be given only under specified conditions. This modified or conditional privilege is, however, based upon essentially the same principle as the absolute privilege, the dignity and independence of the ruler which would be endangered by allowing any person to sue him at pleasure, and the political inconveniences and complications which would be the result."<sup>2</sup> In Gaekwar Baroda State Railway v. Hafiz Habib-ul-Haq,<sup>3</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows:

"The Sections (86 and 87 of the Civil Procedure Code) relate to an important matter of public policy in India and the express provisions contained therein are imperative and must be observed."

The Section is exhaustive of the cases in which sanction can be given. No sanction can be given on any other ground.<sup>4</sup>

See also Note 7 infra.

3. Suit against Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief. — The sanction required by the Section is necessary for all suits against a Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief whether in his private capacity or in his sovereign capacity.<sup>1</sup> But a suit against an agent of such Prince or Chief is maintainable without any sanction where he is personally liable within the meaning of Section 230 (3) of the Contract Act.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, a suit against a business concern managed by the Durbar of a State is not a suit against the Prince or Chief.<sup>3</sup>

In the undermentioned case,<sup>4</sup> a suit was brought against a defendant who was described as "The Gaekwar Baroda State Railway through the Manager and Engineer in Chief" of the said Railway. It was found that the above railway was neither a State Railway nor a company railway but was owned and managed by His Highness the Maharaja of Baroda through his own men. It was held that the suit was in reality, though not in form, a suit against His Highness the Gaekwar of Baroda and that the provisions of this Section and Section 87 infra applied to the case.

This Section does not apply to proceedings under Section 184 of the Companies Act of 1913.<sup>5</sup> The reason is that if the Court makes an order under Section 184 and places the name of a Native Prince or Chief upon the list of contributories, it does not thereby enforce a jurisdiction against that Native Prince or Chief. But proceedings under Sections 186 and 187 of the Companies Act of 1913 are proceedings in a Civil Court within the meaning of Section 141 and by virtue of that Section, this Section applies to such proceedings.<sup>6</sup>

4. Consent when to be obtained. — The consent referred to in the Section must be obtained before the institution of the suit. A consent obtained after the institution of the suit will not validate the institution thereof.<sup>1</sup> Where the plaintiff wishes to amend the plaint by adding a new relief, it is necessary that sanction under this Section should be obtained.<sup>2</sup> Where the defendant becomes a Ruling Chief or Sovereign Prince subsequent to the institution of the suit, it has been held that the suit cannot be continued without the sanction.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that the words "to sue" in the Section include every step from the presentation of the plaint to the recovery of judgment.<sup>4</sup>

5. "And is to be sued with reference to such property or for money charged thereon" — Sub-section (2) (c). — Sub-section (2) (c) of the old Section referred only to cases where the Prince or Chief was to be sued with reference to the possession of immovable property or for money charged thereon. The substitution of the word "property" for the word "possession" has widened the scope of the Section by including all cases with reference to the property in the possession of the Prince or Chief.

A suit for maintenance or for maintenance coupled with a prayer for the creation of a charge therefor on certain properties, is not a suit for "money charged" on those properties within the meaning of clause (c).<sup>1</sup>

Sub-section 5 refers to a suit against a Sovereign Prince or Chief and does not dispense with the consent required under sub-section 3 for execution proceedings against such Prince or Chief.<sup>3</sup>

as to whether the objection on the ground of want of sanction under this Section can be waived by the native Prince or Chief. Before the decision of the Privy Council in Gaekwar Baroda State Railway v. Hafiz Habib-ul-Haq,<sup>2</sup> there was a conflict of decisions on this question. It was held by the Bombay High Court that such objection could be waived by the defendant Prince or Chief and that contesting the suit on the merits without protest amounted to such waiver.<sup>3</sup> The Calcutta,<sup>4</sup> Lahore,<sup>5</sup> Patna<sup>6</sup> and Allahabad<sup>7</sup> High Courts also took a similar view. According to the High Court of Patna, even an application for adjournment would amount to a waiver of the privilege.<sup>8</sup> But it was held that the fact that the Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief waived his privilege in one suit did not preclude him from pleading it in another suit.<sup>9</sup> The Madras High Court, however, dissented from the view that the privilege could be waived.<sup>10</sup> The ground on which that view was based was that the recognition of cases of waiver as excepted from the provisions of international law cannot be imported into the clear language of the Code.

The above conflict has been set at rest by the decision of the Privy Council referred to above, by which it was held that the provisions of this Section are imperative and cannot be waived. Their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows: "Further, as already pointed out, the provisions relating to this matter are statutory. They are contained in Sections 86 and 87, Civil Procedure Code; they are imperative and having regard to the public purposes which they serve, they cannot, in their Lordships' opinion, be waived in the manner suggested by the High Court."

8. Defence of set-off — No consent is necessary. — Where a person does not actually sue as plaintiff but only puts forward a claim of set-off in his defence to a suit by a Ruling Chief, no sanction is necessary to raise such a claim.<sup>1</sup>

9. Inquiry into the validity of consent. — The introduction of the words "unless it appears to the consenting authority" effects an important change in the pre-existing law. Its effect is to show that the opinion of the consenting authority is final on the question whether any of the clauses (a) to (c) is satisfied in a given instance.<sup>1</sup> The cases<sup>2</sup> which, before the passing of the present Code, held that it is open to or incumbent on the Courts to examine the correctness of the decision of the Government are no longer law.

10. Effect of non-compliance with the Section. — A suit against a Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief instituted without the previous sanction of the Government should be either dismissed or allowed to be withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit duly sanctioned.<sup>1</sup> But a suit against several defendants, one or some of whom alone are privileged, is not bad as against the others for want of sanction as against the privileged defendants.<sup>2</sup>

11. Death of Ruling Chief against whom a decree is passed — Abatement of appeal. — An appeal from a decree against a Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief does not abate on his death.<sup>1</sup>

12. Sub-section (3). — After a decree is passed against a Sovereign Prince or Ruling Chief in a validly laid suit, a twofold protection in execution is afforded to the defendant under this sub-section —

(a) An absolute protection of his person from arrest.

(b) A qualified protection of his property, dependent on the sanction of the authority mentioned in sub-section (1).

The consent required for executing the decree against the property is, evidently, independent of the consent required for initiating the suit. Further, such consent is necessary even if the decree-holder happens to be a tenant of the judgment-debtor<sup>1</sup> although, under sub-section (5) the sanction under the Section is not necessary for a suit by the tenant.

13. Notification. — See General Statutory Rules and Orders, Vol. I, pp. 625 to 638.

14. Limitation. — The time taken in obtaining the consent under this Section cannot be deducted in computing the period of limitation.<sup>1</sup>

On a question arising under Section 13 of the Limitation Act, the Bombay High Court<sup>2</sup> held that in the case of Sovereign Princes or Ruling Chiefs, who are in fact generally resident in their own territories and outside British India, they cannot be said to be absent from British India so long as they reside or carry on their business through their representatives in British India. The Calcutta High Court has, on the other hand, held that the defendant cannot be said to reside in British India by the mere fact of carrying on business therein.<sup>3</sup>

1. Legislative changes. — The following are the main changes introduced in the Section —

1. For the words "payment or property" the words "debt, sum of money, or other property, moveable or immoveable," have been substituted.
2. For the words "whose only interest is that of a mere stake-holder" are substituted the words "who claims no interest therein other than for charges or costs."<sup>1</sup>

The other provisions in the old Code relating to interpleader suits have been enacted in Order 35 of the First Schedule.

2. Scope and applicability of the Section. — Where X is under a liability for any debt, sum of money, or other property, claimed adversely by A or B or more, and he desires protection against a wrong payment or delivery, he can file a suit under this Section. The only way, in fact, in which he can protect himself is by filing such a suit; otherwise if he litigated with the claimant separately, he would have to pay the costs of the successful claimant.<sup>1</sup> It is necessary that the liability to some one must be admitted and there must be no collusion<sup>2</sup> and no interest in the subject-matter other than for charges or costs. A suit under this Section is called an interpleader suit because the plaintiff is really not interested in the matter, but only the defendants interplead as to their claims. In fact each of the defendants so interpleading is virtually in the position of a plaintiff and his claim will be governed by the rules of the Limitation Act.<sup>3</sup>

In order to determine whether a suit is an interpleader suit under the Section, the Court must have regard to all the prayers in the plaint. The mere fact that the plaintiff requires the defendants to interplead as regards one of the reliefs claimed would not necessarily make it an interpleader suit.<sup>4</sup>

Where a party in the position of a mere stake-holder is made a defendant in a suit, his proper course is to deposit the money (if it is a suit for money) into Court and ask that the parties really interested may be substituted for himself as defendants.<sup>5</sup> Such deposit by him is a valid discharge for him and if the Court paid it to a wrong person he is not responsible.<sup>6</sup> This Section is not applicable to suits and other proceedings under the Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926) and the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908).

3. Claims must be bona fide and adverse to one another. — The claims of the defendants must be bona fide ones, though they need not have a common origin.<sup>1</sup> The Court must be satisfied that there is a real question to be tried. A mere pretext of conflicting claims is not sufficient.<sup>2</sup>

The defendants must also claim the money or property adversely to one another from the plaintiff.<sup>3</sup> A decision given on the claims of the co-defendants in an interpleader suit will operate as res judicata between them.<sup>4</sup>

4. ('28) AIR 1928 Oudh 155 (179).

It is, however, not necessary that the plaintiff must show the existence of an apparent title in each of the defendants claiming the property in dispute.<sup>5</sup> Nor is it necessary that the claims should be legal claims or rights. Equitable claims and rights can be entertained and given effect to.<sup>6</sup>

4. Claims must be with reference to the same subject-matter. — The rival claims must be with reference to the same debt, sum of money, or other property,<sup>1</sup> but not necessarily to the same extent.<sup>2</sup> It is thus not necessary that each of the defendants should claim the whole of the subject-matter of the suit.<sup>3</sup>

The "same debt, sum of money, or other property" would not, it is conceived, include a claim for unliquidated damages<sup>4</sup> though it might include a chose in action.<sup>5</sup>

5. Plaintiff should claim no interest in the subject-matter. — The plaintiff must be in an impartial position. If he has, in some way, identified himself with one of the parties in the sense that it will make a difference to him which of the two succeeds, an interpleader suit will not lie.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a person who has taken an indemnity from one of the claimants, cannot file a suit under this Section,<sup>2</sup> though he will not be refused relief, if he has merely a natural affinity for one side rather than the other.<sup>3</sup> A right of lien, e. g., for wharfage, demurrage or freight, is not an interest in the property for the purposes of this Section.<sup>4</sup>

6. "Charges or costs," meaning of. — The words "charges or costs" include costs of suit, freight, warehouse rent, dock rent, wharfage, demurrage and other charges.<sup>1</sup> A lien can be declared for such charges in an interpleader suit,<sup>2</sup> but

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS

ARBITRATION

Section 89

89. [New.] (1) Save in so far as is otherwise provided by the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899, or by any other law for the time being in force, all references to arbitration whether by an order in a suit or otherwise, and all proceedings thereunder, shall be governed by the provisions contained in the Second Schedule.

(2) The provisions of the Second Schedule shall not affect any arbitration pending at the commencement of this Code, but shall apply to any arbitration after that date under any agreement or reference made before the commencement of this Code.

[1882, Cf. S. 506; 1877, S. 506; 1859, Ss. 312 and 313.]

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Section.
2. Applicability of the Arbitration Act.
3. "Any other law for the time being in force."
See Note 9 to O. 28 R. 3.
4. Agreement to refer to arbitration.
5. Suit on award.

1. Scope of the Section. — In their Statement of Objects and Reasons, the Special Committee state as follows :—

"We are of opinion that the best course would undoubtedly be to eliminate from the Code all the clauses as to arbitration and insert them in a new and comprehensive Arbitration Act. There are perhaps difficulties as to this at present. We have determined therefore to leave the arbitration clauses much as they are in the present Code but we have placed them in a Schedule in the hope that at no distant date they may be transferred into a comprehensive Arbitration Act."<sup>1</sup>

Schedule II of the Code deals with arbitrations under three heads<sup>2</sup> :—

- (1) Where the parties to the litigation desire to refer to arbitration any matter in difference between them in the suit, in that case all proceedings from first to last are under the supervision of the Court. Sch. II, Paragraphs 1 to 16 deal with such matters.
- (2) Where the parties without recourse to litigation agree to refer their differences to arbitration and it is desired that the agreement of reference should have the sanction of the Court, in that case all further proceedings are under the supervision of the Court. Paras. 17 to 19 of Schedule II deal with such matters.

- (3) Where the agreement of reference is made and the arbitration itself takes place without the intervention of the Court and the assistance of the Court is only sought in order to give effect to the award. This is dealt with by Paragraphs 20 to 23 of Schedule II.

This Section declares that all references to arbitration and all proceedings thereunder shall be governed by the provisions of Schedule II except as otherwise provided by (a) the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899<sup>3</sup> and (b) by any other law for the time being in force.

2. Applicability of the Arbitration Act. — The Indian Arbitration Act applies only to arbitration by agreement without the intervention of a Court of Justice,<sup>1</sup> and even this only in cases in respect of the subject-matter of which a suit could be instituted in a Presidency Town.<sup>2</sup>

By Section 2 of the Act, the Local Government may declare the Act applicable to local areas other than Presidency Towns as if they were Presidency Towns.<sup>3</sup>

3. "Any other law for the time being in force."—See Note 9 to O. 23 R. 3.

4. Agreement to refer to arbitration. — A mere agreement to refer to arbitration in a pending suit cannot amount to an adjustment under O. 23 R. 3.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 9 to O. 23 R. 3.

5. Suit on award. — An award is the outcome of the submission of the parties to be bound by a submission agreed to by them and so can be specifically enforced like any other contract.<sup>1</sup> Under the old Code an award could be enforced summarily under Section 525 or in a regular suit. Section 89 of this Code has not altered the law on this point.<sup>2</sup> See Notes to Sch. II, Para. 20.

SPECIAL CASE

90. [S. 527.] Where any persons agree in writing to state Section 90 a case for the opinion of the Court, then the Court shall try and determine the same in the manner prescribed.

Synopsis

1. "In the manner prescribed."
2. Re-opening of case.

1. "In the manner prescribed." — "In the manner prescribed" means prescribed by Rules in the First Schedule. The Section is based on Sections 527-551 of the old Code, which are now arranged in Order 36. Parties may enter into an agreement and avail themselves of the provisions of Order 36 for the purpose of obtaining the opinion of the Court on a case stated by them.<sup>1</sup>

2. Re-opening of case. — Where a special case is settled by consent it can only be re-opened by mutual consent.<sup>1</sup>

SUITS RELATING TO PUBLIC MATTERS

91. [New.] (1) In the case of a public nuisance<sup>2</sup> the Section 91 Advocate-General, or two or more persons<sup>4</sup> having obtained the consent in writing of the Advocate-General, may institute a suit, though no special damage has been caused, for a declaration<sup>6</sup> and injunction<sup>7</sup> or for such other relief<sup>8</sup> as may be appropriate to the circumstances of the case.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect any right of suit which may exist independently of its provisions.<sup>9</sup>

1. Scope and object of the Section. — Under the Common law a private person cannot maintain a suit in respect of a public nuisance unless he is able to show that he suffered special damage thereby.<sup>1</sup> This Section provides an exception to that rule and enacts that such a suit can be maintained even without proof of special damage provided the consent of the Advocate-General is obtained and the other conditions of the Section are satisfied.<sup>2</sup>

The Section enacts only a rule of procedure and does not, as is made clear by sub-section (2), deprive any person of any right which he may have independently of its provisions, as for instance, a right to sue in respect of a public nuisance on proof of special damage.<sup>3</sup>

2. "Public nuisance," meaning of. — The words "public nuisance" have not been defined in the Code. But by virtue of Section 3 (44) of the General Clauses Act, the words mean a public nuisance as defined by the Indian Penal Code.<sup>1</sup> Under Section 268 of the Indian Penal Code, "a public nuisance" is an act or illegal omission which causes any common injury, danger or annoyance to the public or to the people in general who dwell or occupy property in the vicinity, or which must necessarily cause injury, obstruction, danger or annoyance to persons who may have occasion to use any public right.

The essence of the definition is that the injury, danger or annoyance must be to the public, or to the people in general who occupy the property in the vicinity or who use such public right.<sup>2</sup> Thus, the obstruction of a public highway,<sup>3</sup> or the pollution of public waterways,<sup>4</sup> or the storage of inflammable or other material likely to endanger life or health,<sup>5</sup> or the causing of annoyance to the public in any other way,<sup>6</sup> is a public nuisance. Acts, however, which offend the sentiments of merely a particular class of persons,<sup>7</sup> or annoyance caused to particular persons only,<sup>8</sup> do not constitute public nuisances. Thus, the placing of a Muhammadan symbol in the neighbourhood of Hindu temple,<sup>9</sup> or the carrying on of a tinman's trade causing annoyance to the inhabitants of three sets of chambers only,<sup>10</sup> is not a public nuisance. Similarly, where a suit is brought on behalf of the members of one community to vindicate their right to take out processions along a certain route, the suit is not one for the removal of a public nuisance within the meaning of this Section, but is a suit for remedying the infringement of a special right exercised by that community.<sup>11</sup>

Whether a particular thing or act is an actionable nuisance at all, is to be decided with reference to the circumstances of each case.<sup>12</sup> In Sturges v. Bridgman,<sup>13</sup> Thesiger, L. J., observed as follows: "Whether anything is a nuisance or not is to be determined not only by an abstract consideration of the thing itself but in reference to its circumstances. What would be a nuisance in Belgram Square would not necessarily be so in Bermondsey."

No length of time can legitimate a public nuisance.<sup>14</sup> Nor will the fact that a person or company is acting under statutory powers enable such person or company to cause or continue a nuisance, unless the creation thereof was expressly contemplated by the Statute.<sup>15</sup>

There are two kinds of public nuisances, actual and constructive, or public nuisances in fact and public nuisances in law. What is meant by a constructive public nuisance or a public nuisance in law is that which is only wrong because it contravenes the provisions of an Act such as the building rules of a Municipal Act. Section 91 is restricted in terms to public nuisances in fact and a constructive public nuisance can be no ground for a suit under that Section.<sup>16</sup> As to actionable private nuisance, see Pollock on Torts and the undermentioned cases.<sup>17</sup>

3. Obstruction to public highway. — An obstruction to a public thoroughfare is a public nuisance.<sup>1</sup> The public is entitled to the full width of the public highway, however wide it may be, and any obstruction thereto infringes the right of the public to that extent.<sup>2</sup> Thus, the building of a construction over any part of a public street,<sup>3</sup> or the cutting of trenches across it<sup>4</sup> necessarily causing obstruction to persons who may have occasion to use the street, is a public nuisance. Similarly, an excessive user of the highway incompatible with the reasonable exercise of rights by other members of the public,<sup>5</sup> or an illegitimate user of the road amounting to trespass, will amount to a public nuisance.<sup>6</sup> So also acts committed on or adjoining a highway, interfering with or endangering the safe user thereof, will amount to a public nuisance.<sup>7</sup>

A navigable river is a public highway and any act which interferes with the right of the public to freely navigate is a public nuisance.<sup>8</sup> A slight encroachment will not necessarily constitute a public nuisance. There must be some evidence that the encroachment causes one of the results specified in Section 268 of the Indian Penal Code.<sup>9</sup>

A village pathway is not a public highway and a suit for relief in respect thereof is not governed by this Section.<sup>10</sup> The right of a person to have access to his land abutting on a public highway is a public right,<sup>11</sup> but a right, acquired by prescription of immediate access from private property to a public highway is a private right.<sup>12</sup> See also the case cited below.<sup>13</sup>

Every class or community has a right to conduct a religious procession with its appropriate observances along a highway so that the procession does not interfere with the ordinary use of such streets by the public and subject to such directions as the Magistrates may lawfully give to prevent obstructions of the thoroughfare or breaches of the public peace.<sup>14</sup> A suit in respect of an obstruction to such a right is one respecting the infringement of a civil right of an individual and not one relating to a public nuisance. ## Section 91

It has been held in some decisions<sup>16</sup> that a suit for the removal of obstruction on a highway may be brought by a plaintiff without proof of special damage even where the procedure under this Section is not followed. These decisions purport to follow the decision of the Privy Council in Saiyad Manzur Hassan v. Saiyad Muhammad Zaman,<sup>17</sup> in which it was held that a suit for declaration of the plaintiff's right to take out a procession along a highway is maintainable without proof of special damage. It is submitted that this decision of the Privy Council does not support the above view.<sup>18</sup>

It has been held that a person in the immediate neighbourhood and entitled to use a public thoroughfare has a special cause of action where it is obstructed and that he can sue without proof of special damage.<sup>19</sup>

In the case cited below,<sup>20</sup> a suit was brought for declaration as regards the rights of the public to use a certain well and also that the public had a right of way over a certain area of land appertaining to the well. The Patna High Court, while affirming the proposition that a suit in respect of a public nuisance, without proof of special damage, can be brought only under this Section, held on the authority of Harrop v. Hirst,<sup>21</sup> that in the particular case before the Court the suit was maintainable.

4. "The Advocate-General or two or more persons." — In England, before the coming into force of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, a proceeding in respect of a public nuisance was commenced by an "information" filed by the Attorney-General in the High Court of Chancery. Such a proceeding is now called an "action" and is commenced by a writ in the High Court of Justice, and may be brought by the Attorney-General either acting ex-officio or at the relation of a private individual. In the latter case the plaintiff is described as "the Attorney-General at the relation of A. B. (relator)."<sup>1</sup> In either case the action is a public proceeding in which the Crown is really a party to the litigation through the Attorney-General.<sup>2</sup> The practice of inserting the relator's name in the proceeding is for the purpose of making him responsible for costs, and it does not make him a party to the litigation.<sup>3</sup> In actions taken by the Attorney-General without a relator, the former will be liable for the costs.<sup>4</sup>

The Advocate-General in this country represents the Attorney-General in England.<sup>5</sup> Under the present Section a suit in respect of a public nuisance may be brought —

2. by him at the instance of relators, or
3. by two or more persons with the consent of the Advocate-General.

Neither a relator<sup>6</sup> nor a person suing under this Section need have any personal interest in the subject-matter of the suit.<sup>7</sup>

As to the nature and form of consent necessary, see Notes 23, 24, 25 and 26 to Section 92. A plea as to want of sanction under the Section cannot be raised for the first time in appeal.<sup>8</sup>

It has been observed in Note 2 above that Section 91 does not apply to constructive public nuisances, i. e., public nuisances in law. But the Advocate-General has, like the Attorney-General in England, power, apart from the Section, to take proceedings in respect of the latter class of nuisances.<sup>9</sup>

8. Remedies for a public nuisance. — The remedies available in respect of a public nuisance are as follows —

1. Under the Criminal Law —

- (a) The person committing a nuisance is liable to a criminal prosecution under the Indian Penal Code.
- (b) Certain summary powers are also conferred on Magistrates by Sections 133 to 143 of the Code of Criminal Procedure for the removal of the nuisance.

2. Under the Civil Law —

- (a) A suit will lie under this Section without proof of any special damage to the plaintiffs.
- (b) A suit will also lie at the instance of private individual where he has suffered special damage by reason of the nuisance, as distinguished from the damage suffered by him in common with other persons affected by the nuisance. For illustrations, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

Notes 5-7

The remedies are concurrent and the pursuit of one does not bar the other. Thus, where A obstructs a public highway by occupying and enclosing a portion thereof, he may be prosecuted under Section 268 of the Indian Penal Code. This will not preclude a suit under this Section by the Advocate-General or by two or more persons with his consent. Nor will the institution of the said two proceedings bar a suit by a private individual whose house abuts on that highway and the access to whose house is cut off by such enclosure by A causing him special damage.<sup>2</sup>

6. Declaration. — Where the relief claimed in respect of a suit is a right of easement and not in respect of any public nuisance, no declaration that the place in suit is a public thoroughfare can be granted on the mere fact that the plaintiff's witnesses described it as a public place.<sup>1</sup>

As to declarations of right to take religious processions in public streets, see Note 3 above.

7. Injunction. — Where a nuisance is temporary and intermittent,<sup>1</sup> or occasional,<sup>2</sup> no injunction will be granted. Nor will it be granted where the injury is trifling in amount and effect.<sup>3</sup> But even slight nuisances, if they are of frequent occurrence, will justify the grant of an injunction.<sup>4</sup> Thus, a continuous ringing of bells will be stopped by an injunction.<sup>5</sup> Similarly, where the defendant claims a right to continue the nuisance,<sup>6</sup> or the act committed tends to the injury of the public,<sup>7</sup> or causes damage to private individuals,<sup>8</sup> an injunction will be granted.

Where, however, the plaintiff has acquiesced in the nuisance,<sup>9</sup> or where there is no proof or prospect of any injury,<sup>10</sup> no injunction will be granted. No mandatory injunction will be granted if the nuisance is only constructive.<sup>11</sup>

Where a right to injunction is proved, it should be granted as a rule and without regard to any difficulty or expense that the defendant may be put to in removing the nuisance. But in exceptional cases where such difficulty is considerable, the Court may suspend the operation of the injunction.<sup>12</sup>

8. "Such other relief." — In England a private individual may join the Attorney-General in the action and claim special damages which he suffered by the nuisance.<sup>1</sup> It is doubtful whether persons suing under this Section, can claim such special damages.

9. Saving of rights, existing independently of this Section — Sub-section (2). — It has been observed in Notes 1 and 5 above that this Section does not affect rights of suit which may exist independently of this Section and this is embodied in sub-section (2) of this Section. Thus the Section does not control or restrict the provisions of O. 1 R. 8 under which a person may sue on behalf of others.<sup>1</sup>

1. Legislative changes. — This Section has been enacted in substitution of Section 539 of the Code of 1882 and has introduced the following changes —

- (a) The words "public purposes of a charitable or religious nature" have been introduced in place of the words "public charitable and religious purposes." See Note 5 below.
- (b) Under the old Code, the interest of the plaintiff was required to be a "direct interest" in the suit. The word "direct" has been deleted by Act VII of 1888.<sup>1</sup> See Note 8 below.
- (c) The words "whether contentious or not" are new. See Note 32 below.
- (d) The words "in the principal Court of original jurisdiction" have been substituted for the words "in the High Court or the District Court" and the words "or any other Court empowered in that behalf by the Local Government" have been newly added. See Note 38 below.
- (e) Clause (a) is new. See Note 15 below.
- (f) Clause (d) is also new. See Note 18 below.
- (g) The following words in clause (e), namely, "what proportion of the trust property or of the interest therein shall be allocated to any particular object of the trust" have been substituted for the words "the proportion in which its objects are entitled." See Note 19 below.
- (h) Sub-section (2) is also new. See Note 33 and Note 41 below.

2. Applicability, object and scope of the Section. — This Section may be taken as intended to confer upon the Courts in this country the same powers as the English Courts of Chancery possessed, in matters relating to the administration of public charities, religious or otherwise.<sup>1</sup> It has been intended to be an exhaustive statement of the law applicable to cases in which there has been a breach of trust in relation to a public trust (whether express or constructive) of a charitable or religious nature.<sup>2</sup> The aim of the Section is to protect the rights of the public in such trusts and to enable the public, the Advocate-General and Courts of Justice to stop the misuse of the income of charitable institutions.<sup>3</sup> This Section is intended to provide proceedings of a special nature for the purpose of determining questions that relate to the administration of public, religious or charitable trusts and to prevent multifarious and vexatious suits being filed by irresponsible persons against the trustees whose duty it is to administer such trusts.<sup>4</sup> The infringement of private rights is outside the scope of the Section.<sup>5</sup>

The real test, therefore, for the applicability of the Section is to see whether the suit is fundamentally on behalf of the public for the vindication of a public right;<sup>6</sup> and in order to apply the test the Court must look to the substance and not to the form of the suit.<sup>7</sup>

In order that the Section may apply, four conditions appear to be necessary to be satisfied<sup>8</sup>—

- (1) There must exist a trust for public purposes of a charitable or religious nature.<sup>9</sup> (For full notes, see Note 5 below.)
- (2) The plaintiff must allege that there is a breach of such trust or that the direction of the Court is necessary for the administration of the trust.<sup>10</sup> (For full notes, see Note 6 below.)
- (3) The suit must be a representative one on behalf of the public and not by individuals for their own interests.<sup>11</sup> (For full notes, see Note 7 below.)
- (4) The relief claimed in the suit must be one of the reliefs mentioned in the Section.<sup>12</sup> (See Note 9 below.)

Sections 92 and 93 have no application as regards Tirumalai-Tirupati Devasthanams. See the Tirumalai-Tirupati Devasthanams Act (Madras Act XIX of 1933), Section 44 (2).

When all the above conditions are satisfied, the suit will be governed by the Section and cannot be instituted except in conformity with the procedure prescribed thereby.<sup>14</sup> When any one of the conditions is absent, the Section has no application. The necessity of obtaining the sanction of the Advocate-General, in a suit falling within the Section, has been imposed with a view "to prevent an indefinite number of reckless and harassing suits being brought against trustees by different persons interested in the trust."<sup>15</sup>

The mere fact that a suit relates to a public trust or to the properties belonging thereto, without satisfying all the conditions of the Section, will not make the Section applicable thereto.<sup>16</sup> Nor will a suit which satisfied all the conditions of the Section be taken out of its scope merely by the fact that claims for reliefs other than those described in the Section are also added therein.<sup>17</sup> A suit for removal from religious office, if the office is connected with the management of trust funds and properties, is within the scope of the Section.<sup>18</sup> The aim of the Section being to restrict the powers of individuals from having unrestricted access to Courts in the matters described in the Section, its provisions must be strictly construed.<sup>19</sup> Where therefore a point is taken that a suit brought in the ordinary manner is really governed by the provisions of this Section, the Court must see whether it is really and strictly within the four corners thereof.<sup>20</sup>

Section 9 of the Charitable and Religious Trusts Act (XIV of 1920) provides that if a suit under this Section is pending or a scheme has been settled, no petition under the provisions of that Act shall be entertained. Section 10 of the same Act also empowers the Court, in suits under this Section, to direct the defendant to furnish security or deposit money for costs of the plaintiff. Where an order under Section 5 of the Charitable and Religious Trusts Act is not complied with, there is a breach of trust and by virtue of Section 6 of the Act a suit for any of the reliefs mentioned in this Section so far as it is based on such failure may be instituted without the previous sanction of the Advocate-General.<sup>21</sup>

Section 73 of the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act provides that this Section (i. e., Section 92) shall have no application to any suit claiming any relief in respect of the administration or management of a religious endowment and that no suit in respect of such administration or management shall be instituted except as provided by that Act. The effect of Section 73 of that Act is that a suit which could only be instituted by the Advocate-General or by some persons with his consent under this Section must, when it relates to religious endowments governed by that Act, be instituted by the Religious Endowments Board or by some person having an interest and with the consent of the Board.<sup>22</sup> See also the undermentioned cases<sup>23</sup> under that Act.

Under Section 192 (a) of the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), the provisions of this Section corresponding to Section 539, Chap. XL of the old Code, have been made inapplicable to proceedings under the said Act.

3. Retrospective operation of the Section. — It is a general principle of law that alterations in procedure are always retrospective in operation, and accordingly there is nothing to prevent Section 92 of the Code from operating retrospectively.<sup>1</sup> This Section deals with the right of suit (which is a substantive right), as well as with procedure.<sup>2</sup> In so far, therefore, as it affects rights of suit, it will not have a retrospective operation, but will have such operation so far as it affects procedure.<sup>3</sup>

4. Analogous law — Comparison with the Religious Endowments Act, 1863 and with Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877. — Section 539 of the old Code, corresponding to Section 92 of this Code, was an imperfect reproduction of Lord Romilly's Act (52 Geo. III, C. 101) and the Trustee Act (13 & 14 Vict., C. 60) of 1850 in England. There is a conflict of opinion as to whether decisions on Romilly's Act could be referred to for interpreting the provisions of this Section, some holding that they could be so referred to<sup>1</sup> and others that they could not.<sup>2</sup> The language of those Acts, however, is materially different from that of the Code<sup>3</sup> with this additional difference in procedure that the remedy under the English Act is by way of an application<sup>4</sup> and the proceedings are regarded as summary ones,<sup>5</sup> whereas under the Code the remedy is by way of a suit, and the proceedings are not summary.<sup>6</sup>

Before the year 1863, the general superintendence of all religious and charitable endowments in the Provinces of Bengal and Madras was vested in the respective Boards of Revenue of those Provinces by virtue of two Regulations, viz., Bengal Regulation XIX of 1810 and Madras Regulation VII of 1817.<sup>7</sup> But there was no law of Religious Endowments as such applicable to the whole of India.

Note 4

In the year 1863, the Government wanted to divest themselves of their powers of interference with religious endowments and accordingly Act XX of 1863 was passed, whereby the provisions of the said Regulations relating to religious endowments were repealed and provision was made to transfer all such endowments to trustees and committees.<sup>8</sup> The operation of the Act was, however, not confined to such endowments only as had been actually taken under the management of the Board of Revenue.<sup>9</sup> The Act does not apply to the Presidency of Bombay excepting the District of North Canara, nor to any Presidency Towns.<sup>10</sup>

As regards charitable endowments, the power of superintendence continued to remain in the Board of Revenue, under the old Regulations, and is still retained by it.

Comparison with Religious Endowments Act. — Section 14 of the Religious Endowments Act provides that any person or persons interested<sup>11</sup> in any public religious trust<sup>12</sup> may sue the trustee, manager, superintendent or a member of any committee appointed under the Act, for any mifeasance, breach of trust or neglect of duty committed by him in respect of the trust<sup>13</sup> and the Court may, in such a suit —

- (1) direct the specific performance of any act by such trustee, manager, superintendent or member of the committee,
- (2) decree damages and costs against such person, and
- (3) direct his removal.<sup>14</sup>

Section 92 declares that the provisions of the Religious Endowments Act for the institution of suits governed by that Act are not affected by its provisions.<sup>15</sup>

Section 92 read with the provisions of the Religious Endowments Act thus leads to the following result —

- (1) Suits in respect of charitable trusts are outside the scope of the Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863). They will fall within the scope of Section 92 if the conditions for the applicability of the Section described in Note 2 above are satisfied.
- (2) Suits, in respect of religious endowments, which do not charge the trustee, manager, superintendent or committee member with misfeasance, breach of trust or neglect of duty, are outside the scope of the Act. They will fall within the scope of Section 92 if the conditions for its applicability are satisfied.<sup>16</sup>

- (3) Suits in respect of public religious trusts which charge the trustee, manager, superintendent or committee member with misfeasance, breach of trust or neglect of duty will fall within the scope of both the said Act and Section 92 of the Code. In such a case, the plaintiff may proceed under either provision at his choice,<sup>17</sup> though the proper machinery to proceed under would, in the generality of cases, be under the Code.<sup>18</sup>
- (4) Both under the Act as well as under Section 92, permission is necessary to be obtained before the institution of the suit—if, under the Act, from the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction, and if under Section 92, from the Collector or the Advocate-General.<sup>19</sup>
- (5) The general procedure of the Code equally applies to suits under the Act.<sup>20</sup>
- (6) The reliefs granted under the Act are slightly different from those accorded under Section 92 of the Code.<sup>21</sup>
- (7) A suit under the Religious Endowments Act is as much a representative suit as one under Section 92 of the Code and affects the rights of all those interested in the trust.<sup>22</sup>

Comparison with Specific Relief Act, Section 42. — Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act provides that no Court shall grant a declaration where the plaintiff being able to seek further relief, omits to do so. But this Section has been held to be inapplicable to cases falling within the scope of Section 539 (the corresponding Section of the old Code), or Section 92 even if the suit is one for a mere declaration and the plaintiff does not ask for further relief, being able to do so.<sup>23</sup> Nor can a plaintiff evade the requirements of Section 92 by framing a suit as one under Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act.<sup>24</sup> be given their ordinary meaning and cannot be made to vary according to the classification of trusts which may be accepted in different systems of law.<sup>6</sup> A public trust differs from a private trust in important particulars.<sup>7</sup> In the case of the former, the beneficial interest is vested in an uncertain and fluctuating body and the trust itself is of a permanent character.<sup>8</sup> In the case of the latter, the beneficial interest is vested absolutely in one or more ascertainable individuals and the trust itself need not be a permanent one.<sup>9</sup> The fact that the uncertain and fluctuating body is only a section of the public or caste,<sup>10</sup> or the fact that such section levies poll-tax amongst themselves for the maintenance of the trust or holds caste meetings and erects buildings out of the income of the trust will not detract from the public character of the trust.<sup>11</sup> To see if a trust is a public or private one, the real substance of the trust and the primary intention of the creator of the trust must be looked to.<sup>12</sup> A trust in favour of a Hindu idol, or temple,<sup>13</sup> or in favour of a Mahomedan mosque,<sup>14</sup> or a "Devadayam"<sup>15</sup> have all been held to be prima facie trusts for public purposes.

When a trust is created both for public and private purposes, this Section will apply to such a trust although the public and charitable part of the trust is small as compared with the other parts of the trust.<sup>16</sup>

In order to create a trust there must be a dedication for the purposes of the trust.<sup>17</sup> Whether in any particular case a property has been validly dedicated to a trust is a question of fact to be determined by a reference to the terms of the document of dedication where there is one,<sup>18</sup> or, where there is no document or the terms thereof are ambiguous,<sup>19</sup> to the user,<sup>20</sup> treatment,<sup>21</sup> surrounding circumstances<sup>22</sup> and also the feelings and sentiments of the religious community to which the parties belong.<sup>23</sup> The mere fact that the owner of a land built a temple on it and planted a grove thereon,<sup>24</sup> or the fact that a person was spending a large portion of his income from a certain property on a temple founded by him,<sup>25</sup> or the mere fact that the public worshipped there,<sup>26</sup> is insufficient by itself to establish a dedication. But these facts may be some evidence and may be considered in gathering the intention of the founder.<sup>27</sup>

waqf or trust for public or charitable purposes is not valid unless express provision is made for the ultimate devolution of the waqf property to charitable or religious purposes<sup>29</sup> and unless the dedication is a substantial and not merely an illusory one.<sup>30</sup> The mere fact that some provision is made for the maintenance of the grantor's kindred and descendants will not render the waqf invalid.<sup>31</sup> A dedication will not also be invalid merely because it offends the rule against perpetuities<sup>32</sup> or because it is in favour of a nonsentient being like an idol.<sup>33</sup>

The devolution of the trust upon the death or default of the trustee depends upon the terms on which it was created or, in the absence thereof, upon the usages of the particular trust.<sup>34</sup> One of the accepted rules is that the office of the shebait of an idol is vested in the heirs of the founder in default of evidence that he has disposed of it.<sup>35</sup> Again, a person who has founded a temple, whether out of his own funds or out of funds collected by subscriptions, can, in the absence of any prohibition by the subscribers, direct in what manner the trust is to be managed, whether hereditarily or otherwise.<sup>36</sup> In cases of dedication of the completest character to a Hindu idol, the idol is regarded as a juridical person capable of holding property, but in dedications of every kind the possession and management still belongs to the trustees or shebait in whom is vested the right to sue for the protection of the property.<sup>37</sup>

As has been seen already in Note 2 above, a trust, for the purposes of Section 92, may be either express or constructive. The words "express or constructive trust" are not limited to the meaning of the word "trust" as used in English law<sup>38</sup> but should be construed liberally and in a sense as favourable as possible to the assumption of jurisdiction by a Court under Section 92.<sup>39</sup> A "constructive trustee" would include a trustee de son tort who has without title taken upon himself the character of a trustee.<sup>40</sup> It would also include a person, who, though not a trustee de son tort, holds a fiduciary position whose obligation in such capacity can be enforced in a Court of law.<sup>41</sup>

The question whether the head of a mutt holds the mutt properties as a life tenant or as a trustee must depend upon the conditions on which they were given or which may be inferred from usage and treatment.<sup>42</sup> It has been held that he is not a "trustee" in the English sense of the term<sup>43</sup> but is answerable as a trustee for his administration.<sup>44</sup> Section 92 has accordingly been applied to the case of mutts also.<sup>45</sup> The acharya of a temple can be sued under Section 92 as a constructive trustee as his fiduciary position is that of a custodian of property held for public purposes.<sup>46</sup> Similarly, the manager of a temple, as administrator of the temple properties, is a constructive trustee within the meaning of the Section.<sup>47</sup> It may be noted at this stage that the mere fact that the defendant does not admit the trust but claims to be the owner of the trust properties, will not take the suit out of the scope of the Section.<sup>48</sup> Nor will a suit, in which the defendant claims under a trust, be taken out of the Section merely because the plaintiffs challenge the appointment of the defendant as a trustee.<sup>49</sup>

6. In case of alleged breach of trust or where the direction of the Court is deemed necessary for administration.—A suit under Section 92 is primarily against a trustee and can only be instituted on the ground either —

1. that there has been a breach of trust,<sup>1</sup> or
2. that the direction of the Court is deemed necessary for the administration of the trust.<sup>2</sup>

Where a breach of trust is alleged in a suit under Section 92, but the Court decides that there has been no misfeasance or breach of trust, its jurisdiction in the matter ends.<sup>3</sup>

The words "an alleged breach of trust" do not mean that the trust alleged must be one admitted by the defendant.<sup>4</sup> A trustee setting up an adverse title of his own in the trust properties is guilty of a breach of trust, within the meaning of the Section.<sup>5</sup>

Where a trust is partly public and partly private and a breach of trust is alleged in regard to the purposes of the trust which are of a private character, this Section does not apply. The reason is that in such cases there is no allegation of a breach of a trust created for a public purpose, taking the word "trust" in its proper legal sense as denoting an obligation attaching to the owner of a property to administer the property in a defined way.<sup>6</sup>

6. ('39) AIR 1939 Rang 254 (258) : 1939 Rang L R 140 (150).

The words "where the direction of the Court is deemed necessary for the administration of any such trust," must be interpreted as meaning "where the Court has to give direction in the nature of framing a scheme or otherwise for the administration of trust."<sup>7</sup> The mere appointment of a mutawalli is not such a "direction" as is contemplated by the Section and therefore a suit for the appointment of a mutawalli without anything more is not within the Section.<sup>8</sup> This Section does not say that the direction of the Court can be asked for, only where there has been a breach of any express or constructive trust. It contemplates cases where the direction of the Court may be necessary even though there has been no such breach of trust.<sup>9</sup> Thus, a suit for accounts of the trust property and in effect asking for directions as regards the trust funds, is one which falls within the Section.<sup>10</sup>

7. Suit must be in a representative capacity on behalf of the public. —

Section 92 applies only where the suit brought is representative in its nature, that is to say, where the suit is brought by two or more persons as representing the general public, in order to secure the proper administration of a public trust.<sup>1</sup> A suit by the whole body of persons authorized to administer a trust or by all the persons interested in the trust is not within the Section.<sup>2</sup> Again, where a person sues, not to establish the general rights of the public, but to remedy a particular infringement of his individual right in a public trust, the suit is not within the Section.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that the object of the Section is not to determine the conflicting rights of private individuals but to devise the method for fully carrying out the purposes of the trust.<sup>4</sup>

One consideration which is relevant in coming to a conclusion whether an individual right has been infringed is whether, apart from the infringement of the rights of the general body, there is some damage special to the plaintiff in which the other members of the general body are not concerned.<sup>5</sup> The right of the plaintiff to be himself a trustee<sup>6</sup> or to share in the management of the trust or to see that certain trusts are managed by persons entitled to manage them, are all individual rights, the enforcement of which falls outside the scope of the Section.<sup>7</sup> The right of a Mahomedan to use and to worship in a mosque has been held to be a private right existing under the Mahomedan law, independently and wholly irrespective of the rights of

Note 7

A person having an interest in common with others is not obliged to seek any relief on behalf of all others but may maintain an action for the establishment of his own rights.<sup>11</sup> While so suing for the establishment of his private rights, he cannot, at the same time, be regarded as suing in the alternative, on behalf of others also similarly interested.<sup>12</sup> Where a person whose individual rights are affected sues a trustee for reliefs specified in the Section, the suit will nevertheless not be governed by the Section inasmuch as it is not a representative suit on behalf of the public but is one in enforcement of his own rights.<sup>13</sup> Thus, one trustee suing his co-trustee for accounts sues only in his individual capacity and the suit will, consequently, be outside the scope of the Section.<sup>14</sup> The Bombay High Court has, however, held that such a suit is within Section 92 and cannot be instituted without the sanction of the Advocate-General.<sup>15</sup> Their Lordships base their conclusion on the ground that the reliefs claimed being within the Section, the suit cannot be brought except in conformity with it. They do not advert to the principle that a suit must be a representative one also before the Section is made applicable thereto. In this view the conclusions of the Bombay High Court do not seem to be sound. The Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court has held, accepting the principle abovementioned, that a trustee suing his co-trustee for accounts cannot be held to be suing on the basis of an infringement of individual rights and so the Section will apply.<sup>16</sup> The Allahabad High Court has, in an obiter dictum, doubted whether, when a relief claimed falls within the Section, there is any distinction between the enforcement of public rights and of private rights.<sup>17</sup>

It has been held by the Madras High Court that the mere fact that the plaintiffs in a suit are trustees will not necessarily preclude the application of the Section if the reliefs sought relate not to the personal rights of the trustees but to the advancement of the interests of the institution itself by securing more efficient management.<sup>18</sup>

Notes 7-8

Where a trustee of a public charitable trust dies leaving behind him a widow as trustee and a next reversioner who would be in due course entitled to the management of the trust brings a suit against the widow alleging waste and mismanagement and prays for the appointment of a receiver for the management and preservation of the properties, the suit is not for the protection of his own individual or personal rights. The plaintiff is not in the position of a co-trustee because even in respect of the private properties of the deceased male holder, the position of the presumptive reversioner is merely that of a person with a spes successionis. The analogy of an action allowed to a Hindu reversioner under the Hindu law to maintain a declaratory suit during the lifetime of the widow cannot be invoked because, as regards trusteeship, there is no difference between a male holder of the office and a female holder of the office. The suit is therefore governed by this Section and must be in conformity with its provisions.<sup>19</sup>

8. Who can sue — “Two or more persons having an interest in the trust.” — A suit under this Section can be brought by —

- (1) the Advocate-General, or
- (2) two or more persons having an interest in the trust, after getting the sanction of the Advocate-General.<sup>1</sup>

The first essential for a person other than the Advocate-General, to institute a suit under this Section, is that he should have an interest in the trust. Unless he has this, even the written consent of the Advocate-General will not be of any avail.<sup>2</sup> The object of this condition is “to prevent people interfering by virtue of the Section, in the administration of charitable trusts merely in the interests of others and without any real interest of their own.”<sup>3</sup> The Advocate-General is entitled to intervene at any stage<sup>4</sup> and is entitled to be heard.<sup>5</sup>

Under the English Law, the plaintiff in a suit of the description mentioned in this Section was required to have direct interest in the trust.<sup>6</sup> This rule was adopted by the Code of 1877 and re-enacted in Section 539 of the Code of 1882, which thus required the plaintiffs to have a direct interest in the trust.<sup>7</sup> The limitation of “direct interest” was not thought expedient in India and therefore, by Section 44 of the Civil Procedure Code (Amendment) Act, 1888, the word “direct” was omitted.<sup>8</sup> The effect of the amendment is to widen the class of persons entitled to institute a suit under this Section.<sup>9</sup> But the interest required even under this Section as amended must be a clear interest in the particular trust over and above that which men may be said to have by virtue of their religion. It must be a real, substantive and an existing interest and not merely a remote, fictitious or a contingent one,<sup>10</sup> though it need not be a direct interest in the sense that only a beneficiary can institute a suit.<sup>11</sup> Whether a person has an interest in a particular trust has to be determined on the facts bearing on the relation of the person to the trust with reference to which the suit is brought.<sup>12</sup>

The following persons have all been held to have a sufficient interest within the meaning of the Section —

- (1) The founder and his representatives or persons of the same sect and form of religious worship as that of the founder of the religious endowment for carrying on the sectional worship.<sup>13</sup> So also are persons who have contributed to the funds of a trust,<sup>14</sup> or who have devoted time and energy in the affairs of the trust.<sup>15</sup>

Mere residence without user will not create any interest in the trust.<sup>17</sup>

a temple.<sup>31</sup>

- (6) Persons authorised by law to sue.<sup>22</sup>
- (7) Actual worshippers of a temple or mosque.<sup>23</sup>
- (8) There is a conflict of opinion as to whether the mere fact that a person is, as Hindu or Mahomedan entitled to worship in a temple or mosque, is enough to maintain a suit under Section 92. The Madras High Court has held that it is not. Thus, A living in Madras, and having gone to Tellicherry once or twice before and worshipped in a temple there, cannot be said to have a sufficient interest in the Tellicherry temple, to enable him to maintain a suit under this Section.<sup>24</sup> The Lahore High Court has, in an earlier case,<sup>25</sup> disagreed with this view on the ground that the mere fact of being a worshipper, itself gives a substantial interest in the temple or mosque though in a later case of the same High Court<sup>26</sup> the view taken by the Madras High Court has been accepted. The Allahabad High Court and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind are also inclined to the same view as that of the Lahore High Court in the earlier case.<sup>27</sup>

A suit under this Section must be instituted by two or more persons having an interest in the trust.<sup>28</sup> As has already been observed, a suit brought by the whole body of persons authorised or interested is outside the Section.<sup>29</sup> But the necessity of two persons suing is restricted to the institution of the suit. A surviving plaintiff appellant alone can carry on the appeal in the suit which was originally instituted by two or more persons as required.<sup>30</sup> Where a suit is instituted by two or more persons interested, the joining of a person also who is not interested will not affect the institution of the suit.<sup>31</sup> There is a difference of opinion as to whether, when the suit under this Section is instituted by one plaintiff alone, the defect could be cured by subsequent amendment of the plaint by adding other persons as plaintiffs after getting the necessary consent. The Bombay High Court has held that the defect in the institution cannot be so cured.<sup>32</sup> Though the Madras High Court holds a contrary opinion,<sup>33</sup> it does not base its decision on any principle but simply purports to follow the previous rulings of that Court. It is submitted that the Madras view is not sound.

certain properties are trust properties, are not within the Section.<sup>1</sup> It has also been seen that Section 92 will apply only where the relief asked for is one of the reliefs specified in the Section.<sup>2</sup> A suit, therefore, for a declaration that the plaintiff is the duly constituted trustee,<sup>3</sup> or that plaintiff is entitled to an office<sup>4</sup> or that plaintiff, as founder of the trust, has a right to appoint the trustees<sup>5</sup> is outside the scope of the Section.

At the same time, when a suit is substantially one falling under Section 92, its requirements cannot be evaded by asking for a bare declaration under the Specific Relief Act.<sup>6</sup> A declaration may also be granted where it is ancillary to the relief claimed in the Section.<sup>7</sup>

13. Appointment of Receiver. — In a suit under Section 92, the Court has power, under the general clause (h) of the Section, to appoint a Receiver pendente lite and take the management of the trust out of the hands of the trustees.<sup>1</sup>

14. Costs. — The Court has power in a scheme suit to order that a party should bear his own costs or that the costs of all the parties should come out of the trust estate, or to pass such other order as it thinks fit.<sup>1</sup> Where, however, the Judge decides that there is no misfeasance, his jurisdiction in the matter ends and he cannot order that the costs should come out of the estate.<sup>2</sup> Costs of Advocate-General, as between attorney and client, come, as a rule, out of the trust fund;<sup>3</sup> so also the cost of the trustee defendants if they are incurred for purposes of administration of the trust; but the taxing officer's order to the contrary will not be set aside by the Court.<sup>4</sup>

15. Removing a trustee — Clause (a). — This clause is new. Under the old Code there was a conflict of opinion as to whether a prayer, in a scheme suit, for the removal of the trustee could be granted by the Court. The Calcutta, Bombay, Allahabad and Lahore High Courts, following earlier decisions of the Madras High Court<sup>1</sup> held that it could be granted, either as coming within the words "such further or other relief" or as being involved in the prayer for the appointment of a new trustee.<sup>2</sup> Later decisions of the Madras High Court, however, held that such a prayer could not be granted under the Section.<sup>3</sup> The conflict is now set at rest by the introduction of this new clause<sup>4</sup> and a suit for removal of a trustee can now be brought under Section 92 even if the plaintiffs challenge the appointment of the defendant as a trustee.<sup>5</sup>

There has been a difference of opinion as to whether a suit by some trustees, for a declaration that the appointment of the defendant as a co-trustee is invalid and for an injunction restraining him from interfering with his management, is a suit for the removal of a trustee falling within this Section. The Madras and Patna High Courts held that the case may be regarded as one in which the direction of the Court is necessary for the administration of the trust, and the relief claimed, cognate to the removal of a trustee, and that, therefore, the suit is governed by this Section.<sup>6</sup> The Bombay High Court, on the other hand, holds that the mere fact that it resembles a suit for the removal of a trustee will not make the Section applicable. The suit must be clearly one within the Section and must be based on a breach of trust or on the necessity of the direction of the Court being given for the administration of the trust.<sup>7</sup>

The guiding principle in granting or refusing a prayer for the removal of a trustee under this Section is to see whether in the particular case, it is for the welfare of the trust to do so,<sup>8</sup> having regard to the original purposes of the trust.<sup>9</sup> The primary duty of the Court is to consider the interests of the public or that part of the public for whose benefit the trust was created.<sup>10</sup> Every mistake, neglect of duty or inaccuracy of conduct is not necessarily a ground for removal.<sup>11</sup> Nor is even misconduct on the part of the trustee such a ground unless it is for the benefit of the trust to remove him.<sup>12</sup> On the other hand, a Court can always remove a trustee under this Section even in the absence of proof of misconduct or misappropriation if it is in the interests of the trust to do so.<sup>13</sup>

The following grounds have been held sufficient, to order the removal of a trustee in the interests of the trust —

- (1) Trustee, asserting a hostile title in himself to the trust properties or alienating the same<sup>14</sup> or claiming a right to utilise the income for his own purposes.<sup>15</sup> A mere assertion, however, that the trust properties are his private properties is not a sufficient ground for his removal unless his attitude is unreasonable or mala fide, and amounting to a breach of trust.<sup>16</sup>
- (2) Trustee who is guilty of a breach of trust or misappropriation of the trust funds<sup>17</sup> or who has concurred in a breach of trust.<sup>18</sup>
- (3) Falsification of accounts.<sup>19</sup>
- (4) Trustee being guilty of wanton waste and neglect of duty.<sup>20</sup>
- (5) Lack of capacity to manage.<sup>21</sup>

Section 92
Notes 15-16

Where, in a suit by one trustee under this Section for removal of another co-trustee the latter charges the plaintiff himself as being guilty of misconduct, the Court can go into the question and if necessary remove the plaintiff himself from the trusteeship.<sup>22</sup>

The High Court of Madras has held that the right to pray for the removal of a trustee does not, however, carry with it the right to possession of the lands attached to the trust.<sup>23</sup> But the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur has held that, in a suit under this Section for the removal of a trustee, a decree for delivery of possession of the trust properties to the new trustee could be granted.<sup>24</sup>

It was held by the Bombay High Court that where the Court frames a scheme in a suit under this Section, it is desirable to provide therein for the removal of the trustees for breaches of trust, so that the removal of the trustee, in case of default, may be obtained by way of execution of the decree and without the trouble and expense of a regular suit.<sup>25</sup> The said decision has, however, been dissented from by the High Court of Madras<sup>26</sup> and the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Nagpur<sup>27</sup> and does not appear to be a sound one in view of the decision in the Privy Council in the undermentioned case.<sup>28</sup> In any case, where the scheme does not provide for the removal of the trustee, an application for the removal of the trustee is not the proper procedure but a suit under this Section is necessary.<sup>29</sup> Where a scheme provides for the removal of a trustee for unfitness, the power can be exercised in the course of proceedings arising out of the scheme, even though the trustee be found unfit by reason of a breach of trust and a suit under this Section is not necessary.<sup>30</sup> Where a hereditary trustee is removed by a decree in a scheme suit, it is not proper to provide in the decree that the descendants of the trustee are for ever debarred from holding the office.<sup>31</sup>

As to whether a sajjadanashin can be removed under this Section, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>32</sup>

Where a will creates a trust and the trustees are wrongly called 'executors,' the proper procedure for removal of the trustees is by a suit under this Section and not by a petition under Section 301 of the Succession Act.<sup>33</sup>

16. Appointment of a new trustee — Clause (b). — Under this Section, the Court has complete discretion in appointing any person as a trustee and in arranging for the management of the trust.<sup>1</sup> One of the principles to be remembered in exercising the power of appointing a trustee is that no right of inheritance attaches to a religious institution. It is by appointment that one officer succeeds to another and such appointment is made either by the original founder, or by the superintendent of the trust, or failing these, by the ruling power. The appointment of a mutawalli to a waqf is a matter regarding religious usages within the meaning of Regulation XV of 1793 and must be determined with reference to the provisions of the Mahomedan law on the subject. In respect of waqfs created for public purposes of a religious nature, the District Judge may be assumed to have been authorised by virtue of Section 92 to exercise the powers of a Kazi.<sup>3</sup>

The duty of the Court is to appoint the most suitable persons available as trustees whether originally impleaded in the suit or not and, in doing so, it should take into consideration the wishes and rights of the founder, the past history of the institution and the way in which the management was carried out in the past.<sup>3</sup>

Section 539 of the old Code contained the words "new trustees under the trust." And this gave room for arguments that the appointment must be "in conformity with the original constitution of the trust or with the rules in force in respect of it." This argument was however negatived by decisions which accordingly held that it was competent for the Court to appoint new or additional trustees though not in conformity with the original constitution of the trust, if the interests of the trust demand it.<sup>4</sup> The same view will obviously prevail under the present Code. A Court will, however, refrain from appointing a person declared not fit to be appointed, by the author of the trust.<sup>5</sup>

The words "new trustee" under the Code mean "new trustee in the place of an old one" and therefore the Section applies only when a new trustee is sought to be appointed in the place of an old one and not to a case where there is no mutawalli, and the Court is asked to appoint a mutawalli.<sup>6</sup> In cases of the latter class the Court can appoint a mutawalli without a suit under the Section and in the exercise of the powers of a Kazi under the Mahomedan law. Under that law it was the duty of the Kazi whenever there was no one to administer the trust, to see that it was properly administered and for that purpose, to appoint a suitable trustee or manager of the property. That power, as has been already mentioned, now lies with the District Judge<sup>7</sup> and a Sub-Judge cannot recall the order of a District Judge or appoint a mutawalli.<sup>9</sup>

Where a trustee dies and the disciples of the mutt were authorised by custom in such cases to appoint a successor, a suit for a declaration by the disciples that the defendant was not validly appointed, that he should be ejected and that a successor of the deceased trustee should be appointed, is misconceived and does not lie under Section 92.<sup>9</sup>

17. Vesting any property in a trustee — Clause (c). — This clause gives power to the Court, where it removes a trustee and appoints a new trustee, to vest the trust property in the new trustee.<sup>1</sup> This clause refers to cases where a new trustee is appointed and is not intended to cover cases in which it is sought to recover possession of the trust property by ejecting trespassers who are wrongfully in possession of it.<sup>2</sup> See also Note 28 infra.

18. Directing accounts and inquiries — Clause (d). — This clause is new. A relief for accounts was not one of the reliefs specifically provided by Section 539 of the old Code. But the Bombay High Court held that a relief of the nature indicated in this clause came within the words "such further or other relief"<sup>1</sup> and that it was the first and most important thing to be done in such suits.<sup>2</sup> This has been made clear by the introduction of the new clause giving effect to the Bombay decisions. A suit for accounts of the trust property will now clearly fall within the Section.<sup>3</sup>

An order for the payment of the amount found to be due on the taking of accounts will be within the Section.<sup>4</sup> But a claim for damages for loss caused by the misconduct of the trustee is not one of the reliefs specified in the Section and cannot be granted in a suit for directing accounts and inquiries.<sup>5</sup>

In taking accounts under this Section, the claim of the trustee against the trust for monies due to him may also be considered, even if his right to sue in respect of those items is barred by limitation. The reason is that though the right to sue is barred, the claim is otherwise unaffected.<sup>6</sup>

It is also a general principle that back accounting will not be decreed except on proof of dishonesty and malversation.<sup>7</sup>

19. Declaring what proportion, etc. — Clause (e). — The words "what proportion of the trust property or of the interest therein shall be allocated to any particular object of the trust" have been substituted for the words "the proportion in which its objects are entitled" in order to make the clause more clear. Section 92.
Notes 19-21

A suit for a declaration as to whether the offerings made to a deity belong to the pujaris exclusively or should be divided between the pujaris and the temple servants and if so what proportion of the offerings should be allocated to the pujaris and the temple servants respectively, is one coming under this clause<sup>1</sup> inasmuch as the suit is in substance one to declare what the trust properties are and for the directions of the Court for the administration of the trust properties.

20. Authorising alienation of trust property — Clause (f). — As has already been seen in Note 16 above, the powers of a Kazi under the Mahomedan law are exercised by the District Judge in the mufassil<sup>1</sup> and where a mutawalli claims permission to execute a lease, it can be granted by the District Judge in the exercise of his powers as Kazi and without any suit for that purpose. It is only where all the essentials for the applicability of the Section are present, that such a permission must be sought for by way of a suit.<sup>2</sup>

It is a general principle of law that though it is not competent as a rule for a shebait to alienate trust property, yet he will be entitled to do so where it is necessary for the benefit or preservation of the estate or for the purpose of preventing it from hostile or litigious attacks.<sup>3</sup> The position of a shebait or head of a mutt is, in fact, that of the manager of an infant heir and where debts are contracted by him for purposes binding on the mutt, a decree will be passed charging the income of the mutt for such debts.<sup>4</sup> Where the shebait or trustee as such commits trespass and is mulcted in damages against the estate, the debutter property will be liable for it.<sup>5</sup>

Debutter property is not absolutely inalienable but can be alienated for legal necessity. The trustee can create derivative tenures over the trust property conformable to usage<sup>6</sup> but a permanent lease at a fixed rent for all time cannot be a proper act of management and will be, on the other hand, a breach of duty.<sup>7</sup>

21. Settling a scheme — Clause (g). — The Civil Court which in the British Indian system, has taken the place of the Kazi in the Mahomedan law, has a complete discretion in arranging for the management of a public trust, though "in giving effect to the provisions of this Section and in appointing new trustees and settling a scheme it is entitled to take into consideration, not merely the wishes of the founder so far as they can be ascertained, but also the past history of the institution and the way in which the management has been carried out heretofore, in conjunction with other existing conditions that may have grown up since its foundation."<sup>1</sup> Such conditions would include the existing rights of individuals to the trusteeship of endowment, though the Courts are averse generally to the creation of a hereditary right to the office of a public trustee.<sup>2</sup>

The main thing to be remembered is the welfare and interests of the trust.<sup>3</sup> The jurisdiction of the Court to frame a scheme is not excluded by the fact that the temple, for which the scheme is to be framed, is subject to a temple committee<sup>4</sup> or is managed by a caste or section of the public.<sup>5</sup> It is desirable, however, that it should be framed in such a way as to meet the exigencies of the case without unduly interfering with the powers of the temple committee,<sup>6</sup> or impairing the authority of the mahant or the duly constituted manager of the institution.<sup>7</sup>

In framing a scheme under the Section, the Court is not restricted to the arrangement contemplated by the author of the trust, though as a general rule, it ought not to depart therefrom except for very strong reasons.<sup>8</sup> Thus, the Court can provide for the management by co-trustees in rotation or otherwise alter the original scheme in the interests of the institution<sup>9</sup> such as by providing for new or additional trustees.<sup>10</sup>

The ground on which the relief for the settlement of a scheme should be granted does not depend upon any charges against the trustees at all, but upon its being necessary for the welfare of the trust and upon its being conducive to the better management of the trust property.<sup>11</sup> When a scheme is working properly, the Court will, in fact, refuse to alter it on the mere allegation of mismanagement and malversation by the trustees.<sup>12</sup> Such a ground is not sufficient for altering the scheme itself, though it may be a ground for removal of the trustees.<sup>13</sup> Where, however, there is mismanagement and there is a large surplus income unspent,<sup>14</sup> or, where a temple has got temple properties and also kattalai properties (which are in the nature of distinct endowments themselves) and the management and mixing up of the various kattalais is likely to lead to embezzlement, it will be a sufficient ground to seek the aid of the Court in framing a scheme.<sup>15</sup> In fact, in that case, separate schemes should be framed for the temple properties and the kattalai properties.<sup>16</sup>

The Court may, and it is desirable that it should, do the following things in framing a scheme:

- (1) Give necessary directions with reference to the property of the trust and the income therefrom.<sup>17</sup> A scheme which does not ascertain the income and expenses of the trust is an unsatisfactory scheme.<sup>18</sup>

- (2) Provide some authority for supervising the administration by the trustees.<sup>19</sup> But a clause empowering the Court to exercise disciplinary jurisdiction over the trustees is invalid as it makes the Court practically the superintendent of the institution.<sup>20</sup>
- (3) Provide that any person interested in addition to the trustee, shall be at liberty to ask the Court by way of application for directions to carry out the scheme.<sup>21</sup> There is a conflict of opinion as to whether a reservation of a right to a person or persons to ask the Court by way of application for a relief coming within the Section is valid. The High Court of Madras and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur have held that such a reservation is ultra vires inasmuch as such relief can only be granted in a suit under Section 92.<sup>22</sup> The High Courts of Calcutta and Patna, on the other hand, appear to be of the opinion that such a reservation is intra vires.<sup>23</sup> There is also a conflict of opinion as to whether a reservation of a right to seek, by way of application, a modification or alteration of the scheme later on is or is not ultra vires. The High Courts of Madras and Rangoon and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind hold that such a reservation is ultra vires as it offends against Section 92 which requires that the remedy should be by way of a suit.<sup>24</sup> The High Courts of Bombay and Allahabad have, on the other hand, held a contrary view.<sup>25</sup>

scheme and hence is not ultra vires, even assuming that a provision for modification would be ultra vires.<sup>26</sup>

Where a scheme contains a clause reserving liberty to apply for directions to work out the scheme but the persons who are to apply are not specified, the proper persons who can apply under the liberty clause are the parties to the suit, and, in case they are dead or are colluding with the defendants or are negligent in applying, other persons wishing to so apply may be allowed to do so after bringing them on the record under O. 1 R. 10 of the Code.<sup>27</sup> Where, however, the persons who are to apply are specified, it is not open to any other person to make an application for directions.<sup>28</sup> Where a scheme provides for the modification of the scheme by the Court on the application of parties interested in the institution, (assuming such provision is ultra vires) any person who may have an interest in the institution from time to time, whether or not he is a party or representative of a party to the original litigation, is entitled to make an application for the modification of the scheme.<sup>29</sup>

Where a compromise decree is passed embodying a scheme whereby certain persons were to be elected trustees subject to confirmation by the High Court, the provision regarding confirmation is not ultra vires.<sup>30</sup>

A scheme once framed and settled by the Court can be varied by the Court, but only on substantial grounds.<sup>31</sup> But a suit to establish the private rights of the plaintiff which would, if established, alter the scheme framed, is not maintainable.<sup>32</sup>

The authority of the Court to deal with matters arising under the scheme is derived only from the scheme itself, and cannot be exercised independently of it.<sup>33</sup> Thus, where a scheme provides for an application to the Court for necessary directions in the management of the trust, the Court cannot order in execution that the trustee should pay the archakas their salaries.<sup>34</sup>

A scheme once framed is to be interpreted in all respects as if it were an Act,<sup>35</sup> as reasonable a construction as possible being given to it when the provisions are doubtful or defective.<sup>36</sup>

In Gopal Lal Sett v. Purna Chandra Basak,<sup>37</sup> a decision of the Privy Council, the following passage occurs: "..... they (their Lordships of the Privy Council) regard the gift as in effect a private trust to which the provisions of Section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure would not apply, and consequently, the establishment of a scheme for its administration as provided by the decree of the High Court is inappropriate."

But, in Bimal Krishna v. Shebait of Sri Sri Iswar Radha Ballav,<sup>39</sup> the Calcutta High Court held that the Civil Court is competent to entertain a suit the object of which is to have a scheme established for the administration of a private debutter. In this case, the decision of the Privy Council in Gopal Sett v. Purna Chandra Basak was distinguished in the following words :

"It is clear from the facts set out in that judgment (the Privy Council judgment) that in this case (i. e., the Privy Council case), there was no gift to the idols but the property was given to one Udoj who was made a trustee in the legal sense of the word and upon whom were cast certain duties both religious and secular in their nature. He was to perform the worship of a certain idol with the income of a particular property and the remainder of the income was given to three people whose names were given in the will. In a case like this, where a private trust was created not of a purely religious character and the ownership of the property was vested in the trustee in the legal sense of the word, the Court could not possibly frame a scheme for the administration of the trust estate. In a religious endowment, however, where the deity who is a perpetual infant is the legal owner of the property and the shebait occupies the position of managers or guardians, the position is different. . . . In India, the Crown is the constitutional protector of all infants and as the deity occupies in law the position of an infant, the shebait who represents the deity are entitled to seek the assistance of the Court in case of mismanagement or maladministration of the deity's estate and to have a proper scheme for management framed which would end the disputes amongst the guardians and prevent the debutter estate from being wasted or ruined."

Where a scheme for a private trust has been settled by an award and a decree passed thereon, it cannot be varied or altered by consent of parties where the scheme itself does not provide for such alteration.<sup>40</sup>

Where a public trust has been constituted under a will, it is not necessary that a suit for administration of the estate should first be brought before a scheme could be framed under this Section, except in a case where it is doubtful whether there would be funds sufficient to the charitable bequest.<sup>41</sup>

See also Note 15 supra and Note 34 infra.

22. Court's power to apply the Cypres Doctrine.—The provincial Courts had originally no equitable jurisdiction to act on the cypres doctrine in the administration of trusts. Section 539 of the old Code remedied this defect and enabled the Courts to exercise such jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup>

The doctrine should receive as extended an application as possible, so as to give effect to the true intent and aim of the donor or founder.<sup>2</sup> But in order to apply the doctrine, the Court should be satisfied that the original object cannot be carried out in the manner and form intended by the donor.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where the objects of the trust are not suited to modern conditions and there is a general charitable intention in the terms of the endowment, the Court is competent to apply the funds of the charity cypres.<sup>4</sup>

Notes 22-23

Where the original object is impossible of performance or is impracticable in fact or would be *impolit*ic to carry out literally, the doctrine can be applied, although impossibility of performance is not a condition precedent to its applicability.<sup>5</sup>

Again, where the mode indicated by the donor does not exhaust the surplus and the same has accumulated in the hands of the trustees, it will be necessary, in order to prevent waste and embezzlement thereof, to prepare a scheme cypres for the utilization of the fund.<sup>6</sup>

Where grants are made to religious institutions as a general thanks-offering, it is proper and legitimate to apply them cypres to the promotion of knowledge.<sup>7</sup>

A charitable bequest does not lapse into residue on the failure of the object of the bequest, and a Court can execute it cypres<sup>8</sup> unless upon the construction of the will a direction to the contrary can be implied.<sup>9</sup>

23. Sanction of the Advocate-General. — A suit under this Section must be brought with the sanction of the Advocate-General.<sup>1</sup> The object of the sanction is to protect the trust property as well as the trustees from an indefinite number of reckless and harassing suits being brought against the trustees.<sup>2</sup> A sanction under the Section obviates, in respect of the classes of suits described in the Section, the necessity of following the procedure for a suit brought in a representative capacity under O. 1, R. 8, Civil Procedure Code.<sup>3</sup> Under the old Code, it had been held by some decisions that a suit coming within the Section could be instituted without sanction by following the procedure under O. 1 R. 8 of the Code.<sup>4</sup> The present Section is now clearly imperative, and a suit of the nature specified cannot be instituted except in conformity with the requirements of the Section.<sup>5</sup>

An objection as to want of sanction is one which goes to the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the suit and as such cannot, under general principles of law, be waived.<sup>6</sup>

It is only the plaintiffs in the suit under Section 92 that have to obtain the sanction of the Advocate-General. Persons who seek to be made defendants to a scheme suit need not obtain any sanction.<sup>7</sup>

Section 92
Notes 23-25

In a suit instituted under Section 92 by persons interested, a Court has power under O. 1 R. 10 to join the Advocate-General as party in order to effectually and finally adjudicate upon the questions relating to the administration of the trust.<sup>8</sup>

24. Nature of and form of consent. — In granting the "consent in writing" required by the Section, the Advocate-General or the Collector has to exercise his judgment and see whether the petitioners have an interest in the trust, whether the trust is one contemplated by the Section, and whether there is a prima facie case of a breach of trust.<sup>1</sup> The fact that the Advocate-General or the Collector originally refused to grant sanction under this Section will not preclude him from subsequently changing his mind on further consideration and granting the sanction.<sup>2</sup> But a wrong exercise or a non-exercise of judgment is only an irregularity curable under Section 99 of the Code.<sup>3</sup>

A consent, in order to be a valid one, must be unconditional. A conditional consent is no consent at all for the purposes of the Section.<sup>4</sup>

The Advocate-General or the Collector giving consent under this Section has no jurisdiction to impose any time limit within which the suit is to be brought and if he does so, the condition will not be binding.<sup>5</sup>

There is no particular form in which the consent ought to be given. In the Bombay Presidency it is the practice for the Advocate-General to endorse his consent upon the plaint.<sup>6</sup> But the consent must be a specific permission to two persons by name. A permission to one person named "and another" is not sufficient.<sup>7</sup> Where, however, two persons apply for permission and it is granted to one of them by name "and the other applicant," it is a sufficient permission inasmuch as "the other applicant" is clearly ascertainable by name.<sup>8</sup> This Section does not require that details as regards the names of the proposed defendants and the reliefs should be stated in the order granting the sanction.<sup>9</sup>

A permission granted "to institute a suit under Section 539" is not limited to any particular species of suits mentioned in the Section or in the application for sanction.<sup>10</sup>

25. Consent, when necessary — Effect of consent. — The obtaining of a "consent in writing" of the Advocate-General is a condition precedent to a valid institution of a suit under this Section. Where no such consent has been obtained, the suit must be dismissed, and cannot be rectified by any subsequent amendment.<sup>1</sup>

Note 25

The question whether this Section applies to a suit depends on the prayers in the plaint at the date when the suit is instituted and the Section cannot be evaded by an amendment of the plaint at a later date.<sup>2</sup> Where sanction has been obtained but the suit is otherwise defective and in order to remedy such defect the Court adds other parties who have subsequently obtained sanction, such sanction will relate back to the date of institution.<sup>3</sup>

Where in a suit instituted with the required sanction the Court adds a new defendant under O. 1 R. 10 in order to effectually and completely adjudicate upon all the questions involved in the suit, but such addition does not alter the nature of the suit, no new sanction need be obtained<sup>4</sup> nor need it be obtained for transposing a defendant to the array of plaintiffs.<sup>5</sup> Where such addition or other amendment does alter the nature of the suit, a fresh sanction is necessary.<sup>6</sup> Thus, an amendment relating to a fresh cause of action involving a fresh addition of parties and fresh reliefs against them requires the sanction of the Advocate-General.<sup>7</sup> The Calcutta High Court has held in a recent decision<sup>8</sup> that where a representative suit relating to a trust has been instituted with the consent of the Advocate-General under this Section, no fresh consent is necessary in the case of each fresh addition of a party and that any member of the public who is interested in the trust may come in and carry on the suit or appeal, as the case may be, without obtaining a fresh sanction. Where sanction is given on the basis of a breach of trust and the plaintiffs seek amendment later by giving particulars of the breach of the trust, such amendment does not alter the nature of the suit and no sanction is necessary for such amendment.<sup>9</sup>

Where the addition of a relief which is not sanctioned is made to reliefs which are sanctioned, the suit should not on that ground be dismissed but the portion covered by the sanction should be heard and decided.<sup>10</sup> The said additional prayer may be withdrawn<sup>11</sup> or struck off and no sanction is necessary therefor.<sup>12</sup> On the other hand, where sanction is given for certain reliefs and the plaintiffs institute the suit for some only of the reliefs sanctioned, the suit as instituted will be materially different from that sanctioned originally and should, therefore, be rejected.<sup>13</sup>

Where sanction is granted to several persons, the suit cannot be validly instituted by some of them only. The suit as instituted must conform to the consent.<sup>14</sup> When once a suit has been validly instituted with the consent of the Advocate-General, it is a representative suit subject to all the incidents affecting suits in general and representative suits in particular and the requirement as to consent of the Advocate-General has no reference to any other stage than the institution of the suit.<sup>15</sup>

The fact that a sanction has been obtained by the plaintiff from the Advocate-General is by itself no ground for framing a scheme in the suit.<sup>16</sup>

The motives actuating the persons who have obtained sanction do not affect the validity of the sanction.<sup>17</sup>

26. Consent not necessary for appeal. — It has been held by the Privy Council that when sanction has been given by the Advocate-General to more than two persons to institute a suit under this Section, an appeal from the decision in such suit can be filed by one or some only of such persons and need not be filed by all of them, the reason being that sub-section 2 of this Section only applies to the institution of a suit and not to the further stages of the suit.<sup>1</sup> The decisions cited below<sup>2</sup> are therefore no longer good law.

In the undermentioned decision,<sup>3</sup> two persons who had obtained the consent of the Advocate-General sued under the Section and also filed an appeal against the decision in such suit. Then, another person who was interested in the trust applied to the Court on the allegation that the two plaintiffs had been colluding with the defendant and praying that if they did not wish to prosecute the appeal she might be added as a party appellant on the record so that she might proceed with the appeal. It was held by the Calcutta High Court that the consent of the Advocate-General was not necessary for this.

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>4</sup>

27. Function of the Advocate-General. — The position of the Advocate-General corresponds, by statutory enactments, to the position held by the Attorney-

General in England.<sup>1</sup> He can himself initiate proceedings as well as grant sanction to others.<sup>2</sup>

The powers of the Advocate-General under Section 539 of the old Code were conferred on the Collector by a Government Resolution. And, by virtue of Section 157 of this Code, the powers so conferred under the old Code operate under the present Code also.<sup>3</sup> The Collector can, in the mufasil, thus exercise the powers of the Advocate-General under this section.<sup>4</sup>

The functions of the Advocate-General or the Collector under this Section cannot be delegated to, or exercised by, others. The reason is (that is the object of empowering them is) that the duties to be discharged by them are of a special nature which require anxious consideration by the very persons empowered. An Assistant Collector discharging the functions of the Collector in certain matters, cannot exercise the power of granting sanction under the Section.<sup>5</sup> But a sanction granted by the Collector is valid though it is signed by the Sheristadar "by order" of the Collector.<sup>6</sup>

28. Parties to a suit under the Section. — It is a general principle to be remembered in dealing with cases under this Section that the grant of reliefs against third parties is outside the scope of the Section.<sup>1</sup> The reason is two-fold — firstly, the object of the Section is to protect trustees from vexatious and harassing suits and not to protect trespassers and third parties from suits against them;<sup>2</sup> secondly, a relief against a third party is not one of the reliefs specified in the Section and cannot be brought within the words "such further or other relief" which should be construed ejusdem generis with the preceding clauses, and not as including reliefs wholly outside.<sup>3</sup>

It follows as a consequence that in a suit under Section 92, no relief such as the recovery of possession, or ejectment or rendition of accounts can be granted against third parties such as trespassers or alienees of the trust properties;<sup>4</sup> and vice versa a

by the Calcutta High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>10</sup> that where a stranger receives property which he knows to be part of the trust estate, he is a constructive trustee and relief against him can be claimed in a suit under this Section.

It would seem to logically follow from the principle that no relief can be granted against third parties under this Section, that such third parties are not necessary or proper parties to the suit. There has, however, been a divergence of opinion on the point, and at least four different views have been expressed —

- (a) The Calcutta High Court has held that it is not competent to the Court to implead an alienee at all in the suit.<sup>11</sup> The High Court of Rangoon also has held that strangers to the trust are not proper or necessary parties to a suit under this Section and that in such a suit the plaintiffs who have wrongly impleaded third parties cannot pray in aid the provisions of O. 1 R. 3 or O. 1 R. 10.<sup>12</sup>
- (b) The Madras High Court has held that an alienee cannot be made a party to the suit<sup>13</sup> against his will but may, if he himself desires it, be made a party.<sup>14</sup> If he is impleaded against his will, the suit should be dismissed against him.<sup>15</sup> Even if he is a party the Court is not bound to decide whether the alienation in his favour is binding on the institution.<sup>16</sup> In a later decision,<sup>17</sup> the Madras High Court has held that an alienee of the trust property though not a necessary party is a proper party to the suit under this Section.
- (c) The Allahabad High Court has held that the alienee though not a necessary party<sup>18</sup> is a proper party to the suit<sup>19</sup> and any decree passed in the suit will be binding on him.<sup>20</sup>
- (d) The Bombay High Court has held that the alienee is a necessary party to the suit and that suit could not be decided in his absence. Yet ejectment decree was not passed against him even though he was a party.<sup>21</sup>

It must not, however, be inferred from the above discussion that no suit can be brought against third parties under this Section unless they are trustees de jure or de facto or de son tort. It is only when a relief outside the Section is asked for (such as possession or ejectment) against a third party that it cannot be granted. A suit for a scheme or for the appointment of a new trustee or for directions, can, and sometimes can only be brought against persons in possession of trust property, who either claim the same as their own, or who deny the validity of the trust.<sup>23</sup> Otherwise, it will lead to this, namely, that no suit can be brought under this Section in a case where all the trustees are dead or refuse to act.

Where an alienee is made a party and a declaration is granted against the alienee and the latter appeals therefrom, the trustee is not a necessary party to the appeal as a relief could be granted to the alienee in appeal without the presence of the trustees.<sup>23</sup>

Under O. 1 R. 10, a Court can join the Advocate-General as a party to a suit brought by persons interested under S. 92, in order to effectually and finally adjudicate upon the questions relating to the administration of the trust.<sup>24</sup> See also the undermentioned decision.<sup>25</sup>

29. Compromise of suit. — In earlier decisions of the Calcutta High Court it was held that as long as the question whether the endowment is a public one or not is still in dispute, or if it is proved that the endowment is a public one, a suit under Section 92 cannot be compromised.<sup>1</sup> This view has been dissented from in a later decision of the same Court. It was there held that O. 23 of the Code does not exclude suits under this Section and that there is nothing in law to prevent the Court from passing a compromise decree.<sup>2</sup> The Madras High Court has assumed the correctness of this view but holds that a compromise under which any portion of the trust properties is given to a stranger ought not to be sanctioned by the Court.<sup>3</sup> See also the case cited below.<sup>4</sup>

30. Abatement of suit. — Before the decision of the Judicial Committee in Raja Anand Rao v. Ramdas Daduram<sup>1</sup> there was a conflict of decisions as to whether, where one of the two plaintiffs dies, the suit abates unless some other person who has the necessary interest and who has obtained the required sanction is brought on record in his place. The Allahabad High Court held that it did,<sup>2</sup> while the Madras High Court and the Chief Court of the Punjab held that it did not abate, on the ground that the suit is a representative one instituted on behalf of all the persons interested in the trust, and that the Court could add parties even without their obtaining the sanction of the Advocate-General.<sup>3</sup> According to the Oudh Judicial

Notes 30-33

Commissioner's Court, the necessity for co-operation of two or more persons is confined to the institution of the suit, and therefore when one plaintiff dies, the surviving plaintiff can alone carry on the suit or appeal.<sup>4</sup>

The Judicial Committee, in the abovementioned case, has held that a suit under Section 92 is not prosecuted by individuals for their own interests but as representatives of the general public, and that such a suit does not fail on the death of the parties who originally filed the suit.<sup>5</sup> The Allahabad view therefore seems to be no longer law.<sup>6</sup>

Where in a suit under this Section against a trustee, the defendant trustee dies, the question whether the suit abates depends upon the relief claimed in the suit. If the relief claimed is solely the removal of the trustee, the suit will, of course, abate. But if, in addition to the removal, other reliefs, such as the framing of a scheme, are prayed for, the suit will not abate but will survive against the successor-in-office of the deceased defendant.<sup>7</sup>

31. Suit, if can be brought in forma pauperis. — The provisions of O. 33 of the Code could not have been intended by the Legislature to be combined with those of Section 92 and therefore a suit under Section 92 cannot be instituted in forma pauperis especially when the plaintiffs' intention to sue as paupers was not brought to the notice of the Advocate-General before granting sanction.<sup>1</sup>

32. Suit under the Section need not be contentious. — Section 539 of the old Code did not contain the words "whether contentious or not" but it was nevertheless held by the Calcutta and Madras High Courts that a suit under that Section need not be contentious.<sup>1</sup> The said words have been now introduced in the present Section in order to give effect to those decisions and to make the Section clearer.

33. Section is mandatory — Sub-section (2). — Under the Code of 1859 there were no special provisions for the institution of suits relating to public charities. Suits, therefore, relating to such matters could under that Code be brought in the ordinary Courts by certain persons as plaintiffs. For instance, persons who were appointed to supervise over trustees could sue for their removal for misconduct, in the ordinary Courts<sup>1</sup> and members of a community could, under Section 30 (O. 1 R. 8 of the Code), bring a representative suit also in the ordinary Courts for declarations, etc., with reference to the trust.<sup>2</sup> Section 539 was introduced for the first time by the Code of 1877 and was repeated in the Code of 1882, but there was no provision therein corresponding to sub-section (2) of the present Section. (Section 539 of the Code of 1877, moreover, did not apply to religious trusts or to trusts which were religious as well as charitable.<sup>3</sup>)

There was consequently a conflict of opinion whether Section 539 was mandatory or whether it was merely a directory and an enabling provision, having no restrictive effect on any independent rights of suit.<sup>4</sup> It was with a view to settle this conflict that the Legislature introduced sub-section (2) of the present Section, clearly removing the classes of suits specified therein from the cognizance of ordinary Courts, and constituting a special tribunal for the trial thereof.<sup>5</sup> The cases before 1908, therefore, holding that the Section was only an enabling one which did not bar independent rights of suit, in regard to the reliefs specified in the Section, are no longer good law.<sup>6</sup>

In considering if the Section is applicable, it is not merely the right of the plaintiff that must be looked into but also the nature of the relief claimed and if that is one specified in the Section the direction laid down in the sub-section (2) must be obeyed.<sup>7</sup> Thus, a District Judge cannot order the suspension or removal of a mahant on a mere report instead of in a suit as required by this Section.<sup>8</sup> A suit does not cease to be one under Section 92 and subject to its mandatory provisions simply because reliefs not within the Section are claimed in addition to reliefs within the Section.<sup>9</sup> And conversely, the fact that some of the reliefs asked for in the plaint cannot be granted on account of the absence of the consent in writing of the Advocate-General, would not disentitle the plaintiff to the other reliefs.<sup>10</sup>

The sub-section which speaks of a suit claiming any of the reliefs specified in sub-section 1 must be read with the latter sub-section and if it is so read, it follows that it is not every suit in which any of the reliefs specified in sub-section 1 is claimed that requires the sanction of the Advocate-General but that such sanction is necessary only in the case of those suits in which besides the relief claimed being covered by sub-section 1, the suit is brought in a representative capacity on behalf of the public.<sup>11</sup> See Note 7 supra.

The proper remedy for obtaining any of the reliefs enumerated in the Section under the circumstances mentioned therein is by a suit instituted with the consent of the Advocate-General. Hence, in such cases an application made without the consent of the Advocate-General cannot be treated as permissible under the Section.<sup>12</sup>

Disputes having arisen regarding the management of a public charity, the matter was referred by the parties to arbitration. The arbitrator drew up an award stating his conclusions about the management and framing a scheme. One of the parties filed a suit for the award being made a decree of the Court. It was held that the suit was precluded by the terms of sub-section 2 because, by embodying the award in a decree of Court the Court would be practically framing a scheme for the management of the institutions in question and it would be an evasion of the provisions of the Section to allow it to be done under the guise of an award when the procedure prescribed by the Section had not been complied with. It was also held that the award not having exceeded the terms of the reference, it was not open to the Court to separate such portions of the award as related to reliefs contemplated by this Section and limit the decree to the rest of the portions thereof.<sup>13</sup>

There is, however, a saving in respect of suits coming under the Religious Endowments Act. Where, therefore, a suit comes under both Section 92 and under the Religious Endowments Act, the plaintiffs have the choice of proceeding under either provision though they may not proceed under both.<sup>14</sup> (In this connexion, see Note 4.)

34. Execution of scheme decree. — Under the old Code a decree under Section 539 was held enforceable by way of execution under Section 260 of that Code, and the misconducting trustee could be both imprisoned and his property attached.<sup>1</sup> The application, however, had to conform to the requirements of Section 260; otherwise it was liable to be rejected.<sup>2</sup> That Section provided the procedure for enforcing a decree for the specific performance of a contract or for restitution of conjugal rights or "for the performance of, or the abstention from any other particular act" and it was held that the enforcement of the scheme decree came under those words.

The corresponding Section under this Code, namely O. 21 R. 32 has omitted the italicised words and inserted instead "or for injunction."

The views expressed in cases under the new Code are not all harmonious. It is generally agreed that a decree under Section 92 is of a merely declaratory nature and where that is so, there is nothing to enforce in execution.<sup>3</sup> It is also agreed that a provision in a scheme for the removal of a trustee is ultra vires and on that ground cannot be enforced in execution.<sup>4</sup> But there is a difference of opinion as to whether a scheme decree containing clauses amounting to a direction to the defendant to perform some duty cannot be enforced in execution. In Ranganatha v. Krishnasami,<sup>5</sup> the Madras High Court held that once a scheme is asked for and framed, there was nothing more to be done, and that no further remedy provided in the scheme can be enforced in execution. The same Court in later cases<sup>6</sup> has dissented from that view and held that the question whether a scheme decree is executable or not depends upon the intention of the decree and where the directions in the scheme are intended to be enforced in execution, they can be so executed. The Bombay and Rangoon High Courts and the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court appear to hold the same view.<sup>7</sup> The Madras High Court has, in its recent decisions,<sup>8</sup> affirmed the view in Ranganatha v. Krishnasami above cited.

The High Court can modify or alter rules framed under a scheme<sup>9</sup> but the scheme itself cannot be modified in execution proceedings.<sup>10</sup>

A person not a party to the suit under Section 92 and not having the same interest with the plaintiffs, but claiming certain rights under the decree, cannot apply for enforcement of the decree.<sup>11</sup>

35. Arbitration. — The Court has no jurisdiction, in a suit under this Section, to entertain an application for filing an award or for referring the matter to arbitration.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the matter is one not merely concerning the parties, but is one in which the State is interested and consequently the scheme should be considered and framed by the Court itself.<sup>2</sup> It is the prerogative of the Crown to protect the interests of infants, lunatics and charities and it cannot therefore be delegated.<sup>3</sup>

36. Appeal. — An appeal lies from a scheme decree, as in the case of other decrees under Section 96 of the Code. An order of a District Judge on an application made under a scheme decreed by the Court, is not appealable unless it is appealable as being one in execution of a decree under Section 47.<sup>1</sup> Whether orders passed on applications made for enforcing the scheme are orders in execution depends upon the question whether a scheme decree under the Section is at all enforceable in execution. There is a conflict of opinion on this point<sup>2</sup> which has been discussed in Note 34 above which may be referred to in this connexion.

Where the Court reserves to itself the right to confirm elections held under a scheme passed by it, an order regarding the same is a decree and is appealable as such.<sup>3</sup>

Where the Advocate-General himself has filed the suit and the same is dismissed, it is he who must file the appeal, and not the relators to the suit<sup>4</sup> as they are no parties to the suit.<sup>5</sup>

Where a scheme expressly empowers the "District Judge" to select the trustees, he is a persona designata and an order by him is not one by the District Court and therefore no appeal will lie.<sup>6</sup>

Where an appeal is filed but is returned for re-presentation and is not so re-presented in time by the appellants mala fide, other persons interested in the trust can re-present the same even after the time fixed. Section 5 of the Limitation Act will apply to such a case.<sup>7</sup>

37. Revision.—The order of a District Judge in a suit under this Section will not be open to revision where he has exercised jurisdiction in a proper manner.<sup>1</sup> But where he has misdirected himself in a manner which will show that the order cannot be accepted as satisfactory, a revision will lie.<sup>2</sup> A revision petition can be entertained from a decision on an issue as to whether the suit was maintainable under this Section.<sup>3</sup> But there can be no interference in revision merely because the lower Court's order proceeds on a mistake of law.<sup>4</sup> An order of a Collector granting permission to sue under this Section is an executive order and is, therefore, not revisable.<sup>5</sup>

38. Jurisdiction to entertain suit under the Section.—A suit under Section 92 must be brought in the special tribunal constituted by the Section, namely, "the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction or any other Court empowered by the Provincial Government in that behalf within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the whole or any part of the subject-matter is situate."<sup>1</sup>

The words "principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction" will include an Additional District Judge who is assigned by the District Judge the function of the District Judge under Section 8 (2) of the Bengal Civil Courts Act (XII of 1887),<sup>2</sup> or under Section 7 of the Oudh Civil Courts Act (XVIII of 1879)<sup>3</sup> but not if such functions are not so assigned.<sup>4</sup>

The expression "any other Court empowered by the Provincial Government in that behalf" probably refers to Courts such as that of the Subordinate Judges.<sup>5</sup> It does not enable the Provincial Government to empower any particular Judge to try any particular pending suit. Such a notification will be ultra vires.<sup>6</sup> But, where a notification was issued empowering a certain Judge by name to hear suits under this Section, it was held that the notification did not empower the Judge as a persona designata but duly empowered the Court over which he presided to entertain suits under this Section.<sup>7</sup>

Where a District Judge transfers a suit under Section 92 to a Subordinate Judge specifically empowered by the Provincial Government to try such suits, but after the transfer the Provincial Government by a subsequent notification confines his power to a specified area, his jurisdiction over the case given by the previous notification is not taken away and he can try the suit.<sup>8</sup>

Although a District Judge has the powers of a Kazi under the Mahomedan law to deal with an application for the appointment of a mutawalli, he may nevertheless relegate the petitioner to a suit under Section 92.<sup>9</sup>

Section 92 Notes 38-40

A District Court in which a suit could not have been instituted as being not one within the Section<sup>10</sup> or a Sub-Judge finding that necessary sanction has not been obtained,<sup>11</sup> should return the plaint and not dismiss the suit.

An application for the modification of a scheme framed by the District Court and confirmed by the High Court can be entertained only by the High Court but the District Court can give such directions as may be necessary to carry out the modified scheme.<sup>12</sup>

The Court of a Subordinate Judge is not disentitled or debarred from entertaining a suit for the administration of the estate of a deceased testator, simply because the will contains directions for applying some portion of the estate for charitable purposes. But he may appoint a receiver in respect of such properties until directions thereto are obtained by the Advocate-General or the Collector from the District Court.<sup>13</sup>

Section 92 does not confer on the High Court powers to entertain suits in its original jurisdiction, in respect of charities in the mufassil.<sup>14</sup>

The District Court has no power to transfer to a Subordinate Court a suit under this Section instituted before itself.<sup>15</sup> (See Note 11 to Section 24 ante.)

39. Valuation of suit. — The reliefs claimed in a suit under Section 92 are incapable of valuation and are therefore chargeable under Article 17 clause (6) of the Court-Fees Act, 1870.<sup>1</sup> Even a prayer for possession or for a declaration and consequential relief under this Section will not take it out of the operation of Article 17 clause (6) of the Court-fees Act and bring the same under Section 7 of the said Act.<sup>2</sup> The reason is that the plaintiffs in a suit under Section 92 do not claim the reliefs for their own advantage but as representing the public.<sup>3</sup> The Bombay High Court has held that where in addition to the reliefs claimed under Section 92, a relief for an account is also asked for, the suit is chargeable with a court-fee under Section 7 (iv) (f) of the Court-fees Act.<sup>4</sup> This view, being opposed to the opinion of all the other High Courts, does not seem to be a sound one.

A suit of the nature specified, filed in the High Court, is not exempt from court-fees on the ground that the court-fees payable under the schedules thereto have no application to suits filed in the ordinary original jurisdiction of the High Court, but will have to be taxed under the High Court-fees Rules of that Court.<sup>5</sup>

It may be noted in this connection that the Madras Court-fees (Amendment) Act of 1912 specifically provides in Schedule II Article 17 (iii) for a suit under Section 92 of the Code, charging a fixed fee of Rs. 50 therefor.

40. Limitation. — The cause of action for a suit under Section 92 occurs with every breach of trust or whenever the direction of the Court is necessary.<sup>1</sup> The period of limitation, however, depends upon the question whether the trustee is an express trustee or trustee de son tort. In the former case, if the suit is for following trust property in the hands of the trustee or his representative, there is no period of limitation and the suit is not barred by any length of time under Section 10 of the Limitation Act. In the latter case, however, the suit will be governed by Article 120 of the Act. In a suit, therefore, for accounts under this Section against trustee de son tort, the defendant is liable to render accounts only for six years preceding the suit.<sup>2</sup> The Calcutta High Court has, on the other hand, held that a trustee de son tort stands in the same position as an express trustee for the purposes of limitation.<sup>3</sup> This view, it is submitted, is contrary to the general consensus of decisions and cannot be supported.<sup>4</sup>

Where the de jure trustees of a trust lose their right against the de facto trustees by limitation, that fact will not confer on the de facto trustees immunity from a suit by the Advocate-General under this Section.<sup>5</sup>

Section 5 of the Limitation Act will apply to appeals in scheme suits also. Where a scheme suit is dismissed and on the plaintiffs appealing therefrom, the appeal is returned to them for re-presentation but is not re-presented by them in time mala fide, other persons interested can re-present it after the time fixed and claim that the delay should be excused under Section 5 of the Limitation Act.<sup>6</sup>

41. Decision under the Section, whether operates as res judicata. — A decree passed in a suit under Section 92 is binding not only on the trust and the trustee but also on all worshippers of the temple.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that a suit under Section 92 is a representative one, the plaintiffs representing all persons interested in the trust.<sup>2</sup> The actual parties to the suit will also be bound by the decree. Thus the transferee of trust property, who is made a party to the suit is debarred from going behind it in any subsequent suit.<sup>3</sup>

Where, however, the suit is fraudulently withdrawn, it cannot operate as res judicata.<sup>4</sup>

Again, when a suit under Section 92 ceases to be a representative one, it ceases also to be binding except on the actual parties thereto. Thus, where a suit filed with sanction was amended by adding strangers and claiming reliefs not covered by the sanction, the suit ceases to be a representative one and cannot bind the public.<sup>5</sup>

A previous litigation in a private capacity is not res judicata in a subsequent suit in a public capacity under this Section.<sup>6</sup>

Synopsis

1. May be exercised by the Collector.
2. Or by such officer as the Provincial Government may appoint.
3. Visitatorial powers of the Collector.
4. Previous sanction of the Provincial Government.

1. May be exercised by the Collector. — The Collector cannot delegate his functions to any one else.<sup>1</sup> Where the Collector refuses to give the sanction it may be granted by the Advocate-General.<sup>2</sup>

2. Or by such officer as the Provincial Government may appoint. — For a list of such officers, see the foot-note below.<sup>1</sup>

3. Visitatorial powers of the Collector. — See Note 4 to Section 92 and the undermentioned case.<sup>1</sup>

4. Previous sanction of the Provincial Government. — The Section provides for two distinct matters : (1) the appointment of an officer to exercise the powers conferred by Sections 91 and 92 on the Advocate-General, and (2) the grant of "previous sanction" by the Provincial Government to the exercise of such powers. Both the appointment and the previous sanction must exist before Section 93 can be applied.<sup>1</sup> Accordingly a suit instituted without such previous sanction is liable to be dismissed.<sup>2</sup> The fact that the Provincial Government has appointed an officer under this Section generally is no bar to its appointing the Collector or any other person to exercise such powers in any particular case.<sup>3</sup>

After the decision of the Privy Council in Prem Narain's case<sup>4</sup> referred to above, the Public Suits Validation Act (XI of 1932) has been passed whereby —

- (1) the institution of suits pending at the commencement of the Act is not to be deemed to be invalid by reason of the "previous sanction" not having been obtained as required by this Section;
- (2) suits dismissed after the 30th day of November 1931 (the date of the decision in Prem Narain's case) and before the commencement of the Act, solely on the ground of want of such previous sanction are to be restored to file on an application made therefor within six months from the commencement of the Act; and
- (3) appeals dismissed between the said dates on the said ground, are to be re-tried on an application made therefor within six months from the commencement of the Act.

See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>5</sup>

And in cases where the suit is pending on the date of the passing of the above-mentioned Act, it is not necessary for the plaintiffs to obtain sanction from the Provincial Government during the pendency of the suit.<sup>6</sup>

Where a suit was brought with the permission of the Collector but without the sanction of the Provincial Government and a decree was passed in such suit before the decision of the Privy Council in Prem Narain's case, it was held that the decree was not a nullity for want of jurisdiction.<sup>7</sup>

Where a suit is restored under the Public Suits Validation Act of 1932, the suit must be proceeded with and tried in accordance with law. The suit cannot be again dismissed on the ground that there has been no valid consent given by the Collector.<sup>8</sup>

SUPPLEMENTAL PROCEEDINGS

94. [New.] In order to prevent the ends of justice from being defeated the Court may, if it is so prescribed,— Supplemental proceedings.

- (a) issue a warrant to arrest the defendant and bring him before the Court to show cause why he should not give security for his appearance, and if he fails to comply with any order for security commit him to the civil prison;
- (b) direct the defendant to furnish security to produce any property belonging to him and to place the same at the disposal of the Court or order the attachment of any property;
- (c) grant a temporary injunction and in case of disobedience commit the person guilty thereof to the civil prison and order that his property be attached and sold;
- (d) appoint a receiver of any property and enforce the performance of his duties by attaching and selling his property;
- (e) make such other interlocutory orders as may appear to the Court to be just and convenient.

1. Scope of the Section. — This is a leading provision summing up the general powers of the Courts in regard to the various kinds of interlocutory orders. The details of procedure have been relegated to the rules.<sup>1</sup> By virtue of Section 7 ante, clauses (c) and (e) of the Section do not extend to Provincial Small Cause Courts.<sup>2</sup>

Section 94 — Note 1

- 1. See Notes on Clauses.
- 2. ('19) AIR 1919 Cal 6 (6) : 46 Cal 717.

2. "If it is so prescribed." — "Prescribed" means prescribed by rules. See Section 2 clause 16. It has been held by the High Court of Madras that the Courts shall have power to pass the orders referred to in clauses (a) to (e) of the Section only if it is so prescribed by the rules and that this would exclude the inherent power of the Court under Section 151 to pass such orders where they are not prescribed by rules.<sup>1</sup> The Lahore High Court has, on the other hand, taken the view that the Court has an inherent power to act ex debito justitiæ even in cases not prescribed by rules.<sup>2</sup> The High Court of Patna and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind have taken the same view as the Lahore High Court.<sup>3</sup> The High Court of Allahabad seems to be of the same view as that of the Madras High Court.<sup>4</sup> In a case before the Bombay High Court a person brought a suit under O. 21 R. 103 and applied for an injunction restraining the defendant from taking possession of the property pending disposal of the suit. The injunction was refused on the ground that the provisions of Rules 1 and 2 of Order 39 did not apply.<sup>5</sup> No question, however, of inherent jurisdiction was either advanced or considered in the case. See also Notes 3 and 22 to O. 39 R. 1.

3. Warrant of arrest—Clause (a). — See Order 38.

4. Order for security or attachment—Clause (b). — See Order 38.

5. Temporary injunction—Clause (c). — The applicant for an injunction must make out a prima facie case therefor.<sup>1</sup> A mere apprehension of interference with the plaintiff's collection of rent and of the breach of the peace does not justify the grant of an injunction.<sup>2</sup> Nor will the Court exercise a proper discretion in granting an injunction restraining the opposite party from the bona fide exercise of his statutory rights.<sup>3</sup>

Order 39 must be read with this clause. O. 39 R. 2 (3), empowering the Court to punish a party for disobedience of an injunction is not confined to suits of the nature specified in O. 39 R. 2 but applies to disobedience generally of an injunction granted by the Court whether under Order 39 or under Section 94.<sup>4</sup>

An injunction cannot be issued by one Court to another Court.<sup>5</sup>

For a fuller discussion of the subject, see O. 39 Rr. 1 and 2.

1. Legislative changes. — This Section amalgamates and corresponds to Ss. 491 and 497 in the Code of 1882. The material changes introduced are —

(a) The words "by its order" have been substituted for the words "in its decree" thereby showing that the order for compensation must be separately made and must not be embodied in the decree, as was required under the old Code.<sup>1</sup>

(b) The words "order determining any such application" in sub-section (2) have been substituted for the words "award under this Section," making it clear that it is not only when a compensation has been granted under this Section but also when it has been applied for and refused that a suit for compensation is barred. See Note 13 below.

2. Analogous law. — This Section is analogous to Sec. 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code which provides for compensation being awarded to an accused person against whom a frivolous or vexatious complaint is made.<sup>1</sup> But the difference between the two Sections is that while the award of compensation under Section 250, Criminal Procedure Code, is no bar to a suit for compensation, the determination of an application for compensation under Section 95 of the Civil Procedure Code precludes a separate suit for compensation.<sup>2</sup>

2a. Scope of the Section. — The Section applies also to cases in which the plaintiff is a minor represented by a next friend.<sup>1</sup>

The Section applies to arrest or attachment before judgment. There is no corresponding provision in the Code as regards proceedings in execution of a decree.<sup>2</sup>

3. The arrest or attachment must have been actually effected or the temporary injunction must have been granted. — No compensation is awardable under this Section unless the attachment or arrest has been actually effected.<sup>1</sup> The mere obtaining of an order for attachment or arrest is not enough.<sup>2</sup> But it is not necessary that the defendant arrested should have received the summons in the suit.<sup>3</sup>

The Section applies also to temporary attachments under O. 38 R. 5<sup>4</sup> and a creditor attaching before judgment, goods not belonging to his debtor will be liable in damages to the person to whom the goods belong even though he has acted honestly.<sup>5</sup>

4. The attachment or arrest must have been applied for on insufficient grounds. — The words "on insufficient grounds" must be taken to mean "without reasonable or probable cause."<sup>1</sup> Where in an application for attachment before judgment, the only ground put forward was that unless the attachment was made the plaintiff, in the event of success, would have difficulty in realising the decretal amount, the application is made on insufficient grounds and the defendant is entitled to reasonable compensation.<sup>2</sup>

Where, as a matter of fact, there have been sufficient grounds for applying for attachment, the mere fact that the grounds have not been mentioned in the application for attachment or arrest before judgment will not make the plaintiff liable for compensation.<sup>3</sup>

5. "Or the suit of the plaintiff fails." — A defendant in a suit in which an arrest or attachment has been effected or a temporary injunction granted will be entitled to compensation under this Section, if —

(1) the plaintiff's suit fails, and

(2) there was no reasonable or probable ground for instituting it.

It is not necessary to show in such a case that the arrest or attachment was applied for on insufficient grounds. The mere fact that the plaintiff's suit for injunction was dismissed because his conduct had been fraudulent,<sup>1</sup> will not enable the defendant to claim compensation under this Section. The reason is that there was no want of reasonable and probable cause for instituting the suit, the same being dismissed on the ground of plaintiff's fraudulent conduct. Nor will mere evidence of malice prove the absence of reasonable or probable ground for instituting the suit.<sup>2</sup>

6. Procedure for obtaining compensation under this Section. — An application by the defendant is necessary for obtaining compensation under it. Beyond this there is no particular procedure or formality to be followed.<sup>1</sup> But it is conceived that the application is to be made only after the suit is heard and not before.<sup>2</sup> See also Note 1 above. Further, an application for compensation for wrongful attachment of property cannot be entertained by the Court before the order of attachment is set aside.<sup>3</sup>

It has been held that the Court has power under this Section to permit the conversion of an application for compensation into a suit for compensation upon payment of the necessary court-fees.<sup>4</sup>

7. Amount and basis of compensation. — Under this Section the Court can grant damages only to the extent of Rs. 1,000. There is also a further restriction and that is that it cannot award, as compensation, any sum in excess of its pecuniary jurisdiction.

('81) 1931 Mad W N 956 (957). (Even though suit is decreed and attachment is made absolute — The portion of this Section relating to attachment before judgment is extended to suit under the Bengal Rent Act (VI of 1862) or under Act X of 1859.)

The grant of compensation under this Section is a matter of discretion and the discretion has to be exercised in a judicial manner. Where a Court gives no reasons for refusing an application under this Section, the order is not one according to law.<sup>1</sup>

The Section authorises the award of reasonable compensation to the defendant for the expense and injury caused to him. There is a conflict of decisions as to whether humiliation and loss of prestige will be included in the term 'injury.' The Calcutta High Court has held that such humiliation and loss of prestige will not be included in the term and that no compensation can be awarded under this Section on such grounds,<sup>2</sup> while the contrary view has been held by the Madras High Court.<sup>3</sup>

In the case of a suit by a third party for damages for wrongful attachment of his property in execution of a decree passed against another person, it was held by the Privy Council that the wrong was actionable per se and that the plaintiff was entitled to general damages although he did not prove any special damage.<sup>4</sup>

8. Court other than that by which the arrest, etc., was ordered cannot grant compensation. — Under this Section compensation can be awarded only by the Court by which the arrest, etc., was ordered and the application for compensation has to be made only to that Court.<sup>1</sup>

9. Provincial Small Cause Court. — A Provincial Small Cause Court can neither order the attachment of immovable property nor award compensation under this Section for any such attachment.<sup>1</sup> But it can order the attachment of moveables and also award compensation for a wrongful attachment thereof under this Section.<sup>2</sup> A suit for damages for illegal attachment is not cognizable by a Small Cause Court.<sup>3</sup> See also Section 7 (b) (1) and Order 38 Rule 13.

10. Undertaking, effect of. — Where a temporary injunction restraining the defendant from executing a decree obtained by him in another suit is granted on an undertaking by the plaintiff to compensate the defendant for the loss that he may suffer on account of such injunction, and the suit of the plaintiff is dismissed, the undertaking is to be enforced not by application to the Court executing the defendant's decree but to the Court which granted the injunction.<sup>1</sup>

11. Chartered High Court, power of. — The question as to the applicability of Section 95 to suits entertained by a Chartered High Court on its original side has arisen in Bombay and the view expressed in the latest decision of that Court on the point is that the Section does not apply to such suits and that hence the High Court can on an application by the defendant award under Rule 329 of the Bombay High Court Original Side Rules, compensation exceeding Rs. 1,000 for wrongful attachment before judgment.<sup>1</sup> But a different view was taken in an earlier decision of the same High Court.<sup>2</sup>

12. Counter-claim for compensation as defence to suit. — In a summary suit on a negotiable instrument under Order 37, a defendant who has been arrested before judgment and who claims compensation for such arrest, can, on that ground, apply for leave to defend the suit.<sup>1</sup>

13. Regular suit, if and when barred. — It has been seen in Section 9 ante<sup>1</sup> that, as a general principle, where two proceedings or two remedies are provided by law, one of them must not be taken as operating in derogation of the other.<sup>2</sup> It has also been seen<sup>3</sup> that a regular suit, according to the general principle, will not be barred by a summary and concurrent remedy being also provided therefor, but that if a party has elected to pursue his remedy under one provision, he is bound by it and cannot on his failing therein proceed under the other provision.

Applying these principles, it follows that a regular suit for compensation is not barred by the omission to proceed under the summary procedure provided for by this Section<sup>4</sup> but that if an application is made and disposed of under this Section such disposal would operate as a bar to a regular suit, whatever may be the result of the application.<sup>5</sup> A claim for compensation made in a counter affidavit against a petition for attachment before judgment is not an application for compensation required by Section 95 and cannot bar a regular suit.<sup>6</sup> The suit barred under this Section and the application barred under this Section must be ejusdem generis with the same cause of action. Thus, an application under this Section is no bar to a subsequent suit for damages caused by reaping and removal of crop from the land, which the plaintiff was prevented from entering by the Court's injunction.<sup>7</sup>

There is, however, a difference between the conditions necessary for the maintainability of an application under this Section, and those necessary for the maintainability of a regular suit. In a suit for compensation the plaintiff must not only prove want of reasonable or probable cause for obtaining the arrest, attachment or injunction, but also that the defendant was actuated by malice.<sup>8</sup> Malice is not necessarily hatred or enmity, but any improper motive. A plaintiff acts improperly in making use, for putting undue pressure on his debtor, of a process intended to prevent fraudulent conduct on the part of the debtor.<sup>9</sup> A suit therefore lies for maliciously and wrongfully obtaining a temporary injunction<sup>10</sup> or an excessive attachment of property.<sup>11</sup> When property is wrongfully attached and afterwards made away with, in collusion with the attaching officer, it is not necessary for maintaining a suit for compensation that a criminal prosecution should be previously instituted.<sup>12</sup> The mere institution of a malicious civil suit will not give rise to a cause of action for a suit for compensation. When therefore a decree for a perpetual injunction is made by the first Court but is set aside in appeal, the defendant cannot maintain a suit for damages caused by the said suit having been brought.<sup>13</sup>

There is a distinction between cases where the plaintiff in the suit for damages for wrongful attachment was a party to the suit in which the goods were wrongfully attached and cases where he was not such a party. It is only in the former cases that malice and want of reasonable or probable cause is to be proved by the plaintiff. In the latter case a suit will lie even though the attachment may have been made in good faith.<sup>14</sup>

14. Limitation. — As to the period of limitation applicable to suits for damages for wrongful attachment of property, see Articles 29, 36 and 49 of the Limitation Act and the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

APPEALS

APPEALS FROM ORIGINAL DECREES

Section 96

96. [S. 540.]<sup>10</sup> (1) Save where otherwise expressly provided in the body of this Code<sup>2</sup> or by any other law<sup>22</sup> for the time being in force, an appeal<sup>3</sup> shall lie from every decree passed by any Court exercising original jurisdiction to the Court authorized<sup>4</sup> to hear appeals from the decisions of such Court.

(2) An appeal may lie from an original decree passed ex parte.<sup>12</sup>

(3) No appeal shall lie from a decree passed by the Court with the consent<sup>15</sup> of parties.

1. Legislative changes. — This Section corresponds to Section 540 of the Code of 1882. Under that Section an appeal lay "from the decrees or from any part of the decrees" so that provisional decrees were also appealable.<sup>1</sup> This was, however, interpreted to mean that the decree or part of the decree should, in order to be appealable, be a decision relating to the disposal of the entire suit.<sup>2</sup> The words "from the decrees or from every part of the decrees" have now been omitted and the words "from every decree" substituted therefor.

Sub-section (3) is entirely new and gives legislative sanction to the view that had been held that no appeal lay from a consent decree.<sup>3</sup> It corresponds with Section 375 of the Code of 1882 except that certain words which occurred at the end of Section 375 have now been omitted: see Note 15 below.

It is useful in this connexion to compare Section 49 of the Judicature Act of 1873 which provides that "no order made by the High Court or by any Judge thereof, by consent of parties, shall be subject to any appeal except by leave of the Court or Judge making such order."

2. Scope and object of the Section. — It is a general principle of law that a right of appeal is not a natural or inherent right attaching to litigation.<sup>1</sup> A litigant having a grievance of a civil nature has, independently of any statute, a right to institute a suit in some Court or other unless its cognizance is expressly or impliedly barred.<sup>2</sup> But a right of appeal does not exist and cannot be assumed unless expressly given by statute or by rules having the force of statute.<sup>3</sup> Nor can parties confer a right of appeal upon themselves in any matter by agreement or mutual consent.<sup>4</sup>

An appeal lies under this Section only from a decree. No appeal lies from a finding in a judgment.<sup>5</sup> See Note 6 infra.

Section 104 deals with appeals from orders and Section 96 with appeals from decrees. The latter Section does not however confer a right of appeal from all adjudications which are decrees, but confers such right only where it is not expressly otherwise provided in the body of the Code or by any other law for the time being in force.<sup>6</sup> Where an order comes under Section 104, it is appealable notwithstanding a decree has been passed subsequently and the decree is not appealed against.<sup>7</sup>

The expression "Court authorised to hear appeals" in the Section has been held to mean either the Court authorised to hear appeals from the Courts in question generally, or else the Court authorised to hear such appeals as the appeal in question.<sup>8</sup>

This Section does not apply to appeals within the High Court, that is from a single Judge of the High Court to a Bench thereof. Such appeals are regulated by the Letters Patents issued to the respective High Courts.<sup>9</sup> But as regards procedure, the

By a settled course of practice the procedure in Vice-Admiralty cases is governed by the Code of Civil Procedure.<sup>11</sup> This chapter on appeals will also, therefore, it is to be presumed, apply to such cases.

3. "Appeal," meaning of.—The word 'appeal' has not been defined in the Code and has therefore to be construed in its natural and ordinary meaning. It has been held to mean "the removal of a cause from an inferior to a superior Court for the purpose of testing the soundness of the decision of the inferior Court."<sup>1</sup> It is thus a remedy provided by law for getting the decree of the lower Court cancelled<sup>2</sup> and is, in fact, a complaint made to the higher Court that the decree of the lower Court is unsound and wrong.<sup>3</sup>

An appeal is not a fresh suit but is only a continuation of the original proceedings and a stage in the suit itself.<sup>4</sup> The decree passed by the Appellate Court is a decree in the suit<sup>6</sup> and the appellate judgment stands in the place of the original judgment for all legal purposes.<sup>6</sup>

An appeal differs from a review in that the primary intention of the review is the re-consideration of the subject by the same Judge under certain conditions, while an appeal is a rehearing by another tribunal.<sup>7</sup>

An appeal differs also from a revision. In an appeal the points to be decided are those on which the parties are at variance. But a revision is a matter between a higher Court and a lower Court; in fact revisional powers may, in certain cases, be exercised without an appeal or an application by any of the parties concerned.<sup>8</sup>

The expression "appeal under the Civil Procedure Code" is not restricted to an appeal the right to prefer which is conferred by that Code but means an appeal the procedure in regard to which is governed by the Code.<sup>9</sup>

The use of the words "an appeal" in the Section does not mean "one appeal only." Where an appeal is dismissed for default, a fresh appeal will not be barred if brought within the period of limitation for filing the appeal.<sup>10</sup>

An appeal which, even if successful, would be entirely fruitless should be dismissed as being incompetent. Thus, where in execution the Court directed the sale in a particular order and the judgment-debtor appealed but before the appeal was heard the properties were sold, the appeal, even if successful, will become infructuous and should be dismissed.<sup>11</sup>

4. "Court authorized to hear appeals." — This Section does not deal with jurisdiction of Courts but only with the right of appeal.<sup>1</sup> The jurisdiction to entertain appeals is given by the various Acts in the different Provinces<sup>2</sup> and it is only that Court to which jurisdiction is so given in any particular matter that can hear the appeal.<sup>3</sup>

A general rule adopted in the various Acts is that an appeal from a decree or order of a District Judge or an Additional District Judge or of a Sub-Judge in suits of the value of over Rs. 5,000<sup>4</sup> will lie to the High Court ; but that an appeal from all other decrees or orders of a Sub-Judge and from all those of a District Munsif will lie to the District Judge,<sup>5</sup> or if specially authorized by the Local Government to an Assistant Judge or a Sub-Judge.<sup>6</sup>

It is an oft-repeated principle of law that the failure to raise a plea of want of jurisdiction in the Appellate Court does not clothe that Court with a jurisdiction not given to it.<sup>7</sup> But the parties may waive inquiry as to facts necessary for the determination of the question of jurisdiction where that question depends upon facts to be ascertained.<sup>8</sup>

The subject-matter of an appeal should be valued for the purposes of jurisdiction according to the law in force at the date of the appeal and not of the suit which led to it.<sup>9</sup>

A Court is not precluded from hearing an appeal by the mere fact that at one time the plaint had been presented in that very Court.<sup>10</sup>

Where a suit was tried by Court A and after decree, the venue was transferred to Court B on account of re-distribution of districts, an appeal from the decree of Court A lies to the Court to which appeals would lie from the Court B.<sup>11</sup>

5. Powers of Appellate Court. — See Order 41 Rules 23, 33, etc.

6. Who can appeal. — In order to sustain an appeal it is necessary to show that the party desirous of appealing has the right of appeal and that the Court to which he would prefer the appeal has the right to entertain it.<sup>1</sup>

As a general principle no one can appeal from a decree unless he was a party to the action or was treated as such or is the legal representative of the party, or unless his privity in estate, title, or interest is apparent on the face of the record.<sup>2</sup> adversely affected him and not from every part of the decree.<sup>6</sup>

The word "parties" in the first condition refers to those persons only who are ranged on either side as plaintiffs and defendants. Such parties, if they are adversely affected by the decree, have a right of appeal against it.<sup>7</sup> The words "matters in controversy in the suit" are those matters which, from the pleadings, appear to be in dispute between parties ranged on one side as plaintiffs and on the other side as defendants.<sup>8</sup>

With regard to the second condition it may be said as a general rule that a decision cannot be said to adversely affect a person unless it will operate as res judicata against him in any future suit.<sup>9</sup> Thus, a pro forma defendant against whom the decree will not operate as res judicata cannot appeal and open out the case between the plaintiff and the other defendants.<sup>10</sup> In order to find out whether a decision will operate as res judicata and will thus adversely affect a party, the substance of the decree and the judgment, and not the form must be considered,<sup>11</sup> and for this purpose the parties may go behind the decree and see what really the adjudication was.<sup>12</sup> Where a decree is absolutely in favour of a party but some issues are found against him, he has no right of appeal against the decree or the findings<sup>13</sup> because he is, firstly, not adversely affected thereby and secondly because such findings are not embodied in and do not form part of the decree.<sup>14</sup> As has been observed by the Calcutta High Court in Krishna v. Mohesh,<sup>15</sup> "the question who may appeal is determinable by the commonsense consideration that there can be no appeal where there is nothing to appeal about." But there may be cases where a decision, though on the face of it is entirely in favour of a party defendant, really negatives his right as against the plaintiff and the other defendants. In such a case he does not lose his right of appeal. Thus, where A owes a debt to B who assigns it first to C and then to D and D sues both B and C on the debt alleging that the assignment to C was void, and the suit is decreed against B and dismissed against C, the decree, though on the face of it is in favour of C, necessarily implies that the assignment in his favour is void and C has therefore a right of appeal against it.<sup>16</sup>

It will follow from the above general principles that the following persons are entitled to appeal under this Section —

1. A party to the suit who is adversely affected by the decree.<sup>17</sup> Indeed a person who is not a party to the suit or his legal representative cannot be affected by the decision in any way and therefore cannot appeal.<sup>18</sup> The following persons are not 'parties' for the purpose of preferring an appeal:

- A. Defendants who are exempted from the operation of a decree.<sup>19</sup>
- B. Persons against whom the suit has been dismissed in appeal and the case remanded.<sup>20</sup>
- C. Persons who ought not to have been impleaded, such as pro forma defendants, but who are impleaded.<sup>21</sup>

On substitution of the Court of Wards in place of the original plaintiffs in a suit, the latter have no locus standi to appeal against the order dismissing the suit.<sup>22</sup>

2. The legal representative of a deceased party affected by the decree can appeal if the right of the deceased party survives to him but he must first get himself impleaded as such in the suit record.<sup>23</sup>
3. The transferee of the interest of a party pending the suit who is, so far as such interest is concerned, bound by the decree, can appeal from the decree provided he also gets himself placed on the record of the suit.<sup>24</sup> Where a decree has been passed against the transferor and his transferee, the former alone cannot appeal as he has no interest and is not affected by the decree.<sup>25</sup> A transferee after the decree cannot however apply to be impleaded for the purpose of preferring<sup>26</sup> or continuing<sup>27</sup> the appeal against the concluded decree. Similarly a person whose name is brought on the record after the decree on the ground that he is the real owner, cannot appeal.<sup>28</sup>

4. Where pending an appeal the appellant is declared an insolvent, the Official Receiver who represents the estate can continue the appeal.<sup>29</sup>
5. A benamidar may appeal on behalf of the real owner.<sup>30</sup>
6. The auction-purchaser can appeal from an order setting aside the execution sale on the ground of fraud.<sup>31</sup>

It has been held by the Madras High Court that where a decree has been passed against the manager of a joint Hindu family in his representative capacity, any other member of the family can appeal against the decree.<sup>32</sup> But the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court has taken a contrary view.<sup>33</sup>

Where the appellant's right to appeal is challenged, it is incumbent upon the appellant to establish his right to appeal<sup>34</sup> though the practice is to require the respondent at the outset to indicate the grounds upon which his objections are based.<sup>35</sup>

In cases of doubt as to the existence of the right of appeal, it has been held that the appellant should get the benefit of the doubt.<sup>36</sup>

7. Co-plaintiffs. — It has been seen in Note 6 above that one of the conditions necessary for enabling a party to prefer an appeal is that the subject-matter of the appeal must be a "matter in controversy in the suit." It follows therefore that the matters which form the subject of dispute between the plaintiffs inter se but which do not also form the matter in controversy between the plaintiffs and defendants, will be outside the conditions,<sup>1</sup> and one plaintiff cannot be allowed to appeal against his co-plaintiff in respect of such matters.<sup>2</sup>

8. Co-defendants. — The same principles equally apply to appeals by one co-defendant against another. Where a case is raised not only between the plaintiffs and defendants, but between the defendants themselves inter se and the decision therein adversely affects a defendant, he is entitled to appeal against his co-defendants.<sup>1</sup> As has already been seen in Note 6, a decision cannot be said to adversely affect a person, unless it will operate as res judicata against him in any future suit<sup>2</sup> and where in substance a decision will so operate between the defendants it would be contrary to all principles of justice and equity to hold that a defendant is precluded from agitating the matter in appeal against the co-defendants.<sup>3</sup>

1. A brings a suit against B and C. A decree is passed against B alone, the suit being dismissed as against C. B can appeal against C and A in order to make C also liable for A's claim.<sup>4</sup> The reason is that the liability of B and C to A was a question in controversy between A, the plaintiff, and B and C, the defendants, and that the decision on that point making B solely liable has adversely affected him.

2. A sues B and C to enforce his right of pre-emption on the allegation of a sale by B to C. B denies the sale to C but C asserting the sale, pleads waiver by the plaintiff of his right of pre-emption. The suit is dismissed on the finding that B did not sell to C. It was held that C cannot appeal against B and A against the finding because the said finding will not operate as res judicata against C and therefore does not adversely affect him.<sup>5</sup>

A view, different from that in illustration 1, however, has been expressed by the Allahabad High Court to the effect that where a suit has been dismissed against one of two defendants and the plaintiff does not appeal against the portion dismissed, the defendant against whom the decree was passed cannot appeal against the decree seeking to make the co-defendant liable, and the Appellate Court cannot, even if such an appeal is preferred, modify or alter the decision against the co-defendant which the trial Court declined to pass, and in the decision of which the plaintiff has acquiesced.<sup>6</sup> They declined to follow the view expressed by the Calcutta Full Bench in I. L. R. 31 Calcutta 643.<sup>7</sup> But the rulings do not mention any principle as the ground of their decision and cannot be accepted as sound law, especially in view of O. 41 R. 33, which empowers the Court to pass such orders as the circumstances of the case require.

Where a suit is dismissed and the judgment contains findings between the co-defendants which are not embodied in the decree nor necessarily implied therein, such findings cannot adversely affect the defendants and no appeal lies therefrom by one co-defendant against another.<sup>8</sup>

It is irregular for defendants with different defences to a suit and with different grounds of appeal, to join in a single appeal.<sup>9</sup>

9. Appeal by minor. — When once a guardian ad litem is appointed in a suit for a minor, the appointment unless and until revoked by the Court, continues not only for the term of the suit, but also for purposes of appeal.<sup>1</sup> He is the only person therefore who can file an appeal from the decree passed against the minor.<sup>2</sup> If he does not choose to appeal against the decree, no other person, even though he be the natural guardian, can assume guardianship and prefer the appeal<sup>3</sup> unless perhaps where the guardian ad litem is acting against the interest of the minor. But the mere fact that he does not prefer the appeal does not necessarily show that he is acting in dereliction of his duty. The natural inference, on the other hand, would be that he does not think it advisable in the interests of the minor to carry on the litigation further.<sup>4</sup> See also Notes on Rules in Order 32.

10. Right of appeal, when lost. — Whatever may be party's right of appeal under the general law, there is no doubt that he may agree not to appeal or may waive or forgo his right of appeal, or may be etsopped by his conduct from asserting such right.<sup>1</sup>

Where a party agrees to abide by a decision and not to appeal therefrom, the agreement will be binding on him, provided it is a lawful one.<sup>2</sup> An agreement, for instance, by the guardian of a minor not to appeal is not binding on the minor in law as the same is not for his benefit.<sup>3</sup> The agreement not to appeal must, however, be a clear one.<sup>4</sup>

A failure to abide by the terms of the decree does not disentitle a party to appeal.<sup>5</sup>

Where a party waives or abandons his right of appeal, the Appellate Court will refuse to allow him to prosecute the appeal.<sup>6</sup> Whether a party has waived such right is a question of fact depending upon the circumstances of the case.<sup>7</sup>

Where a party accepts the order of a Court, acts under it and thereby gets benefited by it, he will be estopped from questioning the order later on.<sup>9</sup> Thus, where a dismissal for default is set aside and the case remanded by the Appellate Court conditionally on the appellant paying a certain amount to the respondent as compensation, and the respondent accepts the compensation money, he will thereafter be estopped from appealing against the order of remand.<sup>9</sup> But, where a plaintiff in a partition suit takes possession of the properties allotted to him under the partition decree, this does not preclude him from appealing against the decree on the ground that he is entitled to more. The reason is that his claiming a larger share of properties in appeal is in no way inconsistent with his taking possession of the share allotted under the decree appealed against and there is no question of estoppel.<sup>10</sup> Where a vendee in a pre-emption suit appeals and obtains a stay of execution on his making a certain deposit, but before the appeal is heard he withdraws the deposit, he will lose his right of appeal.<sup>11</sup>

11. Execution proceedings.—This Section does not apply to execution proceedings where the orders passed are not decrees within the meaning of Section 2 (2) of the Code.<sup>1</sup>

12. Appeal against ex parte decree.—The Code of 1859 prohibited an appeal against an ex parte decree, but by judicial decisions the prohibition was held to apply only to cases where the defendant did not appear at all and not to cases where he, having once appeared, subsequently failed to appear.<sup>1</sup>

The Code of 1877 removed the prohibition, but neither that Code nor that of 1882 made any express provision for an appeal against an ex parte decree.

The conflict of decisions therefore continued as to whether, and under what circumstances, an appeal lay against an ex parte decree.<sup>2</sup>

(86) 8 All 354 (357) (FB). (Appeal — Respondent not appearing at hearing and not applying under O. 41 R. 21 may appeal against the Appellate Court decrees.)

It was in order to remove the doubt and the conflict that clause (3) was added by Section 45 of the Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act VII of 1888.<sup>3</sup> It is now quite clear that an appeal will lie from every ex parte decree whether the defendant has appeared once, or not at all.

There are four remedies open to a person to question a decree that has been passed ex parte against him, viz. —

- (1) an application under Order 9 Rule 13;
- (2) an appeal under Section 96 clause (2);
- (3) an application for review under Order 47;<sup>4</sup> and
- (4) a suit on the ground of fraud.<sup>5</sup>

Both the remedies (1) and (2) can be prosecuted concurrently as long as no decision is given in either of them. The mere fact that one remedy has been resorted to will not ipso facto bar the other.<sup>6</sup> Nor does the fact that no application has been filed under O. 9 R. 13 affect the maintainability of the appeal.<sup>7</sup>

Where the Appellate Court gives a decision in the appeal, then, as has been seen in Note 2 above, the decree of the first Court is superseded and that Court cannot proceed with the application to set aside the ex parte decree.<sup>8</sup> The Appellate Court may, however, withdraw the application from the first Court and deal with it itself.<sup>9</sup> It has also been seen in Note 2 above that where during the pendency of the appeal, the application under O. 9 R. 13 is granted by the first Court, the decree appealed against becomes non-existent and the appeal abates.<sup>10</sup>

But suppose the first Court refused to set aside the ex parte decree. How does it affect the powers of the Appellate Court to deal with the appeal? There is a consensus of judicial opinion that neither the rejection of the application under O. 9 R. 13, nor the omission to file an appeal against that order is a bar to an appeal from the decree itself.<sup>11</sup> It has also been held that where the application is refused on the merits by the first Court, the Appellate Court is precluded in an appeal against the ex parte decree from discussing the propriety of the ex parte order itself apart from the merits of the case on the law and the evidence.<sup>12</sup> This is in accordance with reason, because a special remedy by way of appeal against the order is provided for in the Code and where the law points out the remedy in particular way, it is in general that way that must be followed and not another. But where the application is dismissed in default of parties and there is no finding on the merits, it is competent for the Appellate Court to go into the question of the propriety of the ex parte order.<sup>13</sup>

But where no application is filed under O. 9 R. 13 and only an appeal is preferred against the ex parte decree, there is a conflict of opinion as to the power of the Appellate Court to question the propriety of the ex parte order itself and to remand the case for re-trial on that point. All the High Courts, except the High Courts of Allahabad and Rangoon and the Chief Court of Oudh, agree in holding that the Appellate Court can go into the question and, if necessary, remand the case under O. 41, R. 23 or under Section 151 for a fresh decision on the sufficiency of the cause for non-appearance.<sup>14</sup> The Allahabad and the Rangoon High Courts, and the Oudh Chief Court, on the other hand, hold a contrary view, namely that the Appellate Court is restricted to a consideration of the merits of the case only on the question of law and the evidence let in, and cannot enter into the question of the sufficiency of the cause for the non-appearance of the defendant at the hearing.<sup>15</sup> In view of O. 41 R. 33 under which the Appellate Court has wide powers of passing any order which the trial Court ought to have made, there does not seem to be any good reason why the Appellate Court should be prevented from discussing the question of the non-appearance of the party in cases where he has not applied under O. 9 R. 13, Civil Procedure Code. As stated by Mahmood, J., in Ajudhia Prasad v. Balmukund,<sup>16</sup> "where two proceedings or two remedies are provided by statute, one of them must not be taken as operating in derogation of the other."

1. ('27) AIR 1927 Cal 114 (116). (Therefore no revision lies against an order amending decree.)

14. Appeal against decree passed without jurisdiction. — A decree made without jurisdiction possesses nonetheless the qualities of a decree as between the parties thereto, and if there is a statutory appeal from decrees made in suits of that character, an appeal is competent though the decree is made without jurisdiction;<sup>1</sup> and similarly, where jurisdiction is usurped by a Court in passing an order against which an appeal would lie if it had been passed with jurisdiction, an appeal cannot be defeated on the ground that the order was made without jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup>

15. Appeal against consent decree. — Sub-clause (3) is new. The words "decree passed with the consent of parties" in the clause imply and involve an agreement between the parties<sup>1</sup> and therefore a mere failure to raise an objection to the grant of a relief<sup>2</sup> or a mere acceptance of an order offered by the Court<sup>3</sup> cannot make the decree a consent decree.

The consideration for the agreement involved in a consent decree is that both sides give up their right of appeal.<sup>4</sup> Accordingly, a judgment by consent operates as an estoppel<sup>5</sup> and all decrees, once they have been established to be by consent, are, by the policy of the Code, made unappealable<sup>6</sup> and are as valid and binding on the parties as any other decree, unless and until they are set aside by a proper judicial proceeding.<sup>7</sup>

A consent decree, however, passed under the compulsion of the Court is not a decree that can be said to have been passed with the consent of the party.<sup>9</sup>

Where one party alleges and the other denies or withdraws from a compromise entered into by the parties out of Court, and the Court finds in favour of the compromise and passes a decree, is such a decree "a decree passed with the consent of the parties"? There is a conflict of opinion on the point.

The Nagpur and the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Courts answer the question in the negative. The Nagpur Court holds that where a Court records a compromise notwithstanding the denial thereof by one party, it is really a finding very much against the consent of one party. Another reason advanced is that the removal of the words "and such decree shall be final" from Section 375 of the old Code, corresponding to O. 23 R. 3, shows that a decree passed under O. 23 R. 3 is not final unless consented to by the parties before the Court, at the time the decree is passed.<sup>9</sup> The Sind Court agrees that an appeal will lie from a decree passed under O. 23 R. 3 on the ground that the appellant did not consent to it.<sup>10</sup> The Calcutta, Madras, Lahore and Patna High Courts, on the other hand, take the opposite view, the latter Court expressly dissenting from the Nagpur view.<sup>11</sup> According to the Madras High Court<sup>12</sup> the expression "a decree passed with the consent of parties" is not limited to a decree passed with the consent expressed at the moment the decree is passed, but includes decrees based on consent proved to have been out of Court, though subsequently withdrawn or repudiated before the Court. The reason is that a decree can be passed in one of two ways —

- (a) by deciding the dispute on the merits, and,
- (b) on the consent of the parties.

There is no third way of passing a decree, so that a decree on a finding that parties have consented out of Court, if it does not fall under the first category, must necessarily fall under the second category of consent decrees.

The Lahore High Court<sup>13</sup> gives a further reason in support of the conclusion arrived at by the Madras High Court, viz., that where a compromise is proved to have been effected outside Court, the Court must, under O. 23 R. 3, pass a decree in accordance therewith. The parties also, must, at the time of the consent, have contemplated the issue of the decree as a matter of course. The decree so passed is only a formal expression of the agreement of the parties and, under such circumstances, must be deemed to be one passed with the consent of the parties.

Having regard to the fact that in O. 43 R. 1 (m) an appeal is newly provided for from an order recording or refusing to record a compromise and construing this provision with sub-clause (3) of Section 96, it seems clear that the only appeal intended by the Legislature is an appeal against the "recording or refusing to record" the alleged agreement and not a further appeal again from the decree recording the compromise.<sup>14</sup> The views of the Madras and Lahore High Courts are therefore to be preferred.

The proper method, therefore, of questioning a consent decree is either by review or by a regular suit and not by way of appeal.<sup>15</sup> Where a suit is filed to set aside a consent decree, it can be set aside on any ground which would invalidate an agreement<sup>16</sup> such as fraud, misrepresentation or mistake. In the last case, however, serious and substantial injustice must be shown to have resulted from the mistake.<sup>17</sup> But it is necessary to see in every case what it is that the parties have consented to.

If the parties merely agree to certain deviations in the procedure of the Court, as, for instance, by dispensing with particular kinds of evidence, but there is no clear agreement that they would be bound by the conclusions arrived at by the Court, the decree is not a "consent decree."<sup>18</sup>

If the parties clearly agree to be bound by the conclusions which the Court may arrive at by adopting a particular procedure, but such agreement does not result in the Court assuming jurisdiction extra cursum curiæ and does not involve the Court in going outside the ordinary course of procedure, then according to the Madras High Court, the decree may be a consent decree.<sup>19</sup> According to the Allahabad High Court it will still be a consent decree.<sup>20</sup>

If the parties clearly agree to be bound by the conclusions of the Court and such agreement results in the Court assuming jurisdiction extra cursum curiæ, then the Court is in the position of an arbitrator, and its decision will be a consent decree not open to appeal.<sup>21</sup>

Where a party offers to be bound by the statement on oath of a third person, the decree passed on such oath is not a consent decree. The statement is only conclusive evidence under the Oaths Act, on the basis of which the Court passes the decree.<sup>22</sup>

Under Section 375 of the old Code a consent decree was final so far as it related to the subject-matter of the suit and it was held that an appeal would lie from a consent decree if it dealt with matters outside the suit and that in such appeal the Appellate Court would modify the decree by omitting such extraneous matters.<sup>23</sup> It was also held under the old Code that an appeal would lie from a consent decree if the agreement or compromise in terms of which the decree was drawn up was not lawful.<sup>24</sup>

Under the present sub-section (3) of Section 96, there is no appeal from a consent decree in any case, though the order itself recording the compromise is appealable.<sup>25</sup>

Notwithstanding the above discussion there are nevertheless cases in which decrees, though passed with the consent of the parties, can be appealed against —

- (1) Where the dispute is over the nature of the compromise and the appellant wants to show what the compromise was.<sup>26</sup>
- (2) Where the consent decree is passed without an order recording the compromise.<sup>27</sup> The reason is that such recording is not a mere matter of form and the absence of it deprives the party of a right of appeal against the order, if it had been passed.<sup>28</sup>
- (3) Where the appellant was not a party to the consent decree<sup>29</sup> and the decree affects him prejudicially.<sup>30</sup>
- (4) Where the appellant appeals on the ground that it was not a decree passed with the consent of the parties.<sup>31</sup> generally the right of appeal is barred. If, on the other hand, it is not extra cursum curiae, unless there is a clear waiver of the right, the right of appeal will not be lost—Agreement to be bound by decision of Court amounts to such waiver.)

course of appeal. Where a plaintiff values his claim definitely, as in a suit for a debt, that value will determine the appellate forum also<sup>4</sup> unless by fraud or misrepresentation the plaintiff deliberately overvalues or undervalues the claim for the purpose of choosing his own forum.<sup>5</sup> In the latter case, it is the true value at which the plaintiff ought to have been valued that will represent the "value of the suit" for purposes of appeal.<sup>6</sup>

But in cases where the plaintiff is entitled to value his suit approximately or tentatively as in a suit for accounts or mesne profits, what is the value of the suit? It is on this point that there has been considerable divergence of opinion and four different views at least, have been expressed :

- (1) The Madras and Allahabad High Courts have held<sup>7</sup> that the "value of the suit" in such cases means the statutory value of the suit, that is, the value which the plaintiff was entitled to give under the Suits Valuation Act (1887) or other enactments. The Calcutta High Court in the under-mentioned Full Bench case<sup>8</sup> expressed a similar view but did not refer to a contrary view expressed in an earlier Full Bench decision of the same Court.<sup>9</sup> The Bombay High Court also held a similar view originally<sup>10</sup> but has, in later decisions, held a different view.<sup>11</sup> The Patna High Court has also held that ordinarily the value of the suit as given by the plaintiff in his plaint is to be the determining factor in such cases as regards the value of the appeal.<sup>12</sup>
- (2) The second view which has been held by Calcutta High Court is that the "value of the suit" which determines the course of appeal means the value of the suit as decreed by the Court, and not the tentative value given by the plaintiff in his plaint.<sup>13</sup> According to a Full Bench decision of the Lahore High Court there is a further distinction between a case where the decree is in excess of the amount claimed and a case where the decree is for a sum less than the amount claimed. In the former case it is the amount decreed that will be "value of the suit" while in the latter case it will be the tentative valuation originally given by the plaintiff.<sup>14</sup>

- (3) The third view which has been held by Mr. Justice Mukerjee in the Full Bench case in I. L. R. 34 Calcutta 954 is that the "value of the suit" for purposes of appeal is the value as decreed and as accepted by the plaintiff by payment of court-fees on the additional amount decreed.<sup>15</sup>
- (4) The fourth view is that, in case of Courts of limited pecuniary jurisdiction, as that of the Munsifs and Second Class Subordinate Judges, the value of a suit can in no case exceed the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court and the appeal will therefore always lie to the District Court.<sup>16</sup>

It is impossible to reconcile this divergence of opinion on legal principles. This conflict has arisen owing to the wrong method of interpreting statutes. When an enactment such as the Suits Valuation Act entitles the plaintiff to value a suit for accounts or for mesne profits in a particular manner, it is not in accordance with the accepted rules of interpretation to assume that that is not the value but something else, such as the amount decreed by the Court or the amount decreed and accepted by the plaintiff subsequent to the decree. In this view the first of the views set forth above must be taken as the soundest one.

Where on a plea of set-off, a Court gives a decree to the defendant for over Rs. 5,000, it is nevertheless the value of the suit as originally framed that determines the forum of appeal.<sup>17</sup> Formerly, however, (under Section 216 of the old Code) the amount of the decree in favour of defendant determined the forum of appeal.<sup>18</sup> See also Notes to Order 21 Rule 19, infra.

In suits for partition the proper valuation of the suit is the value of the share sought to be separated and not the value of the entire property.<sup>19</sup>

In suits for restitution of conjugal rights, the plaintiff's valuation must be accepted unless it is found that he has overvalued or undervalued it with any ulterior motives.<sup>20</sup>

In suits for redemption, the court-fee is payable on the principal sum secured<sup>21</sup> and this fixes also the forum of appeal when the mortgagor appeals.<sup>22</sup> As to the forum of appeal when the mortgagee appealed, see the undermentioned case.<sup>23</sup>

[See also ('25) AIR 1925 Lah 534 (534). (Appeal from an order in execution — Value is value of suit and not value of the matter in dispute in the execution proceedings.)]

[But wherein an account suit in which the claim is less than Rs. 5,000 a preliminary decree is passed which does not award any sum, the value of suit will determine the forum of appeal. See ('09) 4 Ind Cas 929 (930) (Lah).]

Section 96 Notes 18-22

19. Court-fee. — The valuation of a suit for purposes of stamp duty is a different thing from the valuation of the suit for the purposes of fixing the appellate forum.<sup>1</sup>

It is the duty of the Appellate Court to see that proper court-fees are paid both in the Appellate Court and in the Court below.<sup>2</sup> But where, under Section 12 of the Court-fees Act, a decision has been given by the first Court, as to the valuation of the suit, such decision is final.<sup>3</sup> That Section, however, does not apply where the decision is also as to the class to which a suit belongs,<sup>4</sup> or the sufficiency or the value of the stamp affixed.<sup>5</sup> Nor does it apply to an order dismissing a suit for non-payment of the additional court-fee ordered.<sup>6</sup>

As a general rule, when a question arises as to whether the appellant has paid deficient court-fee in the Court below, it is desirable that the appeal should be admitted before the point is decided so that no question of jurisdiction may arise,<sup>7</sup> and the matter dealt with at the earliest possible moment<sup>8</sup> so that the parties may not be kept in suspense upon this question.<sup>9</sup> The rule is, however, subject to the discretion of the Court, to postpone the determination of the point in exceptional cases.<sup>10</sup> The question of the sufficiency of stamp on the memorandum of appeal must always be regarded as open until the appeal is finally heard and disposed of.<sup>11</sup>

21. Limitation. — See Order 41 Rule 1 Note 8.

22. Appeals under other laws. — The provisions of the Code with regard to appeals will apply to appeals under other Acts in so far as they are made applicable by such Acts.

Section 97

97. [New.] Where any party aggrieved by a preliminary decree passed after the commencement of this Code does not appeal from such decree, he shall be precluded from disputing its correctness in any appeal which may be preferred from the final decree.

Appeal from final decree where no appeal from preliminary decree.

2. Preliminary decree — See Section 2 (2).
3. Effect of not drawing up a preliminary decree.
4. Two or more preliminary decrees, if can be drawn up — See Note 10 to Section 2 (2).
5. Effect of final decree being passed pending appeal against preliminary decree.
6. Effect of reversal of preliminary decree on final decree — See Note 5.
7. Court-fees.

Other Topics (Miscellaneous)

Appeal from preliminary decree — If further proceedings to be stayed. See Note 5.

Preliminary decree not appealed against—Effect of. See Note 1.

1. Scope and object of the Section. — This Section is new. Under the old Code objections to the preliminary decree could be raised in the appeal against the final decree.<sup>1</sup> This was felt to be unreasonable as, thereby, a party was permitted to wait till proceedings were carried on to a final stage and large costs were incurred, and then, after the final decree, raise objections which could have been taken at an earlier stage.<sup>2</sup> It is therefore enacted by the present Section that the failure to appeal against a preliminary decree is a bar to raising any objection to it in the appeal against the final decree.<sup>3</sup>

A Court while passing a final decree cannot re-open questions determined by a preliminary decree.<sup>4</sup>

3. Effect of not drawing up a preliminary decree. — This Section does not apply unless a preliminary decree is actually drawn up.<sup>1</sup> As to whether there is a right of appeal even when no such decree is drawn up, see the discussion in Note 8 to Section 2 (2). It has been held in the undermentioned cases that no appeal will lie against a mere finding even if such finding is recorded in the form of a decree.<sup>2</sup>

4. Two or more preliminary decrees, if can be drawn up. — See Note 10 to Section 2 (2) where the subject is fully discussed.

5. Effect of final decree being passed pending appeal against preliminary decree. — Under the old Code an appeal from an order in the nature of a preliminary decree could not be preferred or maintained after a final decree was passed in the case.<sup>1</sup> Under this Code a preliminary decree is a "decree" within Section 2 (2) and is appealable under this Section. Two questions have arisen in this connection —

1. Where an appeal is proffered against the preliminary decree, does the passing of the final decree by the first Court affect the maintainability of the appeal?
2. Is an appeal against the preliminary decree preferable after the final decree has been passed in the suit?

On the first point, all the High Courts have held that a passing of a final decree subsequent to the institution of the appeal will not affect the maintainability of the appeal.<sup>2</sup> On the second point there is a conflict of opinion. The High Courts of Madras,<sup>3</sup>

Allahabad<sup>4</sup> and Patna<sup>5</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Poshawar<sup>6</sup> have held that an appeal can be preferred against the preliminary decree even after the final decree has been passed. The basis of the view is that the final decree is dependent on the preliminary decree and that if the latter is set aside on appeal, the former falls with it.<sup>7</sup> Four different views at least were expressed by the Calcutta High Court on this point. One class of cases held that such an appeal was not competent;<sup>8</sup> a second class of cases held that it was incompetent unless an appeal was preferred from the final decree also;<sup>9</sup> a third class of cases held that appeal may be amended so as to convert it into an appeal against both the decrees;<sup>10</sup> and in the undermentioned case<sup>11</sup> the view of the Madras and the Allahabad High Courts was adopted as the correct one. The conflict has now been set at rest by the Full Bench decision in Taleb Ali v. Abdul Aziz, A. I. R. 1929 Calcutta 689, in which the view of the Madras and Allahabad High Courts has been adopted as the correct one.

The Lahore High Court held in earlier decisions that an appeal is not competent after the final decree has been passed,<sup>12</sup> but has taken a different view in a later decision.<sup>13</sup> The Bombay High Court in an earlier decision<sup>14</sup> and the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court<sup>15</sup> have held that when a party has the facility of time to appeal against the final decree also, he cannot be allowed to appeal against the preliminary decree only, as thereby he has a chance of getting a reversal of the final decree without paying court-fee for the same. But in a later decision, the Bombay High Court has expressed a contrary view.<sup>16</sup> In an earlier case of the Nagpur Court it was held that an appeal cannot be preferred against the preliminary decree after the final decree was passed.<sup>17</sup> A contrary view has, however, been taken in a later case in the same Court.<sup>18</sup>

This Section does not prevent a party from filing a combined appeal against both the preliminary and final decrees if the dates permit him to do so,<sup>19</sup> but court-fee must be paid in respect of them both.<sup>20</sup>

A final decree passed pending an appeal from the preliminary decree is not thereby rendered invalid, and if the appeal is dismissed, the final decree passed will not be affected in any way.<sup>21</sup>

7. Court-fees. — An appeal from a preliminary decree or from a final decree must be stamped ad valorem on the amount of the subject-matter in dispute in the appeal.<sup>1</sup> But where a preliminary decree for partition declares plaintiff's rights to mesne profits and makes provision for its subsequent determination, an appeal against the preliminary decree need not bear a court-fee in respect of the mesne profits, even where the decision as to mesne profits is challenged in appeal.<sup>2</sup> Where a party appeals first from a preliminary decree and pays ad valorem fee thereon and subsequently appeals to the same Court from the final decree also, he need not pay ad valorem court-fee again on the entire amount awarded by the final decree but only on the amount, if any, in excess of that on which court-fee was already paid.<sup>3</sup> An appellant can prefer a single combined appeal from both the preliminary and final decree if the dates permit him to do so, but court-fee must be paid only on the larger of the subject-matters in dispute in respect of the two decrees.<sup>4</sup>

98. [S. 575.] (1) Where an appeal is heard by a Bench of two or more Judges, the appeal shall be decided in accordance with the opinion of such Judges or of the majority (if any) of such Judges.

Section 98

Decision where appeal heard by two or more Judges.

(2) Where there is no such majority which concurs in a judgment varying or reversing the decree appealed from, such decree shall be confirmed :

Provided that where the Bench hearing the appeal is composed of two Judges belonging to a Court consisting of more than two Judges, and the Judges composing the Bench differ in opinion on a point of law,<sup>6</sup> they<sup>7</sup> may<sup>11</sup> state the point of law upon which they differ and the appeal shall then be heard upon that point only<sup>8</sup> by one or more of the other Judges,<sup>9</sup> and such point shall be decided according to the opinion of the majority<sup>10</sup> (if any) of the Judges who have heard the appeal, including those who first heard it.

1. Legislative changes. — This Section corresponds to Section 575 of the old Code. The most important change is : the words “they may state the point of law upon which they differ and the appeal shall then be heard upon that point only by one or more of the other Judges and such point shall be decided” in the proviso to clause 2 have been substituted for the words “the appeal may be referred to one or more of the other Judges of the same Court and shall be decided.” See Notes 6 and 8 below.

2. Amendments after 1908. — Sub-section (3) has been newly added by the Repealing and Amending Act XVIII of 1928. See Note 12 below.

3. Scope and applicability of the Section. — This Section deals with the question as to how a decision is to be arrived at in an appeal which is heard by a Bench of two or more Judges.

The Section refers in terms to appeals. But the question has arisen whether by virtue of Section 141 of the Code it is applicable to other proceedings. Under the old Code it was held that by virtue of Section 647 (corresponding to Section 141) Section 575 applied to miscellaneous proceedings<sup>1</sup> and applications to the High Court in its extraordinary jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup> But while the words used in Section 647 of the old Code were “the procedure herein prescribed” the words used in the present Section 141 are “the procedure provided in this Code in regard to suits.” It has accordingly been held that Section 98, which prescribes the procedure in regard to appeals, cannot be extended by Section 141 to miscellaneous proceedings such as revision applications.<sup>3</sup>

2. ('81) 5 Bom 680 (681).

[See also ('01) 25 Bom 478 (484). (Question not decided.)]

3. ('15) AIR 1915 Mad 1198 (1196). (Proceedings held to be regulated by Clause 36, Letters Patent (Madras).)

It was held by the Calcutta High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> that a reference to the High Court under S. 66 of the Income Tax Act is not an appeal from any decree and Section 98 cannot be applied to such a proceeding by recourse to Section 141. The Income Tax Act has now been amended by Act XXIV of 1926 by adding Section 66A by which the provisions of Section 98 of the Code are expressly made applicable to reference under Section 66 of that Act.<sup>5</sup>

By virtue of Section 54 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, this Section applies to appeals in land acquisition cases.<sup>6</sup>

As to the effect of this Section on Section 10 (2) of the Punjab Courts Act, and Section 10 of the Central Provinces Courts Act (1917), see the undermentioned cases.<sup>7</sup>

4. Difference of opinion in the decision of preliminary objection. — The decision of a preliminary objection to the hearing of an appeal is not a "hearing" of the appeal but precedes the hearing. Section 98 does not apply to a difference of opinion in such a decision, the words of the Section being "where an appeal is heard," etc.<sup>1</sup>

5. Difference of opinion as to part of decree. — Where the Judges agree that a part of the decree should be reversed, but differ as to the rest, then according to the Calcutta,<sup>1</sup> Madras<sup>2</sup> and Allahabad<sup>3</sup> High Courts, the part as to which the Judges agree should be reversed, and rest of the decree confirmed. The Lahore High Court, on the other hand, has held that the whole decree should be confirmed in such a case.<sup>4</sup>

6. "Differ in opinion on a point of law." — The reference under Section 98 to other Judges must be only on a question of law and not on a question of fact.<sup>1</sup> For instances of points of law, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>2</sup> See also Notes to Section 100.

7. Reference, whether can be made by one of the differing Judges alone. — The use of the pronoun "they" in the present Section seems to show that the reference to other Judges must be made by both the differing Judges. The wording in the previous Code "the appeal may be referred" permitted a different view being held.<sup>1</sup>

8. "The appeal shall then be heard upon that point only." — Under the old Code when the Judges hearing an appeal differed on a point of law, the whole case was referred to one or more of the other Judges.<sup>1</sup> Under the present Section, it is only the point of law on which they differ that can be so referred and the Judges hearing the reference can only hear arguments on the specific point and not the whole appeal.<sup>2</sup>

9. Reference to be to one or more of the other Judges of the Court. — The reference should be heard by one or more of the other Judges of the Court, according to the practice of the Bombay,<sup>1</sup> Calcutta<sup>2</sup> and Lahore<sup>3</sup> High Courts. The Allahabad High Court, however, holds that the Bench hearing the reference should include also the Judges who originally heard the appeal.<sup>4</sup> See also the undermentioned case of the Madras High Court.<sup>5</sup>

10. Decision to be according to the opinion of the majority. — Though the reference is, under the Section, to be heard by a Judge or Judges other than those who heard the case originally, the decision upon the point must be according to the opinion of the majority of the Judges who heard the appeal including those who first heard it.<sup>1</sup>

11. Differing Judges not stating the point of law — Effect. — If the Judges differ on a point of law, but do not state the point for the decision of other Judge or Judges, the decree appealed from should be confirmed.<sup>1</sup> Where the differing Judges have, without stating the point as required by the Section, delivered their judgments without any reservation, they cannot subsequently state the point of law.<sup>2</sup> See also the undermentioned case under Section 23 of Act XXIII of 1861.<sup>3</sup>

12. Sub-section (3) — Clause 36 of the Letters Patent—Effect of. — Under Clause 36 of the Letters Patent as it originally stood, where there was a difference of opinion among the Judges hearing an appeal, the opinion of the senior Judge was to prevail,<sup>1</sup> while, under the present Section 98, if there is no majority concurring in reversing or varying a decree, the decree shall be confirmed.<sup>2</sup> After the amendment of the Letters Patent in 1928, the procedure under Clause 36 of the Letters Patent on a difference of opinion is the same as that under Section 98<sup>3</sup> except that —

Section 98
Notes 12-13

(1) a reference under Clause 36 is obligatory, while it is optional under Section 98, and

(2) the reference under Clause 36 may be on a point of fact as well as of law, while under Section 98 it can only be on a point of law.

Before sub-section (3) of this Section was introduced by the Repealing and Amending Act (XVIII of 1928), there was a difference of opinion as to whether Section 98 or Clause 36 of the Letters Patent was to be applied in appeals to Chartered High Courts. The view generally taken was that Section 98 applied to appeals from subordinate Courts<sup>4</sup> but that Clause 36 applied to appeals preferred under the Letters Patent.<sup>5</sup> The Calcutta High Court in two cases held that Section 98 should be applied in all cases.<sup>6</sup> The introduction of sub-section (3) shows clearly that the applicability of Clause 36 is not in any way controlled by this Section. It has accordingly been held by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court that Clause 36 applies to all appeals to Chartered High Courts, whether from subordinate Courts or under the Letters Patent, and that Section 98 applies only to High Courts other than Chartered High Courts, e. g., the Chief Courts and Courts of Judicial Commissioners.<sup>7</sup> The High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>8</sup> Lahoro<sup>9</sup> and Patna<sup>10</sup> have followed the view taken by the High Court of Madras.

13. Letters Patent appeal, whether lies from a confirming judgment under sub-section (2) of Section 98. — Before the amended Letters Patent of 1928 was passed, it was held that an appeal under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent lay against the confirming judgment passed under sub-section (2) of this Section.<sup>1</sup> Under the amended Letters Patent no such appeal lies to the High Court.<sup>2</sup>

Even before the Letters Patent was amended, there was no appeal against a decision arrived at after the reference under the proviso to sub-section (2), because the decision was necessarily that of a majority of the Judges, and the Letters Patent provided for an appeal only where there was an equal division of opinion between the Judges.<sup>3</sup>

No decree to be reversed or modified for error or irregularity not affecting merits or jurisdiction.

99. [S. 578.] No decree shall be reversed or substantially varied, nor shall any case be remanded, in appeal on account of any misjoinder of parties or causes of action or any error, defect or irregularity in any proceedings in the suit, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court.

1. Alterations in the Section. — The words "any misjoinder of parties or causes of action" have been newly added. (See Note 4 below and also O. 2 Rr. 3, 4.)

The words "whether in the decision or in any order passed in the suit or otherwise" have been omitted and the words "in any proceedings in the suit" have been substituted instead.

2. Scope and object of the Section. — This Section contains one of the most salutary rules of law. Its aim is "to prevent technicalities from overcoming the ends of justice, and from operating as a means of circuitry of litigation."<sup>1</sup> In other words, a decision which is correct on the merits and is within the jurisdiction of the Court, should not be upset merely for technical and immaterial defects.<sup>2</sup>

The Section deals with objections raised in appeal as regards errors, defects or irregularities of procedure in the lower Court. As laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Maharajah Mahashur Singh v. Baboo Hurruck Narain,<sup>3</sup> "the law that an error or irregularity cannot be raised as a ground of appeal only refers to errors, defects or irregularities of procedure, not to rules of law or conditions which affect the substantive rights of the parties." A non-compliance with every rule of procedure does not ipso facto destroy the validity of the whole proceeding. The purpose of the rule violated must, in each case, be examined.<sup>4</sup>

 4. ('30) A I R 1920 Cal 597 (598, 599) : 46 Cal 978. (Mookerjee, J.)

An error, defect or irregularity of procedure must, in order to be a valid ground of appeal, be a material one, that is, should have either —

- (a) affected the merits of the case,<sup>5</sup> or
- (b) affected the jurisdiction of the Court.<sup>6</sup>

The merits of a case are said to be affected when the flaw or error has resulted in an error of judgment.<sup>7</sup> The term "jurisdiction" in this Section is used in the sense of pecuniary or local jurisdiction or jurisdiction relating to the subject-matter; it does not mean the legal authority of a Court to do certain things.<sup>8</sup>

A mere irregularity, therefore, which does not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court, is no ground for reversing or varying a decision in appeal.<sup>9</sup>

It has been held under the Code of 1882 that the error, defect or irregularity should have been subsequent to the institution of the suit and not in the frame or institution.<sup>10</sup> The present Section however will apply to all irregularities whether subsequent to the suit or not. But irregularities in prior suits and different proceedings are, of course, not within the Section.<sup>11</sup>

This Section applies to objections raised in appeals against original decrees as well as in appeals from appellate decrees by virtue of Section 108 of the Code.<sup>12</sup>

Though the Section refers in terms to decrees, yet, it is illustrative of a general principle.<sup>13</sup>

In Muhammad Husain Khan v. Babu Kishva Nandan,<sup>14</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council held that although the provisions contained in the Civil Procedure Code do not regulate the procedure of the Privy Council in hearing appeals from India, yet, as the rule embodied in this Section proceeds upon a sound principle, and is calculated to promote justice, the rule should be followed by the Privy Council also.

It will be useful in dealing with this Section to refer to the provisions of Section 105 which provides affirmatively that an error, defect or irregularity in any order affecting the decision of the case can be raised as a ground of appeal in an appeal from the decree in the suit.<sup>15</sup>

3. Retrospective operation of the Section. — This Section regulates the procedure of the Appellate Court and therefore is applicable to all appeals heard after the new Code came into force even though the suit itself was instituted under the old Code.<sup>1</sup>

4. Misjoinder and non-joinder. — Section 578 of the old Code provided that no decree should be varied or reversed “on account of any error, defect or irregularity, whether in the decision or in any order passed in the suit or otherwise not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court.” This, as has been seen already in Note 2 above, was interpreted to mean errors and irregularities subsequently committed in a suit which had been properly instituted.<sup>1</sup> A mere misjoinder of causes of action which did not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court was held cured by the Section.<sup>2</sup> But a misjoinder whether of parties or causes of action or of both which affected the very institution of the suit was held to be outside the scope of the Section.<sup>3</sup> The introduction of the words “on account of any misjoinder of parties or causes of action” in the present Section makes it clear that the Appellate Court cannot now dismiss a suit for such misjoinder<sup>4</sup> unless it affected the merits of the case<sup>5</sup> or the jurisdiction of the Court.<sup>6</sup> It may, however, in order to meet the ends of justice, allow a party to amend the plaint<sup>7</sup> or to withdraw the suit against the misjoined defendants with liberty to bring a fresh suit,<sup>8</sup> or give a finding against each misjoined defendant separately.<sup>9</sup>

Though the Section uses the words "misjoinder of parties or causes of action," a misjoinder of both the parties and causes of action has also been held to be within the Section.<sup>10</sup> There is some conflict of opinion as to whether the word "misjoinder" in this Section includes "non-joinder."<sup>11</sup> This has been due to the fact that the Legislature, while it has newly introduced the word "non-joinder" in Order 1 Rule 9 (which provides that no suit shall be defeated by reason of misjoinder or non-joinder of parties) has not so done in Section 99.

This Section is limited in its application to where an appellant raises an objection that there has been a misjoinder in the lower Court. It does not deal with a case where the lower Court decides that there is a misjoinder and the appellant contends that there is no misjoinder. The observations of the Lahore High Court in the undermentioned case,<sup>12</sup> treating such a case as being one under the Section, do not seem to be sound.

5. Error, defect or irregularity, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. — The following irregularities of procedure under the Code have been held to be mere irregularities which do not entail a reversal or variation of the decree of the lower Court. For other cases of irregularities, see Note 2.

6. Analogous provisions of law. — The principle of this Section that a technical objection should not stand in the way of upholding a decision which is substantially just and correct on the merits, has been recognised in other Acts also.

Under Section 167 of the Evidence Act, an improper admission or rejection of evidence is not of itself a ground, for a new trial or reversal of any decision in any case, if it appears that independently of the evidence objected to and admitted, there was sufficient evidence to justify the decision,<sup>1</sup> or that if the rejected evidence had been received, it would not have varied the decision.<sup>2</sup>

Under Section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act it is provided that an under-valuation or overvaluation of a suit or appeal will not be a ground of appeal even if it affects the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court trying the suit or appeal, unless

Note 6

- (a) the objection thereto is taken at the earliest possible opportunity or,
- (b) that by reason of such overvaluation or undervaluation the disposal of the suit or appeal has been affected on the merits.<sup>3</sup>

Before the Act was passed, an overvaluation or undervaluation of a suit was considered as an irregularity governed by the provisions of Section 350 of the Code of 1859 or Section 378 of the Code of 1882, corresponding to Section 99 of the present Code. Accordingly it was held that where such valuation affected the jurisdiction of the Court it was a valid ground of appeal.<sup>4</sup> Under the present Act, even if such valuation affects jurisdiction, it will not be a ground of appeal unless the merits of the case are also affected thereby.<sup>5</sup>

The Section has however been held to be restricted in its applicability to cases where the valuation depends upon the discretion of the parties or the Court. It is not applicable to cases where the valuation is in violation of the rules of the Court-fees Act.<sup>6</sup>

Under Section 36 of the Stamp Act, 1899, where an instrument has been admitted, the admission cannot be called into question at any subsequent stage of the proceeding, whether in the original Court itself or in the Appellate Court on the ground that the instrument has not been duly stamped.<sup>7</sup> But the Appellate Court may make

7. Objections to error, etc., when to be raised. — Section 99 does not expressly state when an objection to a misjoinder or error, defect or irregularity should be taken. The following provisions show that an objection to the irregularities mentioned therein should be taken at the earliest possible opportunity —

- (1) Under Section 21 of the Code, an objection as to the place of suing should be taken at the earliest possible opportunity, and in all cases where issues are settled, at or before such settlement.<sup>1</sup>
- (2) Under O. 1 R. 13 of the Code, an objection as to non-joinder or misjoinder of parties should be similarly taken at the earliest possible opportunity.<sup>2</sup>

- (4) Under Section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, an objection as to undervaluation or overvaluation of suits or appeals should be taken, in the Court of first instance, at or before the settlement of issues, or in the lower Appellate Court in the memorandum of appeal to that Court.<sup>4</sup>

As regards other errors, defects and irregularities not specified above, it has been held that an objection not raised at the earliest possible opportunity will be taken as waived.<sup>5</sup> Similarly, parties who have accepted an irregularity cannot object to or go

1. The words "save where" have been substituted for the words "unless when" which occurred in the old Section.
2. The word "expressly" is new. Even under the old Code it had been held that the right of second appeal conferred by the Code was a valuable substantive right, that such a right could not be taken away by mere implication; and that when the Legislature intended to take away the right it would do so expressly.<sup>1</sup> The insertion of the word "expressly" in the present Section makes the position clear.<sup>3</sup> (In this connection, vide Note 3 below.)
3. The words "body of" are new.
4. The words "for the time being in force" are new.
5. The word "specified" which occurred before the word "law" in the old Section has been omitted. This change was introduced to set at rest certain doubts entertained under the old Section, as to whether the words "specified law" meant statute law or law specified in the memorandum of appeal.<sup>3</sup>
6. The word "some" occurring before the word "usage" is new.

Section 101 corresponds to Section 585 of the Code of 1882 without any change.

2. Scope, object and applicability of the Sections. — It has been seen in Note 2 to Section 96 ante that a right of appeal is not a natural or inherent right attaching to litigation, and does not exist and cannot be assumed unless expressly given by statute or by rules having the force of statute.<sup>1</sup> It has also been seen that parties cannot confer a right of appeal upon themselves in any matter by agreement or mutual consent.<sup>2</sup> These principles apply with equal force to second or special appeals and therefore, a right of second appeal does not exist unless expressly given by statutory provisions. Section 100 is such an express provision, and it declares that a second or special appeal shall lie from every decree passed in first appeal on the grounds mentioned therein. Section 101 enacts that no second appeal shall lie except on the grounds mentioned in Section 100.<sup>3</sup>

Sections
Note 2

The scope of a first appeal differs from that of a second appeal in that the former is not limited to any particular grounds of appeal such as is provided by this Section. The reason for imposing limitations on the grounds that may be taken in second appeal is based on grounds of public policy expressed in the maxim interest reipublice ut sit finis litium — it concerns the State that there be an end to litigation.<sup>4</sup> The conditions mentioned in the Section must therefore be strictly fulfilled before a second appeal can be maintained and no Court in India or elsewhere has any power to add to or enlarge those grounds.<sup>5</sup> When a second appeal is brought up for admission, the Judge has jurisdiction to see whether the grounds mentioned in the Section exist and to reject the appeal if no such grounds exist.<sup>6</sup> And even if an order of admission had been passed ex parte by a single Judge of the High Court, it may be impugned and set aside by the Bench before whom the appeal is brought up for hearing, on the ground that the reasons for the admission are erroneous or inadequate.<sup>7</sup>

Sections 100 and 101 read together make it quite clear that —

- (1) a second appeal will lie only on the ground of an error in law or procedure<sup>8</sup> and that
- (2) a second appeal will not lie merely on the ground of an error on a question of fact.<sup>9</sup>

It is the decision of lower Appellate Court that is to be referred to in the grounds of second appeal, and not that of the original Court,<sup>10</sup> and no decree can be asked for in second appeal against a person against whom there was no first appeal.<sup>11</sup> Further, the decision of the lower Appellate Court will be considered only on the point raised by the appellant, and the rejection of the appeal does not mean that the High Court necessarily affirms all the findings which the lower Appellate Court may have incidentally come to.<sup>12</sup>

A decision that a particular question is not in dispute cannot be attacked in special appeal; the proper procedure in such a case is to apply for review.<sup>13</sup>

The rule that a finding of fact cannot be attacked in second appeal does not apply to second appeals to which the provisions of Sections 100 and 101 of the Civil Procedure Code do not apply.<sup>14</sup>

Sections
100 & 101
Notes 2-4

As to the jurisdiction of the lower Courts, after an appeal is filed, over the subject-matter of the litigation and the effect of the exercise of such jurisdiction on the second appeal, see Section 96 Note 2, ante.

The grounds of appeal set forth in this Section have been extended to second appeals under various local or special enactments.<sup>15</sup>

The High Court will not set aside, in second appeal, a decree of the lower Appellate Court unless it is shown to be wrong.<sup>16</sup>

3. "Save where otherwise expressly provided in the body of this Code."

— A second appeal will always lie to the High Court from an appellate decree of a Court subordinate to a High Court, unless precluded by some express provision of law.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where any Section of the Code has declared that any decision shall be final, no second appeal will lie from such decision. The following are some of such provisions—

- (i) Section 102.<sup>2</sup>
- (ii) Section 104.<sup>3</sup>
- (iii) Order 47 Rule 7.<sup>4</sup>
- (iv) Paragraph 16 clause (2) of the Second Schedule.<sup>5</sup>

4. "Or by any other law for the time being in force." — The following are instances of other laws barring second appeal —

1. Section 27 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act declaring that the decrees and orders of a Small Cause Court are final.

100 & 101

the cross-objections of the respondent.<sup>2</sup> It does not matter in what character the appeal reaches the first Appellate Court. Where an appeal was preferred to the District Court against the dismissal of certain claim proceedings under the Madras Forest Act, 1882, and it was contended that no second appeal lay from the decree of the District Court, their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"In their Lordships' opinion this objection is not well founded. Their view is that where proceedings of this character reach the District Court that Court is appealed to as one of the ordinary Courts of the country, with regard to whose procedure, orders and decrees the ordinary rules of the Civil Procedure Code apply . . . . If the ordinary Courts of the country are seized of a dispute of that character it would require, in the opinion of the Board, a specific limitation to exclude the ordinary incidents of litigation."<sup>3</sup>

Where the subject-matter of the appeal is not a decree at all, no second appeal will lie.<sup>4</sup>

Appeals are to be preferred against the decree and not against the judgment.<sup>5</sup> Consequently, a person who has obtained a decree in his favour cannot prefer an appeal on the ground that he is dissatisfied with some particular expressions or findings against him.<sup>6</sup> A party must, if he wishes to appeal against the finding on a particular issue against him, apply for amendment of the decree by embodying therein the decision on the issue.<sup>7</sup> But, where a decree is apparently in favour of a party but really affects him adversely, he is entitled to appeal against such decree. Thus, where a suit for pre-emption is brought against the purchaser of certain property and the vendor thereof and the suit is dismissed on the ground that there is no valid sale and that therefore the plaintiff has no cause of action, the purchaser of the property is entitled to appeal against the decree although it is one dismissing the suit against him.<sup>8</sup> See Note 6 to Section 96 for a full discussion.

6. "High Court," meaning of. — The expression "High Court" is not defined in the Code, and must therefore be taken to have the meaning given to it by the General Clauses Act, 1897. Under Section 3 (24) of that Act "High Court" used with reference to civil proceedings "shall mean the highest Civil Court in the part of British India in which the Act or Regulation containing the expression operates." Thus, the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Central Provinces is a High Court within the meaning of Section 100.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, the Court of the Commissioner of the Kumaon Division, which, under S. 6 of the Scheduled Districts Act, 1874, exercises the powers and performs the duties of a High Court for that division is a "High Court" within the meaning of Section 100.<sup>2</sup> See also Note 3 to Section 3, ante.

7. "Court subordinate to a High Court." — See Section 3, ante.

The Court of the Political Agent of the Southern Maratha Country has been held to be a Court subordinate to the High Court, and a second appeal will lie therefrom to the High Court.<sup>1</sup> But a special Judge under Section 104 clause (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, is not a Court subordinate to the High Court and no second appeal will lie from his decision.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, where under a scheme-decree of the High Court directing the District Judge to select a trustee the latter does so, he acts simply as a persona designata and no second appeal will lie from his selection.<sup>3</sup>

8. "Decree," meaning of. — See Section 2 (2), ante.

It is only where the decision of the lower Appellate Court amounts to a decree that an appeal lies therefrom to the High Court under this Section;<sup>1</sup> otherwise not.<sup>2</sup>

9. Execution cases. — Where an order in execution amounts to a decree under Section 2 (2) read with Section 47, a second appeal will lie therefrom as in the case of every other decree.<sup>1</sup> Where, however, a second appeal is barred in the suit itself, e. g., suits of a small cause nature, no second appeal will lie from an order in execution in such a suit though such order may fall under Section 47 and amounts to a decree.<sup>2</sup>

100 & 101
Notes 7-9

Sections
100 & 101
Notes 9-12

In the case of orders in execution which do not amount to decrees, no second appeal will lie, though a first appeal may lie if the order falls under Section 104, as an appealable order.<sup>3</sup>

10. Separate appeals against separate decrees. — Where, in appeals relating to the same matter between the same parties, the lower Appellate Court passes separate decrees, then separate appeals should be filed with respect to those decrees.<sup>1</sup> Where two appeals were preferred against a single decree by two sets of defendants and the result of the appeals was that the suit was dismissed, it was, however, held that the plaintiffs need not file two second appeals, and that it was enough if they filed one second appeal.<sup>2</sup>

11. Grounds of second appeal — General. — A second appeal will lie on the following main grounds —

- (1) The decision being contrary to law.
- (2) The decision being contrary to usage having the force of law.
- (3) Failure to determine some material issue of law.
- (4) Failure to determine some material issue of usage having the force of law.
- (5) Substantial error or defect in procedure which may possibly have affected the decision of the case on the merits.

12. Contrary to law — General. — A Court commits an error of law if it acts contrary to, or fails to apply the provisions of, any law<sup>1</sup> or any legal principle.<sup>2</sup> Thus, the failure to draw a presumption under Sections 79 to 85 of the Evidence Act, 1872, is an error of law. But the word "law" is not limited to statute law alone<sup>3</sup> but will also include general principles of law.<sup>4</sup> In deciding disputes before them, Courts should act in accordance with such principles of law. Thus —

- (1) They should clearly understand the issue or the matter in dispute before them. A misconception of issue or of the true questions in controversy in the case is an error of law.<sup>5</sup>
- (2) They should arrive at their findings of fact from the evidence tendered before them. A finding based on no evidence or in disregard of evidence or on inadmissible evidence<sup>6</sup> or on assumptions of facts without inquiry<sup>7</sup> is an error of law.
- (3) They are bound to draw, for the purpose of deciding the issue before them, such inferences of fact as are reasonable from the facts placed before them.<sup>8</sup> A refusal to draw any inference from proved facts one way or the other<sup>9</sup> or the drawing of an inference which cannot be drawn from, and is not warranted by the facts is an error of law.<sup>10</sup>

- (4) The Appellate Court is bound to remember the rule that the onus is on the appellant to show that the decision of the lower Court is wrong.<sup>11</sup> The overlooking of this principle is an error of law.<sup>12</sup>

13. Decision not based on legal evidence. — A decision of a Court must, in law, be based on the evidence, oral and documentary, legally adduced in the case. A Court will therefore be committing an error of law —

- (1) if it bases its decision on no evidence at all,<sup>1</sup> and on mere surmises and conjectures;<sup>2</sup>

- * (2) if it bases its decision on irrelevant<sup>3</sup> and inadmissible evidence<sup>4</sup> as such evidence is no legal evidence; weight and importance, or the evidence relied upon by the first Court, has not been dealt with in the judgment, it may be regarded as sufficient proof that the evidence has not been considered.<sup>9</sup> But the High Court will not interfere in second appeal with the judgment of the first Appellate Court on the ground of the failure to consider material evidence, if such evidence had not been brought to the notice of the lower Appellate Court<sup>10</sup> or if it had not been relied upon before the said Court.<sup>11</sup>

100 & 101

14. Misconception of issue. — See Note 12 above.

15. Appellate Court assuming jurisdiction. — An Appellate Court acts contrary to law if it acts without jurisdiction in any matter.<sup>1</sup> It has already been seen in Note 14 to Section 96 ante, that a decree made without jurisdiction possesses nonetheless the qualities of a "decree" and that if there is a statutory appeal made in suits of that character, an appeal is competent from such decree. The same principles apply to first appellate decrees which are appealable under this Section.<sup>2</sup>

But every decree, whether passed with or without jurisdiction, is appealable under this Section only where there is no express provision to the contrary in the body of the Code or in any other law for the time being in force. Thus, Section 27 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887, provides that a decree or order of a Small Cause Court shall be final. Similarly, an order passed under O. 21 Rr. 60, 61, 98, 99 or 101 has been declared by O. 21 Rr. 63 and 103 to be conclusive. Where in such cases an appeal is entertained by the lower Appellate Court, no second appeal will lie even though the adjudication of the first Appellate Court may amount to a decree. It has accordingly been held by the Madras<sup>3</sup> and Bombay<sup>4</sup> High Courts that no second appeal will lie from the decree of the first Appellate Court where the first appeal itself is not competent in law. The Allahabad,<sup>5</sup> Calcutta,<sup>6</sup> Lahore<sup>7</sup> and Patna<sup>8</sup> High Courts have, however, held that a second appeal will lie even if no appeal lay to the first Appellate Court. The decisions are merely based on the view that a decree passed without jurisdiction is nevertheless a decree and is open to appeal. The fact that even a decree is appealable only "save as otherwise expressly provided" was not adverted to in those decisions. It is submitted that the decisions cannot be accepted as correct.

No second appeal will, in any case, lie against the decision of the lower Appellate Court without jurisdiction where such decision will not be appealable even if passed with jurisdiction. Thus, where the first Appellate Court entertains without jurisdiction an appeal against an order, no second appeal will lie because no such appeal will lie under Section 104 clause (2) even if the first Appellate Court had entertained the appeal with jurisdiction.<sup>9</sup> But where the lower Appellate Court erroneously dismisses an appeal on the ground that no appeal lies to it, the dismissal is nevertheless a decree and is open to second appeal.<sup>10</sup>

16. Exercise of discretion by the lower Appellate Court. — Where a discretion to do or not to do a particular act is vested in the Court by the provisions of the Code, the Court is bound to exercise such discretion in one way or other. A refusal to exercise it or a non-exercise of it is an error or defect in procedure within the meaning of the Section.<sup>1</sup> Where a Court does exercise its discretion it must do so judicially,<sup>2</sup> i. e., on sound legal principles.<sup>3</sup> An exercise of discretion in an arbitrary,<sup>4</sup> unreasonable<sup>5</sup> or non-judicial<sup>6</sup> manner or which is based on wrong conclusions of fact<sup>7</sup> is an error of law which will be a valid ground of second appeal. But where the Court has exercised its discretion in a judicial manner, there is no error either of law or of procedure and consequently, such exercise of discretion cannot be interfered with in second appeal.<sup>8</sup> The Patna High Court has in the undermentioned case<sup>9</sup> observed as follows : "In short, these exercises of discretion by lower Courts, whether the trial Court or the first Appellate Court, must be remedied, if at all, at once by the superior Court on the application of the party aggrieved and it is too late if that party allows the case to proceed and then seeks to interfere with the discretion in appeal." The above observations do not appear to be sound as the assumption on which they are based viz., that the aggrieved party would, in every case, have a remedy even apart from an appeal from the ultimate decision of the case, is not correct. The question whether an appeal lies or not from any particular exercise of discretion is, however, largely an academic one, as it is necessary to examine in each case the facts of the case, before the question can be answered. If on such examination the exercise of the discretion is found to be vitiated by any of the above-mentioned circumstances, the second appeal will be upheld; if, on the other hand, it is found to have been exercised judicially, the appeal would fail.<sup>10</sup> The following are all discretionary matters in which the High Court will not, in second appeal, interfere unless the discretion has not been exercised by the lower Appellate Court in a judicial manner and in accordance with legal principles — the discretion has been properly exercised or not, where, at the time of second appeal the decree-holder has already recovered a substantial sum and there is no hardship.<sup>37</sup> But a decree for payment in instalments without any provision for interest is arbitrary and is liable to be set aside in second appeal.<sup>38</sup>

Admission of additional evidence in appeal.<sup>45</sup> — In a case, however, where the lower Appellate Court had not exercised its discretion judicially but had refused to admit additional evidence on the ground that there would be no end to litigation, it was held broadly by a majority of the Full Bench of the High Court of Madras<sup>46</sup> that a refusal to admit additional evidence is, in no case, a ground of second appeal. Sadasiva Aiyar, J., dissented from this view and held that the question whether the discretion was exercised properly was a question of law and could be interfered with in second appeal. The view of the majority of the Full Bench is based on no other reason than that it has been the practice of the Courts not to entertain second appeals on that point and that whether the lower Appellate Court "requires" any additional evidence is for that Court alone to say, and it is not for a superior Court to control its discretion. It is respectfully submitted that the view of the Full Bench is not correct.

Its decisions as to the credibility of the witnesses is neither an error of law nor of procedure and will not be interfered with in second appeal<sup>1</sup> unless the witnesses are disbelieved on grounds which are opposed to law.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where a witness is disbelieved on vague or general grounds,<sup>3</sup> e. g., that he belongs to a particular class and witnesses of that class are not credible,<sup>4</sup> the Court commits an error of law which can be attacked in second appeal.

21. Contrary to usage having the force of law. — The expression “usage having the force of law” means a local or family usage as distinguished from the general law.<sup>1</sup> A usage is a rule obtaining in a particular family or in a particular local area in derogation of the ordinary law.<sup>2</sup> A decision on the question whether parties in a particular case belong to one system of law and not to another is not a decision on any usage.<sup>3</sup>

In order that a usage may have the force of law it is essential that it should be ancient, invariable, certain and reasonable.<sup>4</sup> Questions as to existence of a custom or usage having the force of law are generally questions of mixed law and fact,<sup>5</sup> the case, it was held that the High Court can see whether such a question was involved or not.<sup>20</sup>

In the Punjab, a question of custom cannot be taken up in second appeal without a certificate under Section 41 clause (3) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1918. See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>21</sup>

Notes 21-23

22. Failure to determine any issue of law or usage having the force of law.— Failure to determine an issue of law or usage having the force of law is a ground of second appeal.<sup>1</sup>

23. Errors or defects in procedure—General—Clause (c).—Section 99 ante, which applies to appeals from original decrees, provides that no decree shall be reversed or varied on account of any error, defect or irregularity not affecting the merits of the case. In other words, where an error or defect could not or does not affect the merits of the case, the Appellate Court cannot upset the decision of the original Court.<sup>1</sup> Section 100 clause (c) provides that an error or defect in procedure which is substantial enough to have possibly produced an error or defect in the decision of the case on the merits is a ground of second appeal.<sup>2</sup> The reason for the difference between the two Sections lies in the fact that a Court of second appeal cannot go into a question of fact as the first Appellate Court can, and that without doing so, it would not be possible to say in any given case whether the error or defect does or does not, in fact, affect the decision of the case on the merits.

The word 'procedure' as used in this clause must be understood in its most generic sense, including all the rules contained in the Civil Procedure Code or any other law regulating the investigation of cases by the Civil Courts.<sup>3</sup> An erroneous finding of fact is a different thing from an error or defect in procedure<sup>4</sup> and the fact that the lower Appellate Court believed witnesses on the one side in preference to those on the other is not an error of procedure<sup>5</sup> even if the reasons therefor are bad.<sup>6</sup>

(i) Basing the decision against the admission of parties<sup>7</sup> or on a point not

24. The errors or defects must be substantial and must be such as to possibly produce error or defect in the decision on the merits. — An error or defect in procedure will not be a ground of second appeal unless it is substantial and unless it is likely to have caused an error or defect in the decision of the case on the merits.<sup>1</sup> Thus, the judgment of the lower Appellate Court which is meagre and not in accordance with the rules is an irregularity; but unless the error is substantial and capable of affecting decision on the merits i. e., unless it can be shown that the said Court failed to apply its mind properly to the case or to the evidence or that the appellants are prejudiced in any way, the error will not be a ground of second appeal.<sup>2</sup>

In the following cases of errors or defects, it has been held that no second appeal will lie, unless it is shown that they have affected the decision on the merits —

Sections

Note 24

- (i) Basing decision on evidence recorded in another suit without recording reasons therefor.<sup>3</sup>
- (ii) Making a mistake regarding the applicability of a rule of law.<sup>4</sup>
- (iii) Misjoinder<sup>5</sup> or non-joinder<sup>6</sup> of parties.
- (iv) Misjoinder of claims or causes of action.<sup>7</sup> But where an objection on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action taken in first appeal is allowed and the suit is dismissed, a second appeal will lie.<sup>8</sup>
- (v) Omission to frame issues.<sup>9</sup>
- (vi) Failure to take down the deposition of a witness in the manner prescribed.<sup>10</sup>
- (vii) An irregular order of remand.<sup>11</sup>
- (viii) Where a big suit was taken up after Court hours and on defendants' vakil not being prepared to cross-examine the plaintiffs' witnesses the suit was decreed, the High Court declined to interfere in second appeal in the absence of an affidavit in the lower Appellate Court explaining the facts and showing how the appellant was prejudiced.<sup>12</sup>

The following errors or defects have been held to be no grounds of second appeal as they are not capable of affecting the decisions on the merits —

- (i) Omission to write a judgment with reasons for the decision before the decree is passed.<sup>13</sup>
- (ii) Omission to write judgment till after the decree is passed.<sup>14</sup>
- (iii) Basing decision on evidence recorded by predecessor-in-office.<sup>15</sup>
- (iv) Admitting document insufficiently stamped.<sup>16</sup>
- (v) Admitting secondary evidence of a lost deed not stamped.<sup>17</sup> But where a copy of the deposition of a dead person in a previous suit was admitted without proof that the copy was a correct one and where the original deposition was not in the records of the previous suit, it was held that such admission was a ground of second appeal especially when great weight had been attached to such evidence.<sup>18</sup>
- (vi) Omission to draw the witnesses' attention to previous contradictory statements.<sup>19</sup>

- (vii) Refusing to allow local investigation when both parties have gone into evidence.<sup>20</sup>
- (viii) Omission to employ a regular officer of Court for making local enquiry.<sup>21</sup> Where the appointment of an amin as commissioner to effect partition was acquiesced in, in the first Court, no objection to such appointment should be allowed to be taken in appeal. The allowing of such an objection in first appeal was held to be a ground of second appeal.<sup>22</sup>
- (ix) Hearing an appeal before the date fixed in the presence of the pleaders of the parties.<sup>23</sup>
- (x) Committing an error as to valuation not affecting the jurisdiction.<sup>24</sup>

The following have been held to be no errors or defects in procedure, much less substantial errors or defects —

- (i) Omission to make specific mention of a document in the judgment.<sup>25</sup>
- (ii) Refusal by the lower Appellate Court to take notice of a question not raised in the memorandum of appeal.<sup>26</sup> On the other hand, if the lower Appellate Court takes up any such question, it will be a ground of second appeal.<sup>27</sup>
- (iii) Dismissing a suit for misjoinder of parties.<sup>28</sup>
- (iv) Making a mistake in the matter of accounts<sup>29</sup> or making a mistake in the calculation of the claim decreed.<sup>30</sup>

25. Omission to frame or try issues of facts properly. — An omission to frame proper issues is an error or defect in procedure, and if it would have possibly affected the decision on the merits, it would be a ground of second appeal.<sup>1</sup> Where, however, the lower Court framed wrong issues but the findings were what they would have been if the correct issues had been framed, the High Court will not interfere inasmuch as the decision of the case on the merits has not been affected.<sup>2</sup>

Similarly, an objection that a matter was not raised in the pleadings and did not properly form the subject of an issue, will not be allowed to be taken in second appeal when the parties had let in evidence on the point and the matter had been argued in the lower Courts and no prejudice was established.<sup>3</sup>

The failure to try, determine and decide a material issue is a good ground of second appeal.<sup>4</sup>

26. Defective judgment. — Parties to a suit are entitled to the benefit of a proper discussion of the materials on record based upon a correct view of the law applicable to them.<sup>1</sup> In this view the Code has in O. 41 R. 31 prescribed that the judgment of the Appellate Court shall be in writing and shall state —

- (a) the points for determination ;
- (b) the decision thereon ;
- (c) the reasons for the decision ; and
- (d) where the decree appealed from is varied or reversed, the relief to which the appellant is entitled.

A judgment of the first Appellate Court which does not contain the said particulars is no judgment at all and will be set aside in second appeal.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where a suit was dismissed arbitrarily on the ground that the subject-matter involved was very small, the dismissal was set aside in second appeal.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, where the lower Appellate Court reversed the decision of the first Court merely saying that the evidence was meagre, a second appeal was held to lie.<sup>4</sup> But the mere fact that the judgment does not deal with all the evidence<sup>5</sup> or all the circumstances<sup>6</sup> relied upon by the first Court, or the fact that the discussion of the evidence is unsatisfactory,<sup>7</sup> or that the judgment contains certain mis-statements,<sup>8</sup> or that the judgment is written in a few lines,<sup>9</sup> is not a ground of second appeal if it does not affect the decision on the merits. Similarly the fact that the reasons for differing from the lower Court's judgment are not specifically stated in the judgment, is not in itself a ground of second appeal where the reasons are evident and it is otherwise clear that the evidence has been considered in arriving at the finding.<sup>10</sup>

The following have also been held to be defects in judgment which will justify a second appeal —

- (i) Where the judgment is uncertain in its meaning.<sup>11</sup>
- (ii) Where from the judgment it is difficult to discover what the conclusions are which have been arrived at on evidence.<sup>12</sup>
- (iii) Where a finding is vague and indefinite<sup>13</sup> or not legal.<sup>14</sup>
- (iv) Where the decision of a lower Appellate Court is based on an objection to court-fee taken for the first time before it.<sup>15</sup>
- (v) Where additional evidence is admitted in appeal without recording reasons as required by O. 41 R. 27.<sup>16</sup>

27. Admission or rejection of evidence. — The admission and rejection of documents is a matter of procedural law. In this sense the admissibility of evidence is question of law<sup>1</sup> and an error or defect therein is a ground of second appeal,<sup>2</sup> provided it is one which may possibly have affected the case on the merits.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where the objection to the admission of evidence is based on a formal defect,<sup>4</sup> or where the lower Court has arrived at the decision independently of the evidence wrongly admitted,<sup>5</sup> the High Court will not interfere in second appeal. Nor will it interfere where the improper admission of evidence objected to was due to the conduct of the party complaining of it.<sup>6</sup>

The improper rejection of evidence is an error in procedure which ordinarily is likely to affect the decision of the case on the merits, and is therefore a good ground of second appeal.<sup>7</sup> But where such a ground is taken, it will not be sufficient to merely file an affidavit stating that an oral request was made to examine witnesses and that it was refused. There must have been a written application made to the lower Court to that effect.<sup>8</sup> Where the first Court has recorded that a party has closed his case, or has made an admission, he cannot urge in appeal that the Court has refused to record the whole of his evidence without conclusively proving that the record is wrong.<sup>9</sup> Nor can he urge a plea that the lower Court has wrongly rejected evidence where such rejection was due to his own conduct.<sup>10</sup>

28. Question of law, question of fact and mixed questions of law and fact — General. — It has already been observed in Note 2 above that a second appeal will lie on the ground of an error of law or procedure and that it will not lie on any question of fact. Questions of law and fact are sometimes difficult to disentangle.<sup>1</sup> But broadly speaking, a question of fact may be defined as anything which is the subject of testimony, and a question of law as the general law of the land and general principles of law of which Courts will take judicial cognizance.<sup>2</sup> It will also be advantageous, in this connection, to refer to the definition of "fact" in the Evidence Act, 1872. Under Section 3 of that Act, "fact" means and includes —

1. any thing, state of things, or relation of things capable of being perceived by the senses;
2. any mental condition of which any person is conscious.

A question whether any such fact exists or does not exist is a question of fact, and a finding thereon is a finding of fact.<sup>3</sup> facts from which it is drawn. If not so drawn, it is an error of law. The question, therefore, whether an inference of fact is reasonable or is warranted by facts, is also a question of law.<sup>8</sup>

A mixed question of law and fact is one where in order to give a finding thereon it is necessary to answer a question of fact and also a question of law. Thus, as has already been seen in Note 21 ante, where the question is whether a valid custom exists, it is necessary to find, first, that there were a number of instances in which a course of conduct was followed, and secondly, that such instances are sufficient to establish the legal elements of a custom, namely, reasonableness, certainty and ancient origin. The first is a question of fact and the second, one of law. The question of custom is, therefore, one of mixed law and fact.<sup>9</sup> Another example of a mixed question of law and fact is the question of adverse possession.<sup>10</sup> A mixed question of law and fact will be open to second appeal where the lower Appellate Court has committed an error on the matter of law involved in the mixed question of law and fact, but not if it has committed an error only on the matter of fact so involved.<sup>11</sup>

as a ground of second appeal.<sup>4</sup>

The construction of a document as regards its legal effect will only arise where the document is an instrument of title or is a contract or is otherwise the direct foundation of legal rights.<sup>5</sup>

While the construction of a document by itself may be a question of law, it becomes a question of fact if it is one which is to be decided on the document together with other circumstances or extraneous evidence.<sup>6</sup> Where the nature and character of a document are clear and the only question in dispute is whether the real contract between the parties is something different from that contained in the document, no question of the construction of document is involved and no second appeal lies.<sup>7</sup> Similarly, where the words are clear and the only question is whether property has been sufficiently specified,<sup>8</sup> or whether a particular property is included in it,<sup>9</sup> the question involves no construction of documents. Again, where two interpretations are possible, the fact that the lower Appellate Court has adopted one rather than the other is no error of law or procedure and is no ground of second appeal.<sup>10</sup> Where the question is whether two documents executed on the same day are connected, so that one is a consideration for the other, the question is not one of interpretation of documents and if the lower Courts ascertain their connexion on evidence other than that of the documents themselves, the finding is one of fact which cannot be challenged in second appeal.<sup>11</sup>

A finding that a document is so worded as to obscure its meaning and prevent parties from understanding its nature or effect has been held to be a question of fact having nothing to do with construction of the document.<sup>12</sup>

A conclusion based on a misreading of a document is like one based on a misreading of evidence and as such is an error of law which can be corrected in second appeal.<sup>13</sup> See Note 13 above.

interpretation will be a question of law.<sup>5</sup> Similarly, the question whether a word has been used in a restricted sense is a question of law.<sup>6</sup>

It has been observed in Note 28 above that an inference of fact from proved facts is a question of fact, but that a legal inference from proved facts is one of law.<sup>1</sup> A Court is bound, in law, to draw the necessary inferences, whether of fact or of law, in coming to a conclusion on the question to be decided. A failure to draw any inference at all one way or the other is an error of law.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where only one inference is possible from proved facts, the failure to draw it is an error of law.<sup>3</sup> Where, however, one out of two possible inferences are drawn there is no error of law.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, drawing of an inference which is not improper,<sup>5</sup> or the omission to draw an inference which does not necessarily follow,<sup>6</sup> are not errors of law and are not grounds of second appeal.

A presumption of fact is really an inference of fact depending on the facts and circumstances of each case and where a Court draws such a presumption or refuses to draw it on a consideration of the facts of the case, it will not be interfered with in second appeal.<sup>7</sup> But where the Court fails to direct its mind to the question whether it should draw the presumption or not, it commits an error of law inasmuch as it is its legal duty to make up its mind to draw the presumption or not to draw it for reasons to be given by it.<sup>8</sup> A Court will also commit an error of law if it deals improperly with the presumptions which the law raises.<sup>9</sup> For instances of presumptions of law, see Sections 79 to 90 of the Evidence Act. Even in the case of a presumption of law where a Court "may presume" a particular thing, e. g., the genuineness of an ancient document under Section 90 of the Evidence Act, the matter is in the discretion of the dispute, the legal inference to be drawn from them is a question of law, which is open to examination in second appeal.<sup>5</sup> Even where the question is one of legal inference from the facts found, the High Court will not interfere unless such inference is obviously wrong or unless the finding could not be legally arrived at upon the evidence.<sup>6</sup> A finding on the question whether a person in possession is an ostensible owner or as to who is the true owner, is a finding of fact.<sup>7</sup>

37. Nature of property. — The question as to the nature of a particular property is one of fact unless it involves a consideration of legal principles, in which case it will be a question of mixed law and fact. Thus, the question whether a particular property is ancestral property<sup>1</sup> or a grove<sup>2</sup> or a "parjaub" land<sup>3</sup> or forms part of an estate<sup>4</sup> or is a separate sub-division<sup>5</sup> or was thrown into partnership assets<sup>6</sup> or is joint family property<sup>7</sup> or is moveable property,<sup>8</sup> is a pure question of fact. charitable purpose is a question of fact. The Oudh Chief Court has however held that such a question is one of law or at any rate a mixed question of law and fact.<sup>17</sup>

A finding as to ownership is a finding of fact<sup>18</sup> though where it depends upon legal presumptions, it will be a mixed question of law and fact.<sup>19</sup>

See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>21</sup>

38. Nature of contract or transaction.—Whether a contract can be implied from certain facts may be a question of fact or of law according to circumstances. If it is based on offer and acceptance, for instance, it is a question of fact. If it is a matter of inference of law to be drawn from proved facts or documents, it will be a question of law.<sup>1</sup> Thus, the question whether certain representations made amount to a warranty, is a question of law.<sup>2</sup> Even in the latter case if the presumption to be drawn for or against such contract is one depending upon the circumstances of the case, the lower Court's decision drawing or refusing to draw the presumption will be no error of law.<sup>3</sup>

The following findings with reference to contracts generally are findings of fact —

- (1) A finding as to whether a contract has been superseded or not.<sup>4</sup>
- (2) A finding as to the legal origin of a presumed contract.<sup>5</sup>
- (3) A finding as to whether time was of the essence of a contract.<sup>6</sup>
- (4) A finding as to whether a contract is hard and unconscionable or not binding.<sup>7</sup>
- (5) A finding as to who committed breach of a contract.<sup>8</sup>
- (6) A finding as to the damaged condition of goods in a contract for sale of goods.<sup>9</sup>
- (7) A finding as to whether a tender was or was not within time.<sup>10</sup>

Questions of waiver, acquiescence and estoppel are not questions of fact but inferences of law from facts proved and are therefore open to examination in second appeal.<sup>13</sup>

The question of negligence is a question of fact.<sup>13</sup> But whether the inference as to the negligence is warranted by the facts is a question of law.<sup>14</sup> Again, where there is a special legal significance attached by statute to the word "negligence," the question whether there has been such negligence is a question of law.<sup>15</sup> Similarly the legal standard of reasonable care required by Section 151 of the Contract Act,<sup>16</sup> or by Section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act, is a question of law.<sup>17</sup>

Whether misconduct can be inferred from a set of facts is a question of law.<sup>18</sup>

warrant the inference of a reasonable and probable cause is one of law.<sup>20</sup> The High Court of Patna<sup>21</sup> has, however, held that it is a question of law. The High Court of Lahore has expressed conflicting views.<sup>22</sup> It is submitted that the view of the Patna High Court is not correct. The attempt made in the Patna case to distinguish the Privy Council decision in Pestonji Modi v. Queen Insurance Co., I. L. Where the principles of law applicable to the question have been misconceived,<sup>3</sup> or where there has been a misapprehension of the evidence,<sup>4</sup> or an entire misconception of the real question that has to be tried,<sup>5</sup> there will be an error of law. in the lane,<sup>2</sup> and a finding that a latrine is not likely to cause pollution to the water of a well,<sup>3</sup> are all questions of fact.

47. Interpretation and applicability of the law. — Questions relating to the interpretation and applicability of law are obviously questions of law. Thus, the question whether correct tests have been applied in determining the infringement of legal rights,<sup>1</sup> or whether on the facts proved a relief prayed for should be granted,<sup>2</sup> or, whether in the circumstances of a case an appeal lies,<sup>3</sup> or as to what constitutes exclusion from a joint estate,<sup>4</sup> or whether an estoppel arises on the facts found,<sup>5</sup> or whether the requisites for res judicata are proved,<sup>6</sup> or whether on the facts proved a person can be called a "trespasser,"<sup>7</sup> or whether the occasion on which a libellous statement is alleged to have been made was a privileged one,<sup>8</sup> is a question of law. Similarly, the question whether a particular Section of an Act applies or not, to the facts proved in a case, is a question of law.<sup>9</sup> Thus, the question whether a stipulation in a deed is by way of penalty under Section 74 of the Indian Contract Act,<sup>10</sup> is a question of law.

The following questions have been held to be mixed questions of law and fact :

- (1) Whether an alteration in a document is 'material' or not.<sup>11</sup>
- (2) What is the reasonable time for presentment for payment of a bill of exchange.<sup>12</sup>
- (3) What are "necessaries" within the meaning of the term, under Section 68 of the Indian Contract Act.<sup>13</sup>
- (4) Whether there has been a proper investigation of a claim preferred under O. 21 R. 58 of the Code so as to make an order therein binding on the claimant.<sup>14</sup>
- (5) Whether a deposit of decretal amount by an unregistered purchaser of a transforable under-tenure is sufficient under the Sale of Under Tenures Act (VIII of 1865).<sup>15</sup>
- (6) Whether there was a partnership as defined in the Contract Act.<sup>16</sup>

51. Miscellaneous. — Representation.—It has been held by the High Court of Madras that, where the facts are known, the question whether a Hindu son was effectively represented in a former suit, is an inference of law from facts, and is therefore a question of law.<sup>1</sup> The High Court of Calcutta has, however, held that the question whether one heir of a tenant represents another or the tenancy, is a question of fact.<sup>2</sup>

52. Finding of fact binding in second appeal. — See also Section 107, Notes 12 to 15.

An error of fact is not one of the grounds of second appeal mentioned in Section 100. The reason, as has already been pointed out in Note 2, is that public interest requires that there should be an end to litigation even at the risk of occasional error, and Sections 100 and 101 taken together distinctly prohibit second appeals on questions of fact,<sup>1</sup> unless in the process of arriving at a finding of fact the Court has committed an error of law or a substantial error of procedure.<sup>3</sup> Thus, the High Court can neither investigate the grounds on which the finding has been arrived at<sup>3</sup> nor interfere with it.<sup>4</sup> It may be that the evidence is unsatisfactory or mentioned above, then the High Court cannot entertain a second appeal on the finding. The findings need not be concurrent.<sup>11</sup> The fact that the trial Court and the lower appellate Court have differed on the point is immaterial,<sup>12</sup> nor would the fact that the finding has been based by the lower Appellate Court on additional evidence recorded by it,<sup>13</sup> or on evidence treated as inadmissible by the trial Court,<sup>14</sup> give the High Court a right to interfere with it. Further, though the lower Appellate Court should not (ordinarily) reject witnesses accepted by the trial Court in respect of credibility, still the fact that it has rejected witnesses accepted by the trial Court will be no ground for interference on a question of fact, when the lower Appellate Court has given satisfactory reasons for doing so.<sup>15</sup>

It has also been held that if a finding of fact given by the trial Court has not been challenged in the first appeal, it cannot be challenged in second appeal on any ground.<sup>16</sup>

53. Finding of facts, when not binding in second appeal. — As observed in Notes 2 and 52 above, Sections 100 and 101 prohibit the entertainment of a second appeal on the ground of an error on a question of fact. But where in the process of arriving at the finding of fact the lower Appellate Court has committed an error of law such as has been referred to in Notes 13 to 20 or has adopted an erroneous or defective procedure such as has been referred to in Notes 23 to 27 above, the finding of fact will be open to attack on the ground of such error or defect.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a finding of fact can be

Even an error of law on one point is not, however, sufficient justification for re-opening a finding of fact which has been mainly decided by applying correct principles of law.<sup>21</sup>

Where a finding of fact has become irrelevant by reason of a change in the law at the time of the second appeal, the High Court can consider the evidence in the light of the altered aspect of the finding.<sup>22</sup>

54. Concurrent findings of fact. — It has been observed in Notes 52 and 53 that a finding of fact is conclusive in second appeal unless it is arrived at by committing an error of law or of procedure. The same principles apply with greater force in the case of concurrent findings of fact by two Courts. Such findings will therefore be conclusive in second appeal<sup>1</sup> unless an error of law or of procedure is committed in arriving at the findings.<sup>2</sup> Thus, if it is based on no evidence,<sup>3</sup> or on a misconstruction of documents,<sup>4</sup> or on inferences not warranted by the facts,<sup>5</sup> it can be set aside in second appeal, but it is for the appellant to show the existence of one or other of the circumstances mentioned above.<sup>6</sup> In H. A. Morine v. London Loan Assets, Ltd.,<sup>7</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows : "A litigant who seeks before a second appellate tribunal to reverse findings of fact which have been arrived at by the trial Judge and have, after consideration, been confirmed on appeal, comes always with a very heavy burden upon his shoulders."

Sections
Notes 54-55

The circumstance that the lower Appellate Court and the trial Court, in arriving at the same conclusion, have not been influenced by the same considerations, will not detract from the binding nature of the concurrent finding.<sup>8</sup> But if the lower Appellate Court does not deal with the question and fails to give independent opinion thereon, then the finding is not "concurrent."<sup>9</sup>

55. New case — General. — Parties are bound by the case which arises on their pleadings and which has been enquired into by the trial Court.<sup>1</sup> They should not be allowed to depart from the facts and grounds of relief originally pleaded by them,<sup>2</sup> or to change their case and present it in an entirely new shape.<sup>3</sup> If there is any defect in their case it is not the function of the High Court to remedy it.<sup>4</sup> Consequently, a new plea not being one of pure law, which is inconsistent with,<sup>5</sup> or different from,<sup>6</sup> the one set up in the Courts below, will not be allowed in second appeal.

Even in the case of new pleas which are in the nature of additional pleas, the general rule is that the parties are not entitled to relief on facts or grounds not stated or referred to in their pleadings;<sup>7</sup> and unless upon very strong grounds, or under very special circumstances,<sup>8</sup> a party will not be allowed to urge them in second appeal.<sup>9</sup> The same principle will apply even if the new plea is in the nature of an alternative case arising out of the lower Appellate Court's decision.<sup>10</sup> However, it has been held that an alternative title not urged before, can nevertheless be allowed if the facts are so plain that it will be doing an injustice to the party to deny him a right to which he is entitled on that basis.<sup>11</sup> A new prayer may, however, be allowed if it naturally arises from the findings of the lower Appellate Court,<sup>12</sup> but not if it would change the frame or nature of the suit.<sup>13</sup> A prayer for consequential relief may also be allowed if

In Ram Kinker Rai v. Tufani Ahir, a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court has held that a point not taken in the Court below, whether the omission is by the appellant in that Court, or whether the respondent failed to support his decree by taking the point, will not be permitted to be raised, except possibly—

- (i) where the point may be described as involving a question of public policy, e. g.,
  - (1) involving jurisdiction,
  - (2) involving the principle of res judicata,
  - (3) when the decision of the point would prevent future litigation;
- (ii) where the plaint discloses no cause of action, or the written statement no ground of defence, it is not a ground for permitting a new point to be argued merely because—
  - (1) it was omitted by oversight in the Court below, or
  - (2) the materials are all on record and the answer to the point is plain.<sup>19</sup>

The Full Bench decision does not however preclude the Court itself from deciding the case on such new point.<sup>20</sup>

The following are some of the objections which under the principles stated above, were not allowed to be raised for the first time in second appeal :—

- (1) Objections to the admission of evidence<sup>21</sup> or to the reception of secondary evidence<sup>22</sup> unless such objection is one which could not have been cured even in the first instance.<sup>23</sup> Further, an erroneous omission to object to evidence in the trial Court will not make an irrelevant evidence relevant in second appeal.<sup>24</sup>

58. Plea going to the root of the case. — It follows from what has been said in Note 56 above that a plea of law which goes to the root of a case can be taken up even for the first time in second appeal,<sup>1</sup> if it arises from the evidence on record<sup>2</sup> and does not depend on other facts or further enquiry on facts.<sup>3</sup> But such a plea will not necessarily be allowed in all cases. Where the objection is one which, if it had been taken in the lower Courts, might have been cured, it will not be allowed to be taken for the first time in second appeal.<sup>4</sup> Thus, a plea of want of cause of action which is merely technical and capable of being cured if the objection had been taken in the lower Courts cannot be allowed to be raised in second appeal.<sup>5</sup> But where the plea is one which is fundamental and incurable, it can be allowed to be raised for the first time in second appeal.<sup>6</sup> Thus, an objection that the appellant in the lower Appellate Court or in the lower Appellate Court, as the case may be,<sup>4</sup> or where parties conduct the case in the lower Courts as if certain facts are admitted,<sup>5</sup> or where the findings of the trial Court are not challenged in the first Appellate Court,<sup>6</sup> such points will be taken to be abandoned or waived and cannot be raised in second appeal. Similarly, objections as to the admissibility or exclusion of evidence if not raised in the trial Court or in the lower Appellate Court cannot be raised in second appeal.<sup>7</sup> But the mere fact that the lower Appellate Court has not referred to a certain point does not necessarily mean that the point was abandoned.<sup>8</sup>

62. Who may appeal and who may not. — The matter has been fully discussed in Notes 6, 7 and 8 of Section 96 ante. The questions as to who may and who may not prefer a second appeal will be governed by the same principles.

63. Remand. — Where, in appeal from an order of remand the High Court determines a question of law, the decision of the question will be final for all purposes and in any appeal that may be subsequently made to the High Court.<sup>1</sup> See also O. 41, Rr. 23 and 25.

64. Ex parte appellate decree is subject to second appeal. — Under the Code of 1859 there was a conflict of views on the question whether a second appeal lay against ex parte decrees passed in first appeals. Some decisions held that the only remedy was to proceed under Section 119 of the said Code (corresponding to O. 9 R. 13 of the present Code).<sup>1</sup> Others held that a second appeal was also competent.<sup>2</sup>

This conflict has been set at rest by the last paragraph of Section 584 of the Code of 1882 re-embodied as sub-section (2) to Section 100 and there is now no doubt that a second appeal from an ex parte appellate decree is competent.<sup>3</sup>

1. Scope and object of the Section.—Section 27 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887) enacts that where a suit of a small cause nature is tried by a Court of Small Causes, its decree or order is final, i. e., no appeal lies therefrom. Section 37 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882, enacts a similar provision. This Section provides that where a suit of a small cause nature is tried not by a Small Cause Court, but by a Court in its ordinary jurisdiction, the decree or order is not open to a second appeal.<sup>1</sup> "The object of this Section," said White, C. J., in Sundaram Aiyar v. Sennia Naicken,<sup>2</sup> "is to take away the right of second or special appeal where the value of the subject-matter of the original suit does not exceed Rs. 500 in the case of all suits which as regards their subject-matter would lie within the jurisdiction of Courts of Small Causes but which are outside that jurisdiction by reason of the amount claimed being beyond the pecuniary limit of the Small Cause jurisdiction." Similarly, if an order is passed by the executing Court in execution of a decree in a suit of a small cause nature, the order is not open to second appeal though it may be within Section 47.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that when no second appeal will lie in the suit itself no such appeal will lie from an order in execution of the decree in such suit.<sup>4</sup>

This Section will apply even where the suit has been referred to arbitration.<sup>5</sup> But it does not apply to an order refusing to re-admit a first appeal dismissed for default as an appeal lies from such order under O. 43 R. 1 (t).<sup>6</sup>

2. Suits of the nature cognizable by Courts of Small Causes. — Every suit is of a small cause nature except those that are excepted from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes, by the second schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887.<sup>1</sup> The test therefore for finding out whether a particular suit is or is not of the nature cognizable by Courts of Small Causes is to see whether it is excepted under that schedule.<sup>2</sup> Where it is not so excepted and the value of the suit is less than Rs. 500, no second appeal will lie from the decree.<sup>3</sup> It is the character of the suit as originally framed and presented to the Court that will determine the nature of the suit,<sup>4</sup> and not the defence which may be set up,<sup>5</sup> or the character which it may assume in the course of, and after the trial by operation of findings by the Court.<sup>6</sup> As to whether the value of the suit is less than Rs. 500 or not is to be determined on the allegations in the plaint<sup>7</sup> and not upon the nature of the defence pleaded or of the relief granted.<sup>8</sup> The mere fact that a Small Cause Court returns a plaint under Section 23 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887, to be presented to another Court on the ground that it involves a question of title will not alter the nature of the suit for the purposes of this section.<sup>9</sup> Nor would the nature of the suit be affected by the fact that the Small Cause Court decides a question of title incidentally raised.<sup>10</sup>

If a claim is partly within the jurisdiction of Small Cause Courts and partly within the jurisdiction of the regular Courts, the plaintiff is entitled to file a suit in the regular Courts,<sup>11</sup> but a collateral claim to which the plaintiff is not entitled, but asked for in the plaint will not deprive the suit of the character of a small cause.<sup>12</sup>

See also Notes 5 to 17 infra.

3. Effect of trying small cause suits as ordinary suits. — If instead of trying a small cause suit in a summary way it is tried in the ordinary manner as a regular suit, the mistake will not alter the character of the suit which will nevertheless be subject to all the incidents of a small cause suit.<sup>1</sup> Therefore no decree or order in such a suit will admit of a second appeal.<sup>2</sup>

4. Suit includes execution proceedings. — The term suit in this Section includes execution proceedings also,<sup>1</sup> so that an order passed in execution of a decree in a suit cognizable by a Small Cause Court is not subject to second appeal.<sup>2</sup> Where a Small Cause Court decree is transferred from the small cause side to the regular side for execution and an order is passed in execution, it may be open to a first appeal under the provisions of Section 42 of the Code but a second appeal will be barred under this Section.<sup>3</sup> The test in all cases is what was the nature of the suit, the decree in which is attempted to be executed and not the nature of the proceedings in execution<sup>4</sup> or the actual amount affected by the order sought to be appealed against.<sup>5</sup> So where execution was applied for in a Munsif's Court for Rs. 422-14-0 the value of the suit being above Rs. 500, it was held that a second appeal lay.<sup>6</sup>

5. Suits for accounts. — See Articles 29, 30 and 31 of the Second Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887.

A suit for accounts is not one cognizable by a Court of Small Causes.<sup>1</sup> A suit is one for accounts which seeks for a decree ordering the defendant to render accounts or which involves investigation of accounts between the parties.<sup>2</sup> A suit for a definite sum

8. Suits for maintenance. — See also Article 38 of the Second Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, IX of 1887.

Section 102
Notes 8-9

Before the date of the present Act, suits for maintenance based on a contract or bond or family arrangement or agreement, could be brought as a small cause.<sup>1</sup> Such a suit will now be barred under Article 38 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887, whether the maintenance is claimed under a will or by agreement or on a personal obligation.<sup>2</sup> But if the right to maintenance has been recognized and does not arise for determination, a claim for arrears will be a suit for money and hence a small cause.<sup>3</sup> A suit must, if it is to be excepted under Art. 38 of the Small Cause Courts Act from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes, be in substance a suit for maintenance.<sup>4</sup> Thus, a suit by a guardian of a minor's person against the property guardian for the amount payable to the minor for his maintenance can be brought in a Small Cause Court, as the payment is from his own property.<sup>5</sup>

9. Suits relating to marriage. — Suits for compensation for breach of contract of betrothal or promise of marriage are not cognizable by Small Cause Courts and are excluded expressly by Art. 35 of the Act IX of 1887. The word "compensation" denotes loss sustained by the plaintiff in consequence of the articles got ready for the marriage being wasted or damaged, and denotes also the costs of presents or ornaments.<sup>1</sup> It has the same meaning as in Section 73, Contract Act, 1872, and includes a suit for return of presents or ornaments given in contemplation of marriage.<sup>2</sup>

10. Suits for mesne profits. — In order that a person in wrongful possession may be liable for mesne profits, it is not necessary that he should have actually received any profits at all. Even if he might have received with due diligence any profits, he would be liable.<sup>1</sup> The Calcutta High Court has held<sup>2</sup> that a suit for mesne profits is not therefore a suit “for the profits of immovable property belonging to the plaintiff which have been wrongfully received by the defendant” within the meaning of Art. 31 of Act IX of 1887, and is therefore a small cause. The Madras High Court has, on the other hand, held<sup>3</sup> that since an account has, in some sense to be taken in ascertaining the amount of mesne profits, the suit will fall under the said Article and is therefore not a small cause. The Bombay,<sup>4</sup> Rangoon<sup>5</sup> and Nagpur<sup>6</sup> High Courts have also taken a similar view. Where, however, the claim is for a definite sum of money as mesne profits, it will not, as has been seen in Note 5 above, be a suit for an account and will not be covered by Article 31, and will, therefore, be cognizable by a Court of Small Causes.<sup>7</sup> The Allahabad High Court has taken a contrary view.<sup>8</sup>

The words wrongfully received in Article 31 mean receipt of profits under a claim of title that cannot lawfully be substantiated. Thus, a suit by a co-sharer for his share of the profits recovered by another co-sharer does not fall under the Article.<sup>9</sup>

11. Suits for money. — All suits for money whether had and received,<sup>1</sup> or payable under an award,<sup>2</sup> or on contracts generally,<sup>3</sup> or wrongfully collected and retained

18. Appeal from order of remand in suits of small cause nature. — No appeal lies against an order of remand made in a suit of a small cause nature.<sup>1</sup> This is also indicated by O. 43 R. 1 (u) which enacts that an appeal will lie from an order of remand only when an appeal will lie from the decree of the Appellate Court. The undermentioned cases<sup>2</sup> are no longer law in view of the said provision in the new Code.

19. Appeal from order of review in suits of small cause nature. — Where an Appellate Court passes a decree on review in a suit of a small cause nature, no second appeal lies against that decree on the merits though an appeal will lie against the order granting the review under O. 43 R. 1 (w) and O. 47 R. 7.<sup>1</sup>

1. Amendments subsequent to 1908.

2. Scope and object of the Section.

1. Amendments subsequent to 1908. — The words "which has not been determined . . . . . Section 100" were substituted by Act VI of 1926 for the words "but not determined by the lower Appellate Court." See Note 2 below.

2. Scope and object of the Section. — This Section enables the High Court in second appeal to determine a question of fact, if there is sufficient evidence on the record, in two cases —

- (1) where the lower Appellate Court has failed to determine an issue of fact, and
- (2) where it has determined an issue of fact wrongly by reason of any illegality, omission, error or defect referred to in sub-section (1) of Section 100.

There was no such provision in the old Code. It was therefore held that though the lower Appellate Court had not determined an issue of fact and though there was sufficient evidence on the record, the High Court could not itself determine it but could only remand the case for such determination.<sup>1</sup> The present Section negatives this view and enables the High Court to determine the issue itself in such cases.<sup>2</sup> This power applies also to cases where a case is remanded under O. 41 R. 25 and the lower Appellate Court fails to give the findings or its findings are incomplete.<sup>3</sup> But where the necessary finding has actually been given it cannot be said that it was not given merely because a correct issue was not framed.<sup>4</sup>

As the Section stood before its amendment by Act VI of 1926, the High Court could determine any issue of fact necessary which had not been determined by the lower Appellate Court.

4. ('97) 21 Bom 325 (327).

Where the lower Appellate Court did determine an issue of fact but it was vitiated by an illegality such as an improper admission or exclusion of evidence, etc., there was a conflict of decisions as to whether the High Court could itself determine the issue of fact.<sup>5</sup> The amendment of 1926 now makes it clear that the High Court can itself determine the issue of fact, under the said circumstances.<sup>6</sup> The Calcutta High Court, however, has held in the undermentioned decisions<sup>7</sup> that where the lower Appellate Court has relied on inadmissible evidence as also other evidence in arriving at its finding, the High Court has, generally, no power to decide whether the evidence other than that which has been improperly admitted warrants the finding of the lower Court and that the proper course for the High Court in such cases is to remand the case to the lower Court. No reference is made in the above decisions to the amendment of this Section in 1926 and it is submitted that they cannot be accepted as correct.

1. Legislative changes. — This Section introduces some material changes in the law as laid down in Section 588 of the old Code.<sup>1</sup>

Section 104 — Note 1

1. ('21) AIR 1921 P C 80 (82, 83) : 48 Cal 481, (489) : 46 Ind App 76 (P C). (Vide cls. 2 to 5, 7, 11, 12, 13, 18, 19 and 22 of S. 588, which are omitted in the present Section and notes to the new Sections corresponding to the old Sections referred to in those clauses—Vide S. 104 (1) cls. (b), (d), (e), (f), (ff) and O. 43 R. 1 cls. (f), (m), (n), (o), (v), and (w) and notes thereon.)

2. Clause (i) of Section 588 of the old Code providing for an appeal against an order under Section 20 of the old Code is omitted as that Section itself has been omitted.
3. Clause (17) of the old Code dealing with orders in insolvency proceedings has been omitted, as provisions have been made therefor in the Provincial Insolvency Act.
4. Sub-section (2) repealing the last paragraph of the old Section makes it clear that what is prohibited is only a right of further appeal and not a right of revision or review.
5. Clause (ff) and the proviso to the Section have been newly added to the Section by Act IX of 1922.

2. Scope and applicability of the Section. — The Section is restrictive in character. By sub-section (1) it limits a party's right of appeal against an order to the cases specified in clauses (a) to (i) and by sub-section (2) that right is further restricted to only one appeal.<sup>1</sup>

Where an order is one not specified in the Section but is a "decree" within the meaning of Section 2 clause (2) of the Code,<sup>2</sup> or a right of appeal therefrom is expressly provided for elsewhere in the Code or by any other law for the time being in force,<sup>3</sup> this Section will, of course, have no application. Where, however, an order is one specified in this Section, and is also appealable as a "decree" or under other express provision of law, it has been held that the right of appeal is governed only by the provisions of this Section, and that consequently no second appeal will lie in such cases.

Illustration

A applied under the Code of 1882 for setting aside an execution sale on the ground of fraud. His application was dismissed. An appeal against that order was also dismissed; held that a second appeal lay. The reason is that under the old Code an order refusing to set aside an execution sale on the ground of fraud was not appealable under Section 588 clause (16) (now O. 43 R. (1) but was a "decree" under Section 244 (now Section 47), and therefore a second appeal lay.<sup>4</sup>

Suppose a similar application is made under the new Code which provides for an appeal against an order refusing to set aside a sale on the ground of fraud also. Such an order is appealable under Section 104 and O. 43 R. 1 as an order and therefore no second appeal will lie, though the order may be one within Section 47.<sup>5</sup> It may here be noted that a decree as defined by Section 2 excludes an order appealable as an order even though it is within Section 47.<sup>6</sup>

The Section being a disabling one must, under general principles of interpretation, be construed strictly.

3. Retrospective effect. — A disabling provision of law such as this Section cannot be so interpreted as to have a retrospective effect.<sup>1</sup> This is also expressly made clear by Section 154 of the Code which saves rights of appeal accrued before the commencement of this Code.

4. Non-appealable orders. — No appeal lies from any order except as provided for by this Section. In other words, orders [not being "decrees" within Section 2 (2)] not falling within clauses (a) to (i) of this Section nor within O. 43 R. 1 are not appealable.<sup>1</sup> such orders ceases with the disposal of the suit or appeal<sup>2</sup> according to the Calcutta High Court but the Allahabad High Court takes a contrary view.<sup>3</sup> However, under Section 105 (2) they may be challenged in an appeal from the final decree.

5. "Save as otherwise expressly provided in the body of this Code or by any law for the time being in force." — These words are new. The former Code did not provide any exception as to orders under other laws, such as the Letters Patent, the Guardians and Wards Act, etc., which contain provisions as to rights of appeal against orders passed thereunder. And there was consequently a conflict of opinion as to which provision was to prevail.<sup>1</sup>

This defect has now been remedied by the introduction of the saving clause.

6. Letters Patent Appeals. — The conflict referred to in the previous Note arose chiefly in connexion with Letters Patent Appeals.

Under the Letters Patent certain orders are appealable when they come within the definition of the word "judgment."<sup>1</sup> The High Courts of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay held that such appeals were not barred by Section 588 clause 16<sup>2</sup> following the decision of the Privy Council in Hurish Chunder v. Kali Sundari.<sup>3</sup> The Allahabad High Court took a contrary view distinguishing the said Privy Council case.<sup>4</sup>

The introduction of the saving clause as already mentioned sets at rest the conflict of views and it is now clear that an appeal may lie from an order under the Letters Patent, although such order may be unappealable under this Section.<sup>5</sup>

The Allahabad High Court has, however, held even in a case under the new Code that Section 104 would bar an appeal under the Letters Patent if the order

final decree is interlocutory—No appeal lies from such order.)

appealed against is unappealable under Section 104.<sup>6</sup> The decision simply purports to follow the Full Bench case of Mohamed v. Ishanullah<sup>7</sup> which was a case under the old Code and makes no reference to the change of the law in the Code. The decision does not seem to be a sound one.

Notes 6-9

Suppose, now, that A prefers an appeal under this Section to the High Court from an order appealable under this Section, and the High Court passes a judgment therein. Does a further or second appeal lie against that judgment on the ground that it is also a "judgment" within the meaning of the Letters Patent? In an earlier decision of the Allahabad High Court it was held that in such a case no further appeal will lie.<sup>8</sup> The decision was based on the ground that sub-section (2) of Section 104 expressly bars such an appeal and there is no saving clause such as has been inserted in sub-section (1). But this view has been dissented from in a recent decision of the Allahabad High Court<sup>9</sup> which proceeds on the ground that by virtue of the provisions of Section 4 ante, the right of appeal under the Letters Patent is unaffected by Section 104 sub-section 2.

7. Execution proceedings. — Orders passed in execution proceedings, though in many cases fall within Section 47 of the Code, may in some cases fall outside its scope, e. g., orders passed on objections by third parties to attachment or delivery of possession in execution of decrees.<sup>1</sup>

Where an order in execution is specified as appealable under this Section, then, as has been seen already,<sup>2</sup> there will be only one appeal notwithstanding the fact that the order falls also within the scope of Section 2 (2) of the Code.

Where an order in execution neither falls under Section 47 nor is specified in this Section, then there will be no appeal at all.<sup>3</sup>

An appeal against an order in execution which is appealable under this Section is not barred by the mere fact that the order is only a preliminary one, and that a final order has been passed at the time of appeal.<sup>4</sup>

8. Appeals to Privy Council. — Sub-section (1) saves rights of appeal "expressly provided in the body of this Code." Section 109 which gives a right of appeal to the Privy Council from certain decrees and final orders is one of such provisions, and consequently this Section does not govern appeals to the Privy Council.<sup>1</sup>

9. Revision or review. — As has already been seen in Note 1 above, the restriction in sub-section (2) is to prevent only a further appeal and not to bar a right of revision or review. The word "final" which had been used in the last paragraph of Section 588 of the old Code was held not to bar a right of review or revision.<sup>1</sup> The

Section 104 possibility of any doubt in this matter has now been removed by the insertion of the

10. Order superseding arbitration — Clause (a).—The order of supersession, in order to be appealable, must be one based on the ground mentioned in the clause, namely that the award was not completed within the period allowed by the Court. An order of supersession, therefore, on any other ground (e. g., refusal of the arbitrators to act<sup>1</sup>) is not within this Section.<sup>2</sup> This clause applies only to an order superseding an award; it does not apply to an order refusing to supersede an award.<sup>3</sup> The clause does not apply to an order refusing to file an award.<sup>4</sup>

11. Order on award stated as special case — Clause (b).— For the statement of a special case by the arbitrators, see Paragraph 11 of Schedule II. An award cannot be said to be stated in the form of a special case, where the arbitrators take the opinion of the Court after submitting their own opinions.<sup>1</sup>

12. Order modifying or correcting an award — Clause (c).— This clause is new. As to the circumstances under which awards can be modified or corrected, see Paragraph 12, Schedule II.

The right of appeal exists only where the award is modified or corrected.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a disallowance of costs allowed by the award,<sup>2</sup> an amendment of the award<sup>3</sup> and an interpolation in the award by the arbitrators after the same is signed,<sup>4</sup> are all modifications or corrections of the award and an appeal will therefore lie.<sup>5</sup>

The whole award cannot, however, be called into question, but only the portions modified or corrected.<sup>6</sup>

The clause confers a right of appeal against an order modifying or correcting an award and it is in respect of such order that a second appeal is prohibited under sub-section 2. But, where an appeal is filed against the decree passed in accordance with the modified award, a second appeal will lie.<sup>7</sup>

13. Order filing or refusing to file agreement to refer to arbitration — Clause (d).— See also Para. 17 of Schedule II. This clause is new. Under the old Code, there was a conflict of views whether such an order was appealable.<sup>1</sup> The present

1. Note:—Under the old Code such an order was appealable as a decree. However the conflict was whether such an order amounted to a decree. In the following decisions it was held that it amounted to a decree :

Code clearly allows an appeal therefrom. This clause applies only to agreements to refer disputes about which no suit is pending. An application to file an agreement to refer a dispute pendente lite is outside the scope of this Section, and is not appealable under this clause.<sup>2</sup>

Again, the order must be one filing or refusing to file the agreement. An order neither rejecting nor accepting the agreement but declaring it invalid is not one within this Section.<sup>3</sup> Refusal to file an agreement need not necessarily be on merits; it may be on the preliminary question of jurisdiction.<sup>4</sup>

14. Order staying or refusing to stay suit—Clause (e). — The order referred to in this clause is the one passed under Paragraph 18 of Schedule II.

Even where the Court refuses to stay on the ground that there was no agreement, this clause has been held to apply.<sup>1</sup>

But the orders must have been passed under the Second Schedule of the Code. An order under Section 9 of the Arbitration Act is not appealable under this clause.<sup>2</sup>

15. Order filing or refusing to file private award — Clause (f). — This clause is new and refers to orders passed under Paragraph 21 of Schedule II. It does not apply to proceedings under Section 11 of the Arbitration Act.<sup>1</sup> Under the old Code there was a conflict of authorities as to whether such an order was appealable as a decree and as to what the procedure was when an objection was raised to the filing of an award without the intervention of the Court.<sup>2</sup> The present clause sets the conflict at rest by expressly making the order appealable.<sup>3</sup>

Notes 15-17

The right of appeal is not taken away by the fact that a decree has been passed in pursuance of the award,<sup>4</sup> or that the filing of the award and the decree were both passed by the same order,<sup>5</sup> or that the decree passed in accordance with the award has to be set aside.<sup>6</sup>

But the right of appeal under this clause is distinct from the right of appeal against the decree passed in pursuance of the award.<sup>7</sup>

When the Court simply passes a decree in accordance with the award without specifically passing any order allowing or disallowing the objections thereto, it will be deemed to be an order filing the award<sup>8</sup> and the appeal against the decree will be treated as an appeal against the order.<sup>9</sup> An order rejecting an award on the ground of misconduct of the arbitrators is not one filing or refusing to file an award and is not within the Section.<sup>10</sup> Similarly, an order remitting an award for making a fresh award in accordance with the agreement of reference is not a final order of refusal to file an award and is not appealable, as this clause refers only to final orders.<sup>11</sup>

This clause applies only to arbitration without the intervention of the Court.<sup>12</sup> There is a conflict of views as to whether it applies to a refusal to file an award under the Arbitration Act though the same may be without the intervention of the Court. The Calcutta and Lahore High Courts and the Lower Burma Chief Court and the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court hold that this clause refers only to proceedings under Para. 20 and other Paragraphs of the Second Schedule of the Code,<sup>13</sup> while the Allahabad High Court holds that the application of the clause is not so limited.<sup>14</sup>

16. Order under Section 35A — Clause (ff). — This clause, the proviso to Section 104 clause (1), and Section 35A were newly introduced by Act IX of 1922.

17. Order under Section 95 — Clause (g). — Section 588 of the old Code provided for an appeal against an order for compensation under Section 497 for obtaining an injunction on insufficient grounds, and not for obtaining an improper arrest or attachment, and there was a conflict of opinion as to whether an appeal lay from an order of improper attachment.<sup>1</sup> The present Section read with Section 95 now shows that an order for compensation for obtaining an improper arrest or attachment is also appealable.<sup>2</sup>

Section 104
Notes 17-20

An "order under Section 95" will include an order either granting compensation or refusing it<sup>3</sup> and, in either case, will not be open to second appeal.<sup>4</sup>

Where an order under Section 95 is passed by a Court of Small Causes, no appeal will lie against the order. The reason is that on general principles, no appeal will lie from an order passed in a suit, in which the decree itself is unappealable.<sup>5</sup>

18. Order imposing fine, etc. — Clause (h). — This clause applies only to orders made under the provisions of the Code<sup>1</sup> and only where they are positive orders imposing a fine or directing an arrest. The following are some of the orders contemplated by this clause —

- (1) Orders under Order 16 Rules 10 and 12 against a refractory witness.<sup>2</sup>
- (2) Order under Order 38 Rule 1 for arrest before judgment.
- (3) Order under Order 39 Rule 2, sub-clause (3) against a party for disobedience of an injunction: vide Order 16 Rules 10, 12, 17 and 21; Order 38 Rules 1 and 4 and Order 39 Rule 2 (3).

(Note. — This clause and O. 43 R. 1 (r) overlap each other to the extent that both allow an appeal against an order directing detention of any person in civil prison.)

A negative order of refusal is not appealable under this clause. Nor is an order for arrest or detention appealable under this clause if it is in execution of a decree.<sup>3</sup> But such an order may be appealable as a decree under Section 47.<sup>4</sup>

19. Order appealable under Rules — Clause (i). — See Order 43 Rule 1.<sup>1</sup>

20. Proviso to sub-section (1). — The effect of this proviso is that an appeal against an order under Section 35A lies only when the order is one awarding compensatory costs. The reason is that it is only in such cases that an appeal will be possible on the limited grounds specified in the proviso. When the order is one refusing to award compensatory costs, no appeal will lie.<sup>1</sup>

1. Legislative changes. —

1. Section 591 of the old Code contained the words "any such order" after the word "irregularity." This gave rise to a contention that the Section was applicable to non-appealable orders only. That contention was negatived by the Privy Council.<sup>1</sup> The word "such" has now been omitted in order to make this view clear.

2. Sub-section (2) is new. See Note 8 infra.

The above alterations do not effect any material changes in the law as it stood before.<sup>2</sup>

2. Scope and object of the Section. — Under Section 96, every decree is appealable save where otherwise expressly provided in the body of the Code or by any other law for the time being in force. No order is, however, appealable except those specified in Section 104.<sup>1</sup> Section 105 enacts that every order whether appealable or not, except an order of remand, can be attacked in an appeal from the final decree on the ground —

(1) that there is an error, defect or irregularity in the order; and

(2) that such error, defect or irregularity affects the decision of the case.

In Moheshur Singh v. The Bengal Government,<sup>2</sup> the Privy Council observed as follows :

"We are not aware of any law or regulation prevailing in India which renders it imperative upon the suitor to appeal from every interlocutory order, by which he may conceive himself aggrieved, under the penalty, if he does not do so, of forfeiting for ever the benefit of the consideration of the Appellate Court. No authority or precedent has been cited in support of such a proposition, and we cannot conceive that anything would be more detrimental to the expeditious administration of justice than the establishment of a rule which would impose upon the suitor the necessity of so appealing; whereby, on the one hand he might be harassed with endless expense and delay and on the other inflict upon his opponent similar calamities."

This is the principle on which the Section has been based.<sup>3</sup>

This Section and Section 99 are not mutually destructive as the latter Section deals only with an error, defect or irregularity not affecting the merits of the case while this Section deals with any error, etc., affecting the decision of the case.<sup>6</sup>

3. Order must be one under the Code. — The word "order" in the Section refers to orders passed under the Code.<sup>1</sup> The words "save as otherwise expressly provided" contemplate appeals from orders of a character provided for elsewhere than in the Civil Procedure Code and include appeals allowed under other laws.<sup>2</sup>

4. "Where a decree is appealed from." — It is only where the erroneous or defective order has been passed by the very Court by which the decree appealed from has been passed that the order can be attacked in the appeal. Thus, an erroneous order of remand passed by an Appellate Court cannot be attacked in an appeal from a decree of the trial Court passed on such remand.<sup>1</sup> There is a conflict of opinion as to whether an appeal will lie from a decree where the only ground of appeal is the defect, error or irregularity of an order made in the suit. The High Courts of Bombay,<sup>2</sup> Calcutta<sup>3</sup> and Madras<sup>4</sup> have held that such an appeal will lie. The High Court of Allahabad has held in the undermentioned cases<sup>5</sup> a contrary view. In a recent case, however, the same High Court has expressed the same view as that of the other High Courts.<sup>6</sup>

The ground of objection must be set out in the memorandum of appeal, otherwise it will not be entertained at the hearing of the appeal.<sup>7</sup>

The principle of this Section would apply not only to decrees and interlocutory orders but also to orders and interlocutory orders which lead up to the final order.<sup>8</sup> In the undermentioned case,<sup>9</sup> however, the Allahabad High Court took a contrary view and held that it is only when a decree is appealed from that prior orders passed by the Court from whose decree the appeal has been passed can be questioned. It is submitted that in view of the express provisions of Section 108 clause (b) infra, the above decision does not seem to be correct.

5. Error, defect or irregularity. — The error, defect or irregularity referred to in the Section must be one in law or procedure and not in matters of fact.<sup>1</sup>

6. "Affecting the decision of the case." — An error, defect or irregularity in any order may be raised as a ground of objection in an appeal from the decree if such error, etc., should have affected the decision of the case.<sup>1</sup> The words "affecting
